Denies Implication Of Mais, Legenza

But Prescott Reveals That Marie McKeever Is Being Sought.

A witness who saw two white men shoot and kill Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route agent, near Takoma Park, Md., October 23, has been found, State's Attorney Stedman Prescott of Montgomery County announced yesterday.

Prescott added that he was confident he knew who did the shooting and that a Nation-wide search for the two men is under way.

According to Prescott, the witness did not see a car in the neighborhood of the shooting and could throw no light on the manner in which the killers escaped.

Witness' Identity Guarded.

The two killers stood under a tree at the home of "Mickey" McDonald, alleged gambler, one of them with a shotgun and one with a pistol. Two loads from the shotgun and a bullet from the pistol struck Wilson.

Although the witness, whose identity was being carefully guarded, did not see a third man, Prescott said he believed another man with an automobile was in the neighborhood.

Prescott also announced that he was seeking Marie McKeever, sweetheart of Robert Mais, notorious Tri-State gangster, who recently escaped from the Richmond (Va.) Jail, where he was awaiting execution. He said he wanted the woman for questioning.

Scouts Mais, Legenza Theory.

At the same time, Prescott scoffed at the theory that Mais and Legenza had done the shooting, although he said he still felt that John (Slim) Dunn, a Tri-State gangster who has been held since the day after the Wilson killing, may have had some connection with it.

Prescott's announcement came after a conference between himself and officers working on the murder. Attending the conference were Detective Sergt. Floyd Truscott and Lieut. John Fowler, of the Washington police, and Capt. Izell and Detective Hudak, of Baltimore, as well as members of the Montgomery County police.

The conference lasted several hours.

"Murder Squad" Picked.

The squad will include Lieut. Fowler, ballistics expert; Detective Sergt. Truscott, Detective Sergt. Earl P. Hartman and Detective Sergt. Clyde E. Strange, of the Homicide Squad. The special squad will report directly to Maj Brown, rather than to Detective Inspector Burke, who will concentrate on crime in Washington.

Gaming House Raided; Official Flays Garnett

Many Criminal Actions Being Dropped, Says Parole Head.

Police Crash Into H St. Resort; Question 50, Make No Arrests.

A clash between United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnet and Probation Officer Amos A. Steele developed yesterday as a repercussion to Monday night's anticrime mass meeting.

Steele issued a statement charging that a "large number of indictments" are being nolle prossed, thereby tending to "encourage and increase crime."

The statement brought an immediate reply from Garnett, showing 146 cases had been dropped, while 1,320 had been presented by the grand jury during a period of a year.

The United States Attorney said he would open the records of his office to any citizen to explain why any or all of the 146 indictments were nolle prossed.

Tabulations released by Capt. M. M. Barnard, superintendent of District penal institutions, revealed that the percentage of persons violating paroles in Washington is

In its first major offensive on gambling since the killing of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route agent, the vice squad yesterday raided a gambling establishment in the 1500 block of H street northwest. Hundreds of homeward-bound workers watched the raid.

Ostensibly seeking four well-known gamblers, the vice squad used crowbars to break through a barricaded rear window. The men for whom they were searching were not in the place, according to Sergt. George Deyoe, who headed the raiders. No arrest was made, although there were 50 men in the place.

Over the barricaded entrance was a sign reading "Lawyers' School," "Bar Examination Courses." Inside were boards carrying the results of the races at nearby tracks. Results were carried over a "bootleg" service system, which broadcast the running of races and the prices.

A craps game was in progress as

Works Plan Aims to End Direct Relief

Slum Clearance, Housing and Farm Project Speeded.

New Program Expected to Start With Next Fiscal Year.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Loath to discuss exact figures, New Deal officials yesterday pressed steadily ahead with plans for converting the vast Federal relief machinery into an extensive program of slum clearance, low-cost housing, and rural rehabilitation.

President Roosevelt will wait until the last possible moment, it became clear, before determining on how many hundreds of millions, or billions, he will ask of Congress to finance the gradual abandonment of direct relief in favor of socially-useful projects.

In the opinion of some observers close to the White House, he will request funds with which to carry on relief activities up to the end of the current fiscal year, next June 30, and then reserve a decision on expenditures for the following year until later in the session.

To Wait Business Upturn.

This was the President's budgetary practice last year. And there was reason to believe that he again will want to delay estimates on relief and public works outlays as long as possible in order to gain the benefit of any upturn in business, which would automatically lessen the need.

Among the proposals being studied as one possibility in the whole program of providing employment instead of relief is a direct Federal subsidy to housing. Under this proposal, the Government would advance part of the cost for individual homes of moderate design.

Estimates said to be in the hands of the President indicate that expenditure of $1,500,000,000 in this manner would release more than three times that amount in private capital and give work to 4,500,000 people. This is more than the number of families on relief.

In keeping with the theory that the number on relief rolls will descend in direct proportion to the revival of private construction, advocates of this plan contend that the aid would be less than outright relief. Part of the money invested would be repayable to the Government.

Silent on Cost.

With the approach of winter, bringing with it the prospect of a sharp increase in expenditures for direct relief, speculation centered on the amount of new funds the President will propose for his enlarged program of public works housing and rural industrial communities.

Reports that the Public Works Administration has recommended that $12,000,000,000 be spent over a five-year period, $5,000,000,000 to go into low-cost housing, were promptly denied by Philip B. Fleming, acting administrator, in the absence of Secretary Ickes.

"The PWA," Mr. Fleming declared, "has made no recommendations to the Administration and has not formulated any such recommendations."

This was amplified by another official with the statement that figures reported under consideration for additional public works "all

Tobacco Tax Stirs Revolt In Industry

Manufacturers Demand Repeal of Levy on Processing.

AAA Stands Adamant, Pointing to 'Booms' in the South.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's tobacco control program, so-called "bright spot" in the AAA crop reduction picture, is threatened with a major rebellion by tobacco manufacturers protesting "excessive" taxation, it was learned yesterday.

A movement to repeal the processing tax on tobacco is in full swing. The industry has served notice on Secretary of Agriculture Wallace that it will fight it out on this front if it takes all winter.

AAA Stands Adamant.

Pointing to miniature booms under way in Southern tobacco growing communities as the direct result of increased tobacco prices, the AAA is adamant, and has no immediate intention of reducing the tax.

The present trouble started when the Agriculture Adjustment Administration failed to scale downward the 4.2 per cent processing tax on flue-cured tobacco the first of this month, on expiration of the first year of the program. The industry had hoped at least for a curtailment to 2.7 per cent.

On top of this, officials of the AAA tobacco section announced intentions to continue the tobacco crop limitation program into 1935. Success of the program was widely touted, and travelers through tobacco-growing States told of farmers with jingling pockets and money to spend.

Snags Viewed Ahead.

Now large tobacco manufacturers are charging that the very "success" of the program will lead to its early undoing. Farmers who realized a 20 per cent price increase on their last tobacco crop, and anticipate another 20 per cent on their next, are not going to agree to curtail output in 1935, the industry insists.

On this same tack, manufacturers hold rising prices already have wrought havoc and all but completed destruction of the tobacco export trade.

Their vigorous protest against processing taxes, coupled with clamor by cotton producers and ginners alike for revision of the Bankhead cotton-control act, foreshadows another bitter legislative controversy when Congress convenes in January.

Pushes Farm Legislation.

Adding fuel to the flames, Farm Administrator Chester C. Davis served notice on the Chicago meat packers that the AAA again will seek passage of farm act amendments sidetrackd last session.

Agriculture officials are anxious to gain access to packing house books, and the only way they can do it is through one of these amendments giving the department power to examine books and records of institutions covered under marketing agreements.

Preparing for a new Congressional showdown, Davis will call into conference representatives of organized agriculture and interested business groups.

So far as aroused tobacco manufacturers are concerned, however, it appeared yesterday that nothing short of a substantial reduction in the tobacco processing tax will head off strong pressure next session to repeal the tax altogether.

Labor Board Strives To Keep Trade Peace At Hearing on A. & P.

Chain Head Chagrined At 'Slow' U. S. Action

More than a week ago, he told The Post, he telegraphed President Roosevelt, Secretary Perkins, S. Clay Williams, National Industrial Recovery Board chairman, and Donald R. Richberg, National Emergency Council director.

"The situation was getting more serious all the time," Hartford declared, "but all we got were the

Union Delegates Are Pessimistic

Night Session Is Called; Fear of Widespread Strike Grows.

(United Press.)

The National Labor Relations Board battled into the night last night to save President Roosevelt's industrial truce, menaced by a bitter dispute between the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. and union workers.

A noisy, five-hour round-table conference with company executives and labor representatives was recessed at 7:15 p. m. for dinner. The delegates were summoned back to continue the discussions at 9 p. m.

The conferees were glum as they hurried away.

H. A. Millis, a member of the Labor Board, declined to comment on the possibilities of an agreement which would encourage the reopening of the 300 Cleveland (Ohio) stores closed by the A. & P. Co., rather than submit to union demands for a closed shop.

"Are you making any progress?" he was asked.

"What is progress?" Millis countered.

Labor Pessimistic.

Labor's representatives were equally pessimistic.

"We're hungry," they chanted on departing. "We're coming back."

The fact that conversations would continue was interpreted as a ray of hope that the conference was not as badly deadlocked as was indicated by the angry shouts and the pounding of tables heard often during the afternoon.

Also President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, had expressed the hope that an early settlement of the controversy might be obtained.

His optimism was not shared by John L. Hartford, head of the company, who pointed out his appearance was not voluntary but at the request of the Labor Board. Developments within the past 24 hours, he made it clear, had not altered his decision to abandon the Cleveland area, where his company has done business for 50 years.

Dispute's Importance.

The dispute was raised in importance from a sectional issue to a recovery threat by the fear in Administration circles that the discord would be carried into chain stores from coast to coast and into the food-processing industries.

The Labor Board acted after the trouble had spread to A. & P. and Kroger Co. stores in Milwaukee and Racine, Wis., and after the regional labor board in Cleveland had been unable to bring peace between the opposing forces.

Mrs. Roosevelt Challenged to Debate by Dry

A challenge to a political debate reached Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday, and the First Lady immediately retorted that she was ready for battle.

The event may take place in New York City tomorrow night when Mrs. Roosevelt makes her final campaign speech for her friend, Mrs. Caroline O'Day, Democratic candidate for Representative-at-Large from New York, and if it does, Miss Dorothy Frooks, Law Preservation Party condidate for the same office, will be the rival speaker.

Miss Frooks, to whom Mrs. Roosevelt said she refused aid in getting a Democratic primary nomination in July, threw down the gauntlet in a telegram from New York, which the Associated Press reported as follows:

"You having entered the political arena stripped of the neutrality traditionally maintained by the wife of a President of the United States, I hereby challenge you to debate the issues involved in the campaign for Representative-at-Large from my home State of New York, for which the Law Preservation party has honored me with its nomination in opposition to your candidate. Any time and place suiting your convenience will be satisfactory to me."

First Lady Accepts Challenge.

The First Lady immediately wired back:

"Regret extremely that only have time free which has been allotted to one more speech Thursday night. If agreeable to committee in charge of meeting that night, of which Mrs. Casper Whitney is chairman, I am quite willing that you should speak and present your point of view, but

(Associated Press.)

A roar of protest rose from the Republican high command yesterday as the Democratic Administration, with the election a week off, poured $135,000,000 of relief money into every State except Maine, which voted in September.

The Republican Senatorial-Congressional campaign committee in a statement asserted that "again the New Deal Administration convicts itself of the charge of using Federal relief funds for political purposes and as a substitute for a campaign fund."

While relief officials explained that Maine had been omitted from the allocations because its needs for November had not been determined, the Republican committee said:

"Curiously enough every State except Maine received a slice. Maine has already voted. Maine, under the Farley plan of Tammanyizing the country, manifestly is recorded as having had hers."

"Shameless," Cries Fletcher.

Chairman Fletcher of the Republican National committee, in a radio address last night, contended the New Deal was staking its hope for success in the elections on President Roosevelt's personality and "the use of public money as though it came from the Democratic National committee instead of the United States Treasury."

"No such shameless use of public funds to influence elections can be found in the most sordid annals of our municipal politics," he added.

The relief allotments, designed for November needs, were divided among 47 States, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico. It was a big increase over the $113,599,490 given to all States and Territories for October.

Relief officials said the increased allotments were apportioned in an-

Hot Feet Result In Suit Seeking Cool $5,000 Balm

Baltimore, Oct. 30 (AP).—Hot sun, hot pavement, hot feet and a bathing beach combined today to form the plaintiff's contention in a $5,000 damage suit filed in Superior Court here today.

David Janofsky, the plaintiff, is suing C. E. Graham, operator of a beach at Bay Shore Park, because of "great physical pain and mental anguish" and loss of time from his work because his feet were burned by a pathway at the beach last June.

Janofsky alleged Graham was negligent in allowing the path to become overheated during a hot spell and took no precautions to prevent overheating by sprinkling and did not warn patrons their feet might be scorched.

Aid of Island Chief Returns After Fight

Paul C. Yates, who withdrew as executive public works assistant to Gov. Paul M. Pearson, of the Virgin Islands, following a bitter controversy over conditions in the islands, returned to Washington yesterday.

He is preparing a statement of his case against the Pearson administration, he announced last night.

Japanese Fishermen Facing Arrest Order

Manila, Philippine Islands, Oct. 30 (AP).—An order to pursue and arrest sailors aboard all Japanese vessels illegally fishing in northern Philippine waters was wirelessed to the Coast Guard cutter Banahaw today by Secretary of Commerce Eulogio Rodriquez.

The secretary said he was informed several crafts were violating insular laws.

American Flier Killed Aloft in Honduras

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Oct. 30 (AP).—D. D. Griffin, American aviator, was killed yesterday when the tanks of his trimotored plane exploded at a height of several thousand feet.

The airman was preparing to take a load of passengers from La Ceiba to Tegucigalpa and inspected his plane. He discovered that one of the motors was not working. He said he would show the passengers the plane would fly with two motors.

1,500,000 Italian Boys Mobilized by Mussolini

Rome, Oct. 30 (AP).—Premier Mussolini today carried the Fascist education of youth one step nearer to the cradle by creating the Balilla of Wolf Organization for boys between the ages of 6 and 8 years.

Nothing has been announced regarding the compulsory nature of the new group, but newspapers said it would embrace about 1,500,000 boys, which is about the number of Italian boys between those ages.

Wallace Makes Test Of 'New Pioneering'

Norris, Tenn., Oct. 30 (AP).—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace today put into practice some of the "new pioneering" he has been talking about.

The Secretary, accompanied by Dr. A. E. Morgan, chairman of the TVA, Mrs. Morgan and C. D. Le Cron, hiked to a high hill which overlooks Norris and Norris Dam. The three men built a fire, Mrs. Morgan put a pan over the flames, and the four soon sat down to a breakfast of bacon and eggs.

Many Injured In Denver Riot Over Aid Cut

Relief Strike Agitators Are Driven From City After Clash.

Denver, Colo., Oct. 30 (AP).—This city was tense tonight as police and relief strike agitators, who fought a sanguinary battle this morning in the South Platte River bottom, prepared for further rioting tomorrow.

Today's battle followed an attempt of a group of several hundred to halt work on Federal relief projects in the city. It began as a parade through the project, when tools were torn from the hands of relief workers and pitched into the river.

Police, backed against a patrol wagon when the crowd became a mob, found nightsticks ineffective, drew pistols and began firing.

Two policemen were injured, one probably fatally, and one strike agitator was shot in the hip. Other policemen suffered lesser injuries, and an undetermined number of the agitating group had torn scalps and other wounds.

Plan New Assault.

Tomorrow leaders of the motorized column, some avowed Communists and others members of various radical and semiradical groups, said they plan a massed assault on Table Mountain, the city's largest relief project, to attempt to force FERA workers to strike in protest against cuts in relief funds and pay.

Sheriff James Biggins said tonight he would give the FERA workers all the help they needed, if necessary calling Denver police.

Albany Police Repel Hunger Army at Bridge

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 30 (AP).—A party of 210 "hunger marchers," attempting to enter Albany with relief demands, were beaten back by police in a brief battle on the Hudson River bridge tonight. Injured marchers lay prone against steel girders while the police drove others into the dim streets of Rensselaer, a railroad town across the river. Early estimates were that 20 needed hospital attention. About 45 were arrested.

Meanwhile the guard of troopers about the Capitol Building was increased to 25, Governor Lehman, however, is in New York.

Police with machine guns, shotguns and tear gas bombs waited for the marchers at the city line. The first contingent party was from Buffalo and another party was said to be headed for Albany from points to the West. The police formed a cordon across the Hudson River bridge as the marchers approached from New York City.

As the caravan of five trucks and one automobile rolled under the bridge lights a police whistle shrilled. The first car, containing six men, stopped. According to the police version an officer was "poked in the jaw" when he jumped on the

U. S. Envoy to Italy Sails for Stay Here

Naples, Italy, Oct. 30 (AP).—Breckenridge Long, American Ambassador to Italy, sailed today for a several months' visit to the United States.

He will remain in Washington, it was understood, to assist in negotiations for an Italo-American commercial pact. Prince Potenziani sailed to close the Italian exhibit at the Chicago Fair.

Libby Reynolds' Baby in Suit To Protect Tobacco Millions

Winston-Salem, N. C., Oct. 30 (AP).—Little Christopher Smith Reynolds went to court, figuratively speaking, today about his daddy's millions.

The infant son of Libby Holman Reynolds and the late Smith Reynolds was in his crib in his mother's New Jersey home, but nevertheless was drawn into the legal labyrinth which some day will lead to a division of Smith Reynolds' $20,000,000 or more share of the Reynolds Tobacco Co. fortune.

Counsel for Mrs. Reynolds filed a petition asking for permission for Christopher to intervene in the Cabarrus Bank & Trust Co.'s action to set aside the $1,000,000 trust fund that Reynolds established for his first wife, Mrs. Anne Cannon Reynolds-Smith, and her small daughter, Anne Cannon Reynolds, 11.

Robert C. Vaughan, of Winston-Salem, was appointed as "next friend" of Christopher and given power to take such action as he thought in the best interest of the baby. Next Monday a hearing on the petition will be held.

If the petition is granted, Christopher will formally become a party to the litigation along with Baby Anne, the children of Mrs. Charles Babcock and Mrs. Henry Walker, both of New York, and R. J. Reynolds, jr., of Winston-Salem, as well as their parents. Mrs. Babcock and Mrs. Walker were sisters of Smith Reynolds and R. J. was his elder brother.

Gas Now 10½c; Hits New Low

Independents Say They Will Meet Any Cut Made by Majors.

Fresh hostilities flared after several days' quiet in Washington's gasoline war last night, all major dealers announcing a half-cent price slash effective today. Leaders of a group of independents declared that they were ready to follow any price cut the majors may post.

This will bring prices for branded gasoline to 11½ cents, with more than 30 dealers of unbranded products selling at 10½ cents before tonight.

Both prices constituted a new low in the current war, which broke out here October 11 and all but fulfilled predictions by leaders in the industry that gasoline would be selling in the Capital for a "dime a gallon" before peace terms are agreed upon.

In a previous war ended August 31, prices reached a low of 10 cents.

Bingham Helps Wales Receive Americans

London, Oct. 30 (AP).—The Prince of Wales received several hundred American and English members of the English-speaking union tonight at a 2-hour reception in his Londonderry house, at which United States Ambassador Robert W. Bingham shared the spotlight.

After welcoming a large number with a handshake, the prince retired for a short time while Ambassador Bingham took his place, later returning to welcome the remainder.

Polish Coal Miners Start Hunger Strike

Katowice, Poland, Oct. 30 (AP).—Sixty coal miners, seeking to prevent the dismissal of a coal mine's crew of 300 men, were hunger striking underground here today.

They went down yesterday after authorities had decided to close the pit. Police were unsuccessful in attempts to induce them to return to the surface.

Is Constitution Hall Taxable? Hearings Ordered in Dispute

Whether Constitution Hall, which is rented by its owners, the Daughters of the American Revolution, for commercial ventures, should be taxed by the District will be argued at public hearings to be fixed soon by the District Commissioners. Recommendation for hearings was made yesterday by William P. Richards, District assessor, who recently levied a tax assessment of $20,908.38 against the property. He valued the property at $1,393,892.

Heretofore the hall and other D. A. R. property has escaped taxation on the grounds that it was used for public and nonprofit-making purposes. Taxation of the hall has been urged in the past by other theater interests. Owners of these have pointed out that the rental of the D. A. R. Hall for commercial concerts and other gatherings brings it into direct competition with their properties which are taxed.

The D. A. R. has enlisted the aid of several prominent residents of Washington in their effort to have the assessment set aside. The tax was levied for the last fiscal year ending June 30. Mr. Richards said that unless the tax is paid before the dead line the property would be advertised for sale for taxes. Before that stage is reached, however, the matter is expected to be carried into the courts. The proposed hearing on the subject was to meet technical requirements of the law.

2,000 Cleveland Idle Eye U. S. Body Hearing

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 30 (AP).—More than 2,000 former employes of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., thrown out of work when the company closed its 300 Cleveland stores and warehouses, looked hopefully tonight to negotiations in Washington which may put them on the pay roll again.

Some of them declare the wolf is already close to their door, and that dismay is their present emotion.

Most of them, the spokesman said, had no hand in the dispute between the company and the Cleveland Federation of Labor, which A. & P. officials said led to the abrupt closing of the stores.

Town Raises Salaries.

Clarksdale, Miss., Oct. 30 (AP).—Effective November 1, every municipal employe will receive 10 per cent increase in salary, Mayor Ellington Fant said steady improvement in business conditions here justified a raise ranging from $6 to $25 a month for employes.

Bond Bankers See Securities Outlook Better

Association Plans Fight on Pessimism in Predictions.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Oct. 30.—In addition to adopting a conciliatory attitude toward the New Deal, the Investment Bankers Association, in annual convention here, has discovered some bright spots in the present financial situation which members argue should encourage those in the security business to go ahead.

Not only were some of these "bright spots" pointed out today in committee reports, but privately these men have been telling each other that too many alarms have been sounded and that there has been too much dragging of ghosts out of closets. Overemphasis on gloomy predictions, they assert, frequently aggravates the situation against which they are protesting.

These men point out that they do not mean everything is rosy, because it is not. Business, they assert, is bad, but it will not be improved by talking about it. The capital investment market is stagnant, it is asserted, due to general uncertainty of future moves by the Federal Government and by reason of barriers already set up.

New Attitude.

But they also assert that their job is to try to understand the spirit of the New Deal, adapt themselves wherever they can and trust to the abatement of bitternesses growing out of the depression and the reasonableness of the American people to correct the destructive policies and provisions of law now injuring them.

This new attitude is illustrated by what occurred here today concerning the Federal Government's activities in the Tennessee Valley. Those at this convention are irreconcilably opposed to Government ownership of public utilities, not only because they believe it is destructive of millions of dollars of public utility investments, but because they fear it is an opening wedge for Government ownership in other fields.

Yet the report of the association's public service securities committee contended that further argument over the question is useless and that "limitation and confinement of the experiment must depend more on the actual results than on argument or protest."

Challenge to Industry.

"The challenge is to the leadership of the industry itself, and that leadership which has demonstrated the highest efficiency in its extraordinary development of the business and in dealing with its operating problems can not fail to meet the test," the report continued. "Divided counsels would be disastrous. The investment banker may contribute to the establishment and understanding of the rules under which the experiment is to be made if the results are to be properly judged, but his role will be confined largely to watching and studying the developments."

Reiterating that "fallacious theories must be refuted not by argument but by actual experience," the committee asserted that a cursory examination of the TVA developments "is by no means altogether disheartening to the proponents of private operation." The committee urged that a special study be made of the TVA project, showing operating costs and all details of the operation, pointing out that "TVA is making history and that history will importantly influence the whole future of government competition."

The committee held that "there is a general tendency among investment bankers to exaggerate the adverse effects of governmental dispositions, whether in the matter of competition, taxes, or rates, and to underestimate favorable elements which depend no more on the character of the industry than on the extraordinary efficiency, ability and resourceful leadership of its operating heads."

Threat Exaggerated.

Further on the committee asserted that while the question of government competition was uppermost in the minds of the industry and bankers, "we venture the opinion that the actual threat to the integrity of public utility investments from this source is exaggerated and that the welfare of the utilities for many years to come will continue to be determined instead by legislative and judicial control of rates through the commissions and the courts."

Pointing out that at the end of 1932 investment in privately operated light and power companies exceeded $12,125,000,000 as against approximately $540,000,000 in publicly-operated projects, the report added that "examples of municipal operation are not altogether to be condemned if only that they tend to prove the soundness of the generally accepted policy which prefers private initiative and private capital to Government ownership and operation."

This report was distributed at a meeting addressed by Wendell L. Wilkie, president of the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation, who was sharp in his attacks on the TVA project.

Underselling TVA.

He listed all the items of cost applying to privately-owned companies which do not figure in Government operation directly and asserted that if such factors were accounted for it would be found that most electric companies "are selling electric energy at lower rates today" than the TVA.

The entrance of the Government into the electric utility field, he said, resulted from a public belief that the private companies' structures are filled with water. This thought, he said, had been developed, "through a few conspicuous failures and ex parte investigations where the utilities have not been given an adequate opportunity to present their views."

He asserted that if this charge is assumed to be true and the most "extravagant claim" of "write-ups" in utility capital be accepted, which he said was $1,000,000,000 in 1929, it would mean nothing because it represented only 7 per cent of the total capitalization and "has been washed out several times in the market deflation since 1929. In any event, he added, rates are based on physical value of the property used and not on capital structure.

"The present wasteful Governmental duplication of facilities, if continued, will eventually cost the public many multiples of these so-called 'write-ups,'" he added.

The committee on municipal securities found a "material and gratifying condition" in many States and municipalities and although much remained to be done "an excellent start has been made," in reorganizing and adjusting indebtedness.

Report on Defaults.

This committee also found cheer in the action of many municipalities which had contracted to sell bonds to the PWA asking to be released so they could finance in the open market. Over 300 loans have been canceled and "a large part of them have been financed through the customary channels of trade."

Fears that adoption of the Sumners municipal debt adjustment would attract a flood of defaults by local governments have not materialized, the committee reported, adding that "to date only ten municipalities have filed application for action" under the statute. The committee added that "it already has become apparent that the stigma of default is something virtually all communities will avoid if that is possible."

A cheerful note also pervaded the report of the foreign securities committee, which asserted that "there is reason for expressing the hope that the year 1934 marks the beginning of a new phase in the history of American investments in foreign securities." Recent improvement in world economic conditions appears to have checked the previous trend of defaults, with new defaults amounting only to $63,500,000 in the first eight months of this year as compared with $1,145,500,000 last year. Moreover, many defaulting nations were giving consideration to readjusting their debts and restoring their credit abroad, the report stated.

Stimson's White House Visit Recalls Fears Over Japanese Situation.

By Raymond Clapper

A STRANGE, reminiscent smile must have crossed the face of former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson as he fingered his cigar over the White House luncheon table yesterday.

Just three years ago to the day, Mr. Stimson, then Secretary of State, with anxious foreboding was carrying official dispatches to the White House reporting fighting between Japanese and Chinese at Mukden. Japan then was in the process of swallowing Manchuria, and Mr. Stimson frankly did not like the looks of it. He held his tongue for a while but frankly told the world in plain words that he felt Japan was violating her treaty obligations and that the United States could not recognize territory taken by such methods. Japan, in defense, took the attitude that she was compelled to protect her national safety by moving in to establish order in her neighboring backyard.

Yesterday at the White House luncheon, it must be inferred that President Roosevelt consulted with Stimson regarding, among other matters, the acute situation precipitated by Japan's insistence on scrapping the 5-5-3 naval ratio in the London naval discussions now going on.

Mr. Stimson no doubt was curiously interested to hear that Japan is insisting upon naval expansion because, for one reason, her position in Manchuria, or Manchukuo, increases her insecurity. Therefore she needs a larger navy.

The Public Works Administration has been compelled to recall an advance of $11,000,000 for subway construction in Philadelphia. Someone had been forgetting to put cement in the concrete. In Philadelphia they could not believe that PWA would mind a trifling construction oversight of that kind and an official here received a telephone call from the City of Brotherly Love.

"Say," the anxious inquiry ran, "do you really mean it?"

One New Dealer says the New Deal isn't new at all and that you can find almost the same thing about 100 years ago in the Chartist movement in Great Britain. That New Deal, like the present one, followed a wild speculative period.

The aims of the Chartist movement, as set forth at the time, read like the blue-print of Mr. Roosevelt's "More Abundant Life." On contemporary statement of Chartist aims said: "All shall have a good house to live in with a garden back or front, just as the occupier likes; good clothing to keep him warm and make him look respectable, and plenty of food and drink to make him look and feel happy."

Chartist petitions for relief legislation had more signatures than the Townsend old-age pension plan. One bore 3,315,712 signatures. They developed a subsistence homestead project. But that's the end of the parallel. The Chartists began to get rough, pulled plugs out of factory boilers, and finally attempted a general strike. It failed and the Chartists gradually died out, and no doubt their children grew up to be Tories.

This department recently chose for its purpose, lacking a better one, the task of reporting in a small way upon the progress in Washington of the Good, the Beautiful and the True.

So when an item concerning Mr. J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, presented itself, it was, after due consideration, deemed to fall within the third category, if not the second. The item was a brief outline of the life, times and good works of Comptroller O'Connor, including the remarks that reporters had him tabbed as a man who writes letters to employers complaining against their stories, a statement which was believed at the time to be correct.

We regret to report, however, that on the following day, so we are advised, Mr. O'Connor telephoned The Post executive offices to dissent.

About the most that any of us could hope for would be to have, when we finally shake off this world's cares, a little editorial like the obituary which the Daily News printed yesterday about its late veteran proof reader, Joe Johnson, Joe, God rest his soul, was one of that quaint and wise tribe in the proofroom which lets those funny errors go through always right smack in the middle of a stretch of purple words. But nobody outside of the office knows how much more schoolboy spelling would break into the paper if the proofroom ever decided to take a day off.

'Delay' by U. S. Irks President Of A.&P. Stores

Wired Roosevelt, Other Officials a Week Ago, Hartford Says.

His reference to the patient's death was the decision of the company to close its 300 Cleveland stores, which deprived some 2,200 persons of jobs.

Hartford insisted the company at no time assumed an "arbitrary position," adding:

"Don't let anyone tell you we've coerced anybody. We've had union employes in our bake shops and printing shops for years. The managers and clerks who belong to the Managers Benefit Association (a company union) have been receiving vacations, insurance and other benefits for 20 years.

"The trouble resulted from the flat failure of the Federation of Labor to get our retail managers and clerks to join the union. When they couldn't get members they began picketing our warehouses and preventing transportation of goods to our stores.

"It got to the point where our stores had to turn many customers away because we couldn' get delivery of vegetables and fruits.

"From the beginning the union demonstrated it considers contracts as nothing but scraps of paper. We had contracts for our teaming. The men under contract wtih us in turn had contracts with the union. The union broke the contracts without hesitation.

Lack of Protection.

"So what could we do? It's foolish to attempt to do business with people who haven't any regard for contracts. On top of that, the police wouldn't give us any protection.

"We could have sent in guards and gunmen to protect our property, of course, but then we would have had violence and bloodshed. The answer was to close up and get out."

Mr. Hartford, a tall man with graying temples and a direct manner of speaking, predicted the experience of his company would cause "real thinking" by the American public.

He said the company was "distressed" over the circumstances which made it "absolutely necessary" to close the stores because the action added to the ranks of the unemployed. He said no other "decent course" was open.

Cleveland municipal officials, he charged, circulated "false reports" that the company ceased operations because of brisk competition. He said the mayor was disturbed because of his claim of inadequate police protection.

Mr. Hartford was irked particularly by the tactics of union sympathizers in blocking deliveries of foodstuffs to his stores.

Bread Ruined.

"We were prevented from moving at least 60,000 pounds of bread from our bakery. We had to burn every bit of it except one truck load for the poor, which they finally permitted the Salvation Army to drive away. With so many people hungry, that is mighty bad business."

He complained about "bold intimidation" in A. & P. stores.

"Gangs entered the stores," he said, "and told the managers they had better get out or they would be thrown out. When we learned about that we told them to help the customers out and close the stores."

As a parting shot, Mr. Hartford inquired:

ticipation of greater relief needs in November's cold weather.

The Republican committee, however, commented:

"Santa Claus was around again today and again he is playing New Deal politics with the money of all the people.

"Today's announcement was an innovation. Up to today no allocation has been made until after the first of the month and then only for a few States at a time.

"November's allocation is announced days in advance of custom and a full week in advance of the election. This is the way to reap the full political benefit."

Scandal Charge Pops Up.

Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, made public the relief allotments at about the same time Senator Hastings, of Delaware, co-chairman of the Republican Senatorial-Congressional Campaign Committee, was renewing his charges of a "National scandal" in connection with relief funds.

Hastings, in declining a campaign debate with Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, addressed a number of critical questions about the Administration, including the following:

"Do you agree with the argument used by Mr. Farley that it is necessary to support Democrats in order that a State may be sure to get from this Administration its share of Federal funds?

"Do you disagree with me when I say this constitutes an effort to corrupt the electorate and that it has become a National scandal?"

The only statement during the day from Democratic leaders had nothing to do with the relief controversy, but was a reiteration of confidence as to the outcome of the first Nation-wide test of sentiment on the "New Deal."

Hurja Voices Confidence.

Emil J. Hurja, assistant to Chairman Farley, said the Democratic National committee was unwilling to concede Republican victory in any Congressional district.

"No responsible Republican leader has put his finger on any Democratic seats we are going to lose," Hurja said. "On the other hand, I can put my finger on some Republican seats we are going to take."

He cited the Eighth Minnesota and Twelfth Michigan districts as examples.

Hurja's statement was brought forth by a protest from Representative Lee (Democrat), Missouri, that a statement credited to the Democratic National committee, conceding three Republican Congressional victories in Missouri, was injuring him in his campaign.

Meeting Lee's protest specifically, Hurja added:

"We feel sure that polls and survey which we have conducted show a Roosevelt sentiment in that district, which, coupled with Mr. Lee's record here in Washington, insure his reelection."

Bank Draws Blank In Safety Boxes Rented 51 Years

Cleveland, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—For 46 years the Union Trust Co. and its predecessors have been attempting to find Mrs. Josephine S. Gregory, who, on June 8, 1883, rented a safety deposit box and 15 days later rented another.

Mrs. Gregory was never found. The rental—$5 annually for each box—reached $450. Officials deemed it wise to open the boxes and dispose of their contents.

Today a notary public, a deputy State banking examiner and C. L. Bethel, of the safety deposit department, opened the box.

They found:

An old water pitcher, six cups and saucers, two of them cracked; a clothes pin, a box of nails, screws and twine, an old sock, a bed sheet and spread and bureau cover, a red basket with a sea shell in it, two drinking glasses, some withered asters, a towel rack, a whiskbroom and seven yellowed books.

Weirton Union Upheld By Department Heads

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 30 (A.P.).—The Weirton Steel Co. called department heads and foremen today to refute charges in the Government injunction suit that the Weirton management dominated the selection of employe representatives.

Edwin O. Burgham, manager of the tin plate department, around whom much of the controversy over rival unions raged, testified the sentiment of the Weirton workers was "enthusiastically" in favor of the employe representation plan, or so-called company union.

Ready-Made Women's Clothes First Offered in U. S. in 1840

Since 1840 milady, milady's daughter and milady's great-grandchildren have shopped more and more constantly for their clothing in ready-to-wear stores and shops, selecting, according to the decades in which they lived, hoop skirts and swirling drapes, hobble skirts and modest sheaths.

For it was in 1840 that the manufacture of women's ready-to-wear apparel was begun in this country, A. C. Case, vice president and general manager of the Palais Royal Department Store, told a radio audience over Station WRC yesterday afternoon.

Men's ready-to-wear apparel appeared ten years earlier in 1830 when garbs for sailors on whaling ships were put on sale in New England ports.

"Following the Civil War, there was an enormous increase in the demand for women's apparel," said Mr. Case yesterday.

"Particularly did this demand exist for coats and cloaks, and in 1870 a demand for suits developed. From 1850 down until 1910, the number of manufacturers of women's cloaks and suits grew rapidly. There were, of course, many changes in the industry due to changes in fashion.

"Following 1914, light coats for spring and fall came into use, which, for the most part, were hitherto unknown.

"The suit business reached its peak in the 10-year period from 1905 to 1915.

"The period from 1895 to 1905 is frequently spoken of as the 'age of plush' because of the great vogue at that time for this material in women's coats."

Mr. Case sketched the history and the development of the ready-to-wear clothing industry in the United States, now a $2,000,000,000 industry employing 650,000 wage earners.

"It is now one of the most discussed of our current industries," asserted Mr. Case.

"Although Paris is the fountain source of inspiration as far as style is concerned, nevertheless, during the past four or five years, there has been a distinct movement with reference to American designed goods for American women," declared Mr. Case.

"Through the efficient market system of today, the merchant is enabled to buy merchandise at fair prices and to pass along new developments to his customers. Through perfection of distribution, he is able to secure, at all times, a wide assortment of merchandise which is constantly up to the minute."

Court Won't Grant Restraint of TVA

Declines to Halt Proposed $6,191,000 Purchase.

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 30 (A.P.). Federal Judge John J. Gore today denied a plea for a temporary injunction to restrain the Tennessee Valley Authority from acquiring Tennessee Public Service Co. properties at and near Knoxville.

Judge Gore's action left only a ruling in circuit court, scheduled for tomorrow, on another plea that the deal be restrained, barring the consummation of the proposed $6,191,000 transaction.

The judge held that the petitioner, Mrs. Ellen Ruble, of Morristown, owner of 120 shares of T. P. S. stock, was not entitled to block the sale, on the ground that a minority stockholder is bound by the action of the majority stockholders except in the instance of fraud, collusion or deceit.

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 30 (A.P.).—Campaign workers for Dr. Cornell Grossman, Millburn dentist, independent candidate for governor, were paid off with free dental work.

Dr. Grossman's expense account, filed with the secretary of state, included this item: "Dental work done for campaign workers, or for printed matter, $350."

Bori Will Sing 2 Mozart Arias

Capital Orchestra Opens "Symphony Series" Tomorrow Night.

With Lucrezia Bori, popular soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, as soloist, the National Symphony Orchestra, which began its fourth season on October 21, will give the first concert in the "symphony series" tomorrow night in Constitution Hall. The distinguished singer will be heard in two Mozart arias with orchestral accompaniment, and in a group of songs with Frederick Bristol at the piano. Conductor Hans Kindler has prepared the following program:

Suite for Strings ..... Purcell-Coates
(First time in Washington.)
Vocal solos:
"Deh vieni non tardar" ..... Mozart
"Alleluia" ..... Mozart
Symphony, No. 2, in D major ... Sibelius
(First time in Washington.)
Legend, "The Enchanted Lake" .... Lyadov
Vocal solos:
"The Rose and the Nightingale" ..... Rimski-Korsakov
"Lullaby" ..... Cyril Scott
"Cantares" ..... Turina
"Dos Cantares" ..... Obradors
"El Vito" ..... Nin
Rhapsodie, "Espana" ..... Chabrier

The program opens with a novelty, an arrangement of numbers from Henry Purcell's dramatic works presented for the first time in modern dress. The numbers were selected and orchestrated by Albert Coates, from whom Dr. Kindler obtained the score in London last summer for first performance in this country.

The second symphony of Sibelius, to be played for the first time in the National Capital, was written in 1902, when the famous Finnish composer was in his thirty-seventh year. It marks the beginning of his strongly individual style and a break with the orthodoxy to which he had, up to that time, adhered. It contains several striking innovations in symphonic form.

Lyadov's tone-poem, "The Enchanted Lake," a piece of finely colored impressionistic writing, has been heard here on only a few occasions. The familiar "Espana" rhapsody of Chabrier, instinct with rhythmic vitality and brilliantly instrumented, will bring the concert to a close.

Col. Roosevelt Directs Attack At Democrats

Administration Builds Up Huge Machine, He Alleges.

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Republican leader, charged tonight that the Democratic Administration in Washington was leading the American people to ruin through threats of inflation and failure to balance the national budget.

Swinging into New York State as part of the "heavy artillery" in the Republican campaign in the November 6 elections, the colonel, in characteristic fashion, delivered a two-fisted oration against the New Deal policies of the President—a distant cousin.

"I charge that the policies of the present National Administration will ruin all chance of the people attaining their wishes for security," Col. Roosevelt declared. "I charge that the National Government is as false to the people as it has been false in its promises."

"Vote Buying" Charged.

He said that the political spoils system had been permitted to return in its worst form to Washington, and charged that a "planned attempt is being made to buy the votes of the American people with their own money."

Roosevelt, former Governor-General of the Philippines under the Hoover Administration and a son of former President Theodore Roosevelt, followed the line of Republican appeal set forth recently by other speakers in the campaign, namely, appealing to the "thinking people" to protect themselves before it is too late by returning a Republican Congress, and in 1936 a Republican administration.

He pointed out that "the budget is hopelessly unbalanced," and emphasized that "our deficit is triple that of the last year of the Hoover Administration."

Sees Promises Broken.

The President's promises of sound money and a balanced budget at all costs—made during the campaign against Herbert Hoover—were merely the "scrap of paper" of which "we heard so much during the World War," Col. Roosevelt said.

Pounding his points home, "Young Teddy" shouted the Administration was diverting public funds to feather its own nest.

"I charge that the National Government," he said, "is building up a colossal political machine, modeled on Tammany Hall in New York City. The wheel-horse of this work is Mr. James Aloysius Farley, disciple of Tammany Hall methods. . . .

"There never has been an administration that has attempted more deliberately and brazenly to debauch the public service for partisan political purposes.

Wants New Deal Checked.

"Unless we, the people, check it and check it now, the entire United States will be converted into a gigantic model of Tammany Hall, whose name stands for corruption, exploitation and cynical immorality, not merely in this country but throughout the world. * * *

"I charge that the Democratic party is using the colossal funds turned over to it by a spineless, traitorous Congress to build its machine and for campaign purposes.

"The Home Owners Loan Corporation has been on a strictly Tammany basis. Its personnel was appointed from Democratic ward-heelers. The closing of titles has been given to Democratic lawyers as patronage. Millions of public moneys have gone in this fashion. The work could have been accomplished at one-tenth the cost."

Col. Roosevelt quoted statements by the President two years ago, saying "Government incomes must meet prospective Government expenditures," and then quoted him as admitting early this year that the excess of expenditures over receipts during this fiscal year amounts to $7,000,000,000."

Says Spending Is Partisan.

"This money has been spent," Roosevelt added, "in part for purely partisan purposes, as spoils for a political machine. Many millions more have gone for folly of the rankest sort." He quoted the President at Butte, Mont., as saying: "Sound currency must be maintained at all regards," and then, to prove his charge of falseness and insincerity, asked, in effect, "But where is the dollar today?"

"I was taught when young that a promise was sacred," the Colonel commented, "that a man's word should be as good as his bond. The National Administration is a vendor of promises—pleasant promises, but promises that, like our currency, have fallen into disrepute."

He told his audience that "the moneys squandered and dissipated will hang like a millstone around the neck of this country" for generations. He said he felt sorry for the younger generation, for present taxation, increasing as it is, is far from able to pay the bills.

Would Curtail Borrowing.

On the constructive side, the Colonel advocated drastic curtailing of National Government borrowing, and immediate economies in Governmental expenditures — directly opposite from the Democratic policy to spend and open channels of cash and credit for prosperity.

"To effect this we should abandon the NRA," Col. Roosevelt declared. "We would discharge 100,000 and more political appointees of the present Administration who are now living off the public."

He favored "heavy inheritance taxes" against huge fortunes which he said are not earned by the generation inheriting them, but emphasized that "a distinction should be made in income taxes between the earned and unearned income."

An alert Post photographer made this unusual "shot" a few moments after noticing, as he was driving by, that the gigantic crane which has been a Fifteenth street fixture for several weeks was hoisting a ponderous sculptural group to one of the four pediments on the west side of the Commerce Department Building. James E. Fraser, of New York, created the group, which will fit in a triangular niche 45 feet long at the base and 12 feet tall at the apex. Carved in Indiana limestone, it symbolizes the department's aeronautics activities.

Quitting Race Talk Absurd, Sinclair Says

Right of 25,000 in State to Vote Hinges on Court Action.

San Francisco, Oct. 30 (AP).—The right of thousands of persons in Los Angeles to vote in the November election hung in a legal balance today, while more rumors about prospective withdrawals kept California's Governorship campaign at fever heat. Los Angeles is the stronghold of Upton Sinclair, Democratic nominee for Governor.

Nearly 25,000 prospective voters, accused of illegal registration, were involved in the case before the State Supreme Court, and upward of 100,000 altogether eventually may be affected.

Sinclairites, facing election day with no prospects of help from the national Administration, have charged 95 per cent of those named in the suit were Democrats, and that the legal action was the result of a Republican conspiracy to disfranchise voters by the wholesale.

As the high court deliberated, J. F. T. O'Connor, United States Comptroller of the Currency, arrived in Los Angeles and denied rumors that Postmaster General Farley had asked him to urge Sinclair to withdraw.

Sinclair declared he would not withdraw under any circumstances, and said he had a "million votes," in replying to a plea from Milen Dempster, Socialist candidate, that he quit and throw his support to the Socialist party.

Court Considers Roberts Co. Plea

All Its Business Done in D. C., Firm Says.

Justice Jennings Bailey, of the District Supreme Court, had under advisement last night a motion filed by the W. F. Roberts Co. to dismiss a suit brought by the Government to compel it to abide by the code of fair competition for the graphic arts industry.

Arguments for the Government were made by Assistant United States Attorneys David A. Pine and John J. Wilson, while F. Regis Noel, president of the District Bar Association and a leading figure in the anticrime meeting at the Mayflower Hotel Monday night, and Harry F. Grant appeared for the company.

The main contention of the defendants is that they are not engaged in interstate commerce because they do all of their business in the District and are not subject to Federal regulation.

I'm Not an Invalid, Schmedeman Tells Wisconsin Voters

Madison, Oct. 30 (AP).—Gov. A. G. Schmedeman, whose left leg was amputated October 5 to halt a gangrenous infection, tonight assured the Wisconsin electorate he had returned to general good health.

The Governor, asking reelection on the Democratic ticket, in a radio address, said he expected "to carry on as before."

The address was Schmedeman's first in the general election campaign and followed by 24 hours the accusation of Charles E. Broughton, National committeeman, that Republicans were carrying on a whispering campaign regarding his health.

Broughton exhibited photostatic copies of a letter written October 16 by the Republican State committee's treasurer saying "from press reports it is reasonable to assume that it (the new Governor) will be either Howard Greene, Lieut. Gov. Thomas O'Malley or Phil La Follette." Greene is the Republican candidate, La Follette the Progressive. O'Malley asks reelection.

Filipinos Hear Judge Lobingier

Jose Rizal Day Celebrated by Club Here.

Judge Charles S. Lobingier, former legal adviser to the Philippine government, was the principal speaker last night at the observance of Rizal Day by the Filipino Club of Washington.

Judge Lobingier likened the Filipino mancipator and reformer, Jose Rizal, to the American Benjamin Franklin.

"There are interesting parallels in the lives of Franklin and Rizal," he said. "Each was of humble birth and reared in poverty. Each learned the printer's trade and lived thereby, at least, in part. Each left the beaten paths trodden by his ancestors and blazed new trails.

Boris Is Hero In Train Fire; Plot Rumored

Saves Life of Engineer and Takes Throttle; Bomb Found in Tender.

Vienna (Wednesday), Oct. 31 (U.P.). Balkan capitals seethed today with rumors of a plot against the life of King Boris III of Bulgaria, but whether an attempt on the life of the Bulgar ruler really was made, newspaper correspondents for the first time were unable to learn immediately.

Censorship was declared at Sofia, but served only to strengthen rumors of a plot against the King similar to that which cost the life of King Alexander of Yugoslavia at Marseille, France, this month.

The one thing certain was there was a fire aboard a train on which Boris was traveling from Sofia to Varna and that Boris played an heroic part in extinguishing it and aiding the engineer, who was injured in fighting the flames.

From Varna came word the fire started from explosion of a time bomb in the engine tender in an attempt against the ruler's life. Bomb fragments were found in the tender after the fire and many railroad employes on the route were arrested, it was asserted.

The Bulgarian censor at Sofia, after suppressing the story, finally issued a version minimizing the fire and Boris' actions, which other sources described as heroic.

The King was said to have saved the life of the locomotive driver by stripping burning clothing from him and giving him first-aid after clambering along the footboards of the coaches from his own car to the tender while the train was in motion.

The official Bulgarian version said the train stopped at Kecarevo while en route from Sofia to Varna, because of a fire in the tender. The engineer was unable to extinguish the blaze and Boris ordered him to drive the locomotive to the nearest bridge across a stream, where the fire was put out. The censor said the engineer suffered only a slight burn, which Boris dressed in his own coach.

Socialists Back Hamilton Fish, Foe of Radicals

Hamilton Fish has been given the Socialist indorsement for Congress, the Associated Press says.

One line in the Congressional campaign alignments prepared by the Clerk of the House listed Fish as being the candidate of the Republicans, the Socialists and the Law Enforcement League in his district.

For 14 years Fish has represented the conservative Republican district in which he resides in New York State. He conducted an investigation several years ago into Communist activities.

His office said yesterday he had not been informed of the Socialist indorsement until after it had been given.

Reich Leads in Marriages.

Berlin, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Nazi Germany leads the world in marriages, it was announced tonight. Total marriages last year were 631,000, which was 121,000, or 24 per cent, higher than the preceding 12 months.

Alma Mater Song Quells Riot At University of California

Five Students Suspended for Fostering Radical Activities.

Los Angeles, Oct 30 (AP).—Heated words and a scuffle growing out of the suspension of five prominent students, accused of Communistic activity, brought police riot squads to the University of California at Los Angeles today, but the dove of peace reached the campus ahead of the officers.

Between 2,000 and 3,000 students gathered on the campus to discuss yesterday's order of Dr. Ernest C. Moore, provost of the university, suspending five students on charges of fostering radical activities in the student body expressly against orders of the provost's office.

One student started to harangue and demand "immediate action." He was pulled down by James Smith, campus policeman. Other students turned on the policeman, tore his uniform and threw him over a hedge.

One of the university staff got the attention of the crowd and explained that the administration would hear charges against the suspended students. Then the gathering sang the alma mater song which brought peace.

Dr. Moore said the five students had attempted to maintain, despite faculty objections, an open forum which had inclined toward radicalism. He said the National Student League, an alleged Communist organization, had been back of the agitation to organize the forum.

Spirited Fights Boost Election Vote Rosters

47,949,928 Are Registered Throughout Nation as Contests Near.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

A high-voltage voter interest in next Tuesday's first Nation-wide test of the New Deal, with 47,949,928 men and women qualifying themselves to vote, was shown yesterday by an Associated Press compilation.

This figure, unusually high for an "off-year" battle, was indicated in a gathering of registrations and official and unofficial estimates of voting strength in all the States which ballot November 6.

Although falling a million below the record registration in the Roosevelt-Hoover Presidential contest in 1932, the estimate is more than 5,000,000 above that for the Hoover-Smith election in 1928.

Spirited Fights Spur Voters.

Two years ago the number of qualified voters as revised from latest statistics, was 48,962,530. The actual vote in the Presidential contest was 39,791,886, a record. It compared with 36,798,669 votes cast in the 1928 race.

While the absence of a Presidential contest this year is responsible for some falling off, spirited campaigns for Senate seats, the governor's chair in some States and hot races for the House of Representatives in many districts, have spurred voters to qualify.

While the majority of States indicate an increased voting strength as compared with two years ago, a score of Commonwealths show a falling off in qualified voters.

New York Shows Drop.

Despite the tense races in New York, that State's estimated voting strength this year is 4,786,000, more than half a million below the 1932 figure.

Pennsylvanians, who have hotly contested Senatorial and gubernatorial races, have registered in even larger number than in the last Presidential year. The 4,192,241 registrations are 280,000 higher than in 1930.

Illinois, having no races for Senator or governor, shows lagging interest in the Congressional races. The indicated voting strength there this year has dropped almost half a million to an estimated 3,660,000.

California Figure Up.

California, with its intensive race for Governor, shows a quarter of a million more voters have qualified this year than in the Roosevelt-Hoover race. Present registrations total 3,140,114.

Ohio, having both Senatorial and gubernatorial races as well as Congressional, seems to have less interest than two years ago. Indications are there will be 143,000 more voters this year, the total estimated voting strength being 3,327,607.

New Jersey's registration is smaller than two years ago by 57,000 with a total of 1,954,678. Massachusetts shows increased interest with an estimated strength of 1,850,000, or 54,000 more than two years ago, due to the contests for Governor and Senator.

Gains and Decreases Noted.

Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota and Missouri, with voting strength of more than a million each, show decreased interest this year.

Iowa, Kentucky, Texas and Wisconsin, also having more than a million qualified voters, have gained in indicated voting strength this year.

All citizens entitled to vote do not qualify. Many who qualify do not exercise their right of franchi. Of those citizens qualifying to vote, the percentage actually voting ranges from less than 80 per cent to more than 85 per cent. Of the 48,962,530 estimated to have qualified in 1932, only 39,493,442 (excluding Maine) voted.

11-Year-Old King Made Commander Of Yugoslav Army

Belgrade, Oct. 30 (AP).—A slender lad who three months ago thought it would be "more fun when I'm grown up because then I can go shooting, motoring, sailing and flying" completed his "growing up" suddenly today—to find himself commander in chief of Yugoslavia's army.

Eleven-year-old King Peter II was told, for the first time, that his new post involves his command of the nation's armed forces.

Peter already held the rank of corporal in the army, given him by his father on his tenth birthday. He will continue to wear that uniform until he is 18 and personally takes over the reins of government.

Byrd and Bennett Were First At North Pole, Says Historian

Dr. Cook Came as Close as Peary, Declares J. Gordon Hayes.

London, Oct. 30 (AP).—The claims of Dr. Frederick A. Cook to discovery of the North Pole were credited today by J. Gordon Hayes, polar historian, with as much accuracy as those of Admiral Robert E. Peary.

In a book, published today, Hayes said many of Cook's statements "may be accepted as genuine and truthful."

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd and Floyd Bennett were said by Hayes to have been the first persons actually to reach the pole.

"Admiral Peary," Hayes said, "never was within 50 or more miles from the North Pole. There have been many critics of Peary's claim on both sides of the Atlantic, and all disinterested inquirers have come to the same conclusion—that he didn't reach the pole; by this it may be understood he never was within 50 or more miles of its position. * * * Peary said he returned from his camp at the pole to Latitude 27 degrees, 47 minutes north, in no more than 56 hours. This is a distance of 150 statute miles, apart from the deviations, over pack ice and drifting floes. Hence, a man 53 years old either walked considerably more than 75 miles a day for two days over a rough surface, or he never came near the pole."

Regarding Dr. Cook, Hayes submits, Cook in 1908 "probably reached at least as high a latitude as that attained by Admiral Peary the following year; that Cook's statements except in relation to his attainment of the North Pole and possible his glacial island, may be accepted as substantially genuine, truthful and accurate."

Mueller's Foes Claim Triumph In Hitler Ruling

Chancellor Decides to Let Evangelical Church Fight Its Own Battles.

Berlin, Oct. 30 (AP).—A partial victory in their months-long fight against Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller's Nazi church dictatorship was claimed by his opponents tonight after Adolf Hitler decided to let the Evangelical Church fight its own battles.

The Reichsfuehrer, facing a choice betwen Mueller and his German Christian clique and rebellious church faithful fighting Mueller, received three opposition bishops headed by Hans Meiser of Bavaria to hear their outline of the blazing controversy.

After an hour and 45 minutes with the chancellor, the three emerged to say "We are quite satisfied" with Hitler's attitude.

Leader Hands Off.

They were represented as welcoming the leader's decision to keep hands off the church fight because henceforth they can fight their battles for religious freedom with their own weapons and because they feel that majority opinion ultimately will prevail against what they called Mueller's minority.

Reliable circles, recalling that Mueller used secret police to arrest scores of pastors and impound church tax moneys in an attempt to overcome his opposition, analyzed the situation as follows:

Separation may be declared between the church and state so that the state will no longer collect church taxes and the government's agreement will not have to be obtained before various measures for appointing church officers are put into effect.

Peasants in Revolt.

Spreading revolt among Hitler's stout peasant following confronted him with the alternative of casting off trusted men to whom he assigned the task of unifying Protestantism under the Nazi banner, or retaining them in defiance of large sections of the people on which he bases his power.

As the opposition henchmen conferred with Hitler, Nazi party pressure forced Dr. August Jaeger, who resigned last week as Nazi commissioner for Protestant churches in Prussia, to sever his remaining connections with Mueller's church cabinet.

McGlincy Appointed Herndon Town Clerk

Herndon, Va., Oct. 30 (Spl.).—Guy R. McGlincy, long prominent in the politics of Herndon, was appointed town clerk last night by the town council to fill the unexpired term of Charles Sager, who resigned recently. McGlincy was sworn into office by Mayor Allen H. Kirk.

The council also adopted a resolution formally transferring 2½ miles of the Chantilly-Mocks Corner road within the corporate limits to the State highway commission. This road recently was taken into the State highway system as a primary road.

Safeguard Sought For Police Radio

Communications Body Acts to Check Outsiders.

Baltimore, Oct. 30 (AP).—The Federal Communications Commission has stepped in here to find out how lawyers and private towing trucks manage to appear so suddenly on the scene of accidents to which police cars had been directed by radio.

Police Commissioner Charles D. Gaither told police officials here today that such interception of police calls by private individuals was a violation of the law. He instructed police to cooperate with the Federal men in breaking up the practice.

Police officials said certain garages and lawyers tuned in on police calls and rushed to the scene of accidents reported over the police broadcasts. Police said garage towing trucks and lawyers sometimes arrived almost as soon as they did.

Field Winner At Leedstown Is Beau Lady

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 30 (Spl.).—A. W. Valentine's Beau Lady took first honors in the all-age stake of the Rappahannock Amateur Field Trials Association today at Leedstown. Shenvalle Sport, owned by L. L. Stevens, and Proctor's Image, owned by John L. Reifsnider, won second and third place awards. Roy Kelly's Buddy also owned by Stevens, and W. H. Hopkins' Greenbury Boy entered the second series, but were outclassed. A scarcity of game again hampered the trials, although all of the winning dogs successfully found coveys.

Dogs in the second series were almost prefectly matched in speed, form, and range coverage. J. W. Dorsey Coke's Shellfield Proctor's Bob won the sweepstakes award in last night's bench show as the best dog displayed. The Cooke entry also won top honors in the pointer dog class. Hopkins' Annapolis Maid won the pointer bitches class. In the setter class, H. E. Eister's Beau won first prize as best dog with Wingfield's Lady Bird Spottswood taking first honors in the bitches class. Today's field trial winners and the winners of yesterday's derby stakes for dogs whelped since January, 1933, were all trained by Willie Craig.

Pairings in today's trials were:

Beau (Eister) with Annapolis Maid (Hopkins); Shenvalle Sport (Stevens) with Ginger Rock (Richardson); Energenes Bob (Burgess) with Ginger Ghost (Richardson); Ben Nuzum (Stevens) with Moat Baird (Woodward); Proctor's Image (Reifsnider) with Greenbury Boy (Hopkins); Airflow (Suttle) with Lady Bird Spottswood (Wingfield); Brownie's Ranger (Moore) with Forgotten Girl (Valentine); Misty Lem (Wiley King) with Caroline Kerk Proctor (Marshall King); Beau's Lady (Valentine) with Sheffild Lightning (Cooke); Leaply King (Richardson) with Hawk's Tommy (Meade); Silver Speck (J. Garnett King) with Roy Kelly's Buddy (Stevens).

Works to Replace Direct U. S. Relief

depend on who you talk to." Secretary Ickes has said he "could use" between $1,500,000,000 and $2,000,000,000 for housing, but he was careful to emphasize the "could."

Other Projects.

Other projected public works enterprises are said to bring the total "under consideration" to more than $5,000,000,000. And, in addition to public works, the relief administration is rapidly depleting its heavy allowance and apparently must be cared for soon after Congress convenes in January.

Pressed for information on this point yesterday, Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins shied away. In reply to inquiries if $2,000,000,000 or $2,500,000,000 would cover expenses next year, he declared "No telling what we'll need."

Despite this outlook, on the surface, for increasingly heavy outlays —both for PWA and the relief administration — President Roosevelt has given no intimation that he contemplates any such figures as are commonly reported. All evidence has tended the other way, particularly the President's Roanoke speech, in which he said:

"It must remain our constant objective to eliminate the causes of depression and the drags on prosperity. It will cost money to do this. In the spending of this money we must have due regard for the credit of the Government of the United States. That means that we can not spend at once, or in any given year, all that we could usefully spend."

That the Administration has now turned definitely away from direct relief for more "useful" means of relieving unemployment has been affirmed by the President himself. How far he will go, however, in pushing slum clearance and subsistence homesteads through the PWA, and rural industrial communities through the Hopkins administration, remains for his budget message to determine.

Hunger Marchers Halted at Albany

running board and began searching the occupants.

The scuffle was the signal for 29 other policemen to go into action. Other riders were pulled out of the car and off the trucks. Many in the party were women. Shouting, some began a dash for Albany. Others, including the women, stood aside or retreated into Rensselear. In a moment police clubs swung. A few offered resistance. Then the the police charged.

Many marchers rolled on the pavement. Officers picked them up and tossed them in a wailing group at the side of the roadway. The heap of injured was estimated to contain 30 persons, all men.

These were taken to a police station, from where the more severely injured were to be sorted out and sent to hospitals.

Meanwhile police seized the trucks and drove them to Rensselaer. The other marchers were in complete rout.

Rensselaer's chief of police, Lawrence Mould, sent nine patrolmen after them. State police and deputy sheriffs joined. An hour later the straggers were marching back along the road to New York.

Gaming House Raiders Entrap 50 Occupants

Deyoe, who had reached the fourth floor by way of the fire escape, sent an ax crashing through an iron barricade in a rear window. There was a rush for the door and the elevator.

The stairway was barricaded by a steel-sheeted door. Beyond the door Deyoe had stationed one of his men.

As the occupants started to go down the stairs, a policemen ordered:

"Stand where you are!"

The men retreated and made a rush for the elevator.

The packed lift reached the ground floor only to be met by a vice squad detective, who ordered:

"Get back where you came from!"

They did.

The men were herded back into the gambling room and policemen were stationed at an iron-grilled door, which opened on the lobby.

"The place was raided," Deyoe said, "because we are searching for four gamblers for whom we have warrants. We had reason to believe that at least one of them was in this place today and that all of them frequented the place."

"Did you have a warrant to raid the place for being a gaming establishment?" he was asked.

"No, we just had warrants for the arrest of these men."

"The place has been running for at least two or three months," Deyoe said, but vice squad men had been unable to enter to make a play.

Two men whom Deyoe believes are proprietors of the establishment were questioned by police. Instead of placing them under arrest, Deyoe said, their names will be presented to the grand jury and if they are indicted, they will be rearrested.

The persons caught in the place were required to identify themselves before they were released. A large quantity of racing slips, playing cards and other gambling paraphernalia were confiscated.

50,000 Acres Held Poisoned

'Alkali Disease' Afflicts a Big Area in West, U. S. Reports.

(Associated Press.)

Fifty thousand acres of land in Western States were reported yesterday to be afflicted with soil poisoning, making them unfit for crops and cattle.

Administration experts, who helped make the discovery, have "provisionally recommended" that this land be withdrawn from production.

Dr. H. G. Knight, chief of the Agriculture Department's Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, announced to the Association of Official Agricultural Chemists that the poisoning is caused by selenium, a chemical in the soil which has become a problem of "such magnitude that it can not be ignored."

He reported six States are definitely known to have areas of soil poisoned by selenium, though he did not name them, and said probably several other States have such areas.

The selenium in the soil is absorbed by growing plants, including wheat, and poisons cattle which eat the plants or grain, Dr. Knight explained. The affliction is known as "alkali disease." It never has been fatal to humans, however, and he stated there is no occasion for alarm nor is it any great menace to public health.

Parole Official Flays Garnett On Crime, Backs Own System much higher than that for the country as a whole.

While Sanford Bates, superintendent of prisons, Department of Justice, said that violations of paroles over the country averaged less than 1 per cent, those in the District since the passage of the indeterminate sentence and parole law, establishing the present system, have averaged 8 per cent.

During the two-year period 707 persons have been placed on parole, and 57 have violated the terms of the parole.

Crime Group Meets Today.

F. Regis Noel, president of the District Bar Association, lost no time yesterday in calling a meeting of the organization group charged with the duty of recommending the personnel for a permanent committee on criminal justice.

The group will meet at 3 o'clock this afternoon at 1331 G street. Several more conferences with judges, lawyers, law enforcement officers and laymen will be necessary, however, before the group makes its report to the committee of 40 of the Bar Association.

Meanwhile, Odell S. Smith, chairman of the public order committee of the Board of Trade, gave his indorsement to the efforts of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, to obtain 135 additional policemen, 35 of them to fill vacancies, in the 1936 District budget.

Police Held Inadequate.

Smith not only agreed with Maj. Brown that the 1,306 men in the police department constitute an inadequate protective force for a city the size of Washington, but added that his committee had pledged itself to go before the District committees on Capitol Hill and demand the addition requested.

"While I am in accord with the policy of the business men and taxpayers, who are opposed to any budget increases that will bring about an increase in the tax rate," he said, "I don't think we can afford not to have adequate police and fire departments."

Smith said his committee would hear Garnett at its next meeting and would consider what further steps it might take to assist the campaign for better law enforcement in the District.

Steele Defends System.

Steele's statement was issued as a defense of the probation system, which was attacked by Garnett at the Mayflower mass meeting.

Declaring "this is the first time that any responsible official has ever publicly attacked" the probation office, Steele said his office "does not do business, and never has, through the newspapers and over the radio. It has been doing very responsible and highly important business for more than 24 years and that without 'huff or puff.'

"The probation process does not make men and women worse, but it does make most of them better, he said." It has saved a great many thousands of offenders from becoming hardened in crime, and has returned them to their families and the community as decent and law-abiding citizens.

Cites Probation Record.

"During the past 19 years or more an average of 75 to 85 per cent of those placed on probation have made good. During the past four or five years that percentage has not been quite so high because of obvious difficulties, such as securing employment. * * *

"The public might well wonder if the large number of indictments, which are being nolle prossed for robbery, housebreaking and larceny, grand larceny, automobile thefts and other felonies have not tended to encourage and increase crime."

A classification of the 146 indictments dropped by the United States Attorney's office from October 1, 1933, through last September, showed 18 were for robbery, 13 for housebreaking, 16 for grand larceny, 19 for assault with dangerous weapons, 10 for unauthorized use of autos and 12 for nonsupport.

Police Here Scattered.

Figures compiled yesterday by police administrative officers backed up Maj. Brown's assertion at the mass meting that Washington does not have enough policemen and is particularly lacking in patrolmen.

Only about 160 men are patroling beats on foot over the entire city at one time, covering approximately 60 per cent of the District's 70 square miles. As most of them are necessarily concentrated in the downtown and more populous residential areas the outlying sections for the most part have to rely on a few scout cars.

Washington presents an unusual problem in police assignments because an extraordinary large number of patrolmen are required for post duty at legations and embassies and other important buildings.

The heavy traffic congestion that develops during the morning and afternoon rush hours also takes patrolmen off regular duty for two hours or more each day. In fact, in the downtown precincts during the peak rush periods practically every available patrolman is engaged in facilitating the movement of traffic.

At best the average patrolman has an area of three or four blocks to cover, but usually it is larger because of the necessity of doubling up for a man on sick leave or off on special duty.

Assignments Shown.

For the three 8-hour shifts, 178 men in autos, 490 on foot, 42 on motorcycles and 196 absent.

Save for the motorcycle patrol and those absent, the men were divided equally among the three shifts.

Assignment of the men among the precincts varies with the density of population and business, ranging from 56 in the Sixth to 131 in the Second Precinct. No one precinct is worse off than the other, however, according to police officials, as assignments are made proportionally.

As one official expressed it, "They all need more men."

Richmond, Oct. 30 (AP).—The Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board's operations so far have been carried on at a profit to the State, regarded from any statistical or financial aspect, A. B. Clarke, statistical secretary of the board, said today.

Commenting on a recently published analysis of State expenditures during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1934, which showed the A. B. C. Board spent $1,105,807.59, Mr. Clarke said this was a correct figure, but represented, as did the other figures in the same analysis, only one side of the State comptroller's balance sheet. He pointed out also that the picture obtained of A. B. C. Board operations was different, depending on whether it was viewed from the standpoint of the comptroller, the State treasurer or the State auditor of public accounts.

The comptroller's report, it was pointed out, represented actual disbursements on the part of the State, but made no allowance for such items as store equipment, usable for many years, or automobiles, also to be used for a length of time, which accounting practice would not charge against the board's accounts in a lump sum at the beginning of its operations.

Even from a purely cash transaction standpoint, however, Mr. Clarke said the A. B. C. Board caused no drain on the State treasury. He illustrated with the treasurer's figures, which would include all cash received by the State from the board's operations and all cash paid out on account of the board (as contrasted with the comptroller's accounts which might not show some vouchers which had not passed through his office). Mr. Clarke said that for the first quarter year of the board's operations, ended June 30, 1934, the treasurer reported receipts of cash from the board of $1,136,884.57 and payments of cash for the board of $1,119,617.63, leaving a balance to the board's credit of $17,266.94.

These figures, he said, included all that was paid out for equipment and for stocks of beverages, and did not indicate what supplies the board had on hand to its credit at the close of the period.

Gang's Victim 'Unable' to Aid Court Inquiry

Diehm 'Cannot Remember' Anything of Shooting, He Tells Judge.

Sidney Diehm, 31, shot down by a mysterious gunman in front of the Annapolis Hotel July 30, told Judge John P. McMahon in Police Court yesterday that he "couldn't remember a thing" about the shooting.

Diehm, recently released from Garfield Hospital, was called to testify at a preliminary hearing against Benjamin J. (Benny) Soloff and Robert F. Huff, charged with participation in the affair. He admitted knowing Soloff, said he had heard of Huff, but was unable to identify either as his assailant.

Taxi Driver Testifies.

Lester W. Payne, a taxi driver, testified he heard several shots and saw an automobile as it sped from the hotel entrance. Payne identified Soloff as driver of the car. Detective Sergt. Frank O. Brass said license plates on the car were listed to Huff.

Questioned by Judge McMahon, Diehm said he left home in a taxicab on the night of the shooting and went to Thirteenth and H streets northwest. From there, he said, he walked to the Annapolis Hotel. As he neared the entrance two men blocked his path and "several words" were exchanged. A moment later he was shot in the thigh.

"Can't Recall" What Was Said.

Diehm told the court he could not remember what was said when his assailants approached him. He said he never saw the men before and couldn't remember just what happened because he was 'highly nervous."

Judge McMahon continued the case until tomorrow to allow Sergt. Brass to obtain additional evidence. He charged that Diehm was "reticent" with his testimony and urged Sergt. Brass to locate other witnesses.

Beer 'Ruins' Suit, As Juror Takes A Few Too Many!

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 30 (AP).—A juror who "drank a couple of bottles of beer" today caused a mistrial in the $50,000 damage suit filed in United States District Court by Dr. Virgil Dark, of Opelika, against Eli Lilly & Co. for the loss of a foot.

The juror, Tom Owen, of Banks, failed to appear the opening of the second day of the trial today and deputy marshals were sent to his hotel.

Owen, with one eye blackened, apologized to the court for his tardiness and offered his explanation, adding that he didn't remember how he received the black eye. Judge Charles B. Kennamer fined him $50 for contempt of court and declared a mistrial.

Collector Robbed Of $75 by 2 Thugs

A. B. McNeil Forced to Drive Pair to Spot.

A. B. McNeil, 729 Fifteenth street northwest, insurance collector, was forced at the point of a gun to drive two hold-up men from Deanwood to the Beaver Dam Country Club in Maryland last night, where he was robbed of $75, his collections for the day.

As he stepped into his car in Deanwood, Mr. McNeil told Hyattsville police, the men jumped into the rear seat and ordered him to drive as directed.

At the country club, he was told to wait for 10 minutes before calling for help. The robbers escaped in a car parked near the club.

Mrs. Roosevelt Challenged to Debate by Dry

When asked by Miss Frooks for support in obtaining the Democratic nomination, Mrs. Roosevelt replied that she "could take no part in local Democratic politics, and the nominations must remain entirely in the hands of the people of those localities." She explained yesterday that she felt free to campaign for Mrs. O'Day now as an old friend, but felt she could not interfere in primary campaigns for any reason. Miss Frooks lost the Democratic nomination.

Discussing her campaigning, the First Lady said:

"I had no feeling of being the President's wife while I was speaking. I entirely forgot it, as a matter of fact, and just felt glad to be back in the campaigning as I had been in previous years. Everyone was very kind to me, the audiences appeared interested, and I enjoyed my two days' campaigning tour very much."

Opinion Divided, She Says.

She said letters approving and disapproving her activity were being received in about equal proportion.

After making her last campaign talk tomorrow night, Mrs. Roosevelt said, she will go to Hyde Park, and will vote there with the President at the town hall Tuesday. That voting was part of an old routine, she added, remarking:

"The Red Cross always has a booth outside the polling place. We join the Red Cross and then go in and vote."

Regarding the possibility that the vote of her daughter, Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, might be challenged because of her establishment of legal residence in Nevada last summer before obtaining her Reno divorce, Mrs. Roosevelt said she knew Mrs. Dall had reregistered in New York since her return. Mrs. Dall is sending in an absentee ballot from the White House.

Ranging over her usual wide variety of topics, Mrs. Roosevelt expressed sympathy for New York girl models who were facing competition from debutantes who did not need the jobs.

"Youth Needs Leadership."

She said she had attended a meeting in New York Monday night when the mobilization of human needs campaign asked a number of young men and women to discuss their problems, and declared they appeared to be seeking leadership.

"I have a great sympathy for them," she added. "They need leadership and want it. I feel that in suggesting remedies for their present ills, they are leaning too heavily on government, and are not thinking about individual remedies enough.

"One thing that impressed me was that not a single young speaker brought up religion as a solution in any way."

Mrs. Roosevelt said she hoped to hold a youth conference of her own during one of her New York trips in the near future to discuss problems affecting youth.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she had asked Mrs. Herbert Hoover, at the Girl Scout convention in Boston last week, for a portrait to be put in the White House, and said the picture would be placed soon in the gallery of Presidents' wives.

Elizabeth Wheeler Stumps for Mrs. O'Day

Miss Elizabeth Wheeler, daughter of Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, left Washington last night to join the battalion of speakers headed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt supporting the candidacy of Mrs. Caroline O'Day for Representative at large in New York.

She will join a self-styled "Flying Squadron" of speakers which is making a whirlwind tour of the State in a flag-bedecked motorcade. The purpose of the squadron is to drive home facts disclosed by the recent Senate munitions investigation.

The speaking tour is directed by the Women's International League, of which Mrs. O'Day is National vice president. Miss Wheeler, who returned recently from a speaking campaign in Montana for her father, is an officer of the District of Columbia branch of the league.

Col. Baughman Ouster Reports Are Circulated

Action Hinted This Week; Commissioner Denies He Will Resign.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 30 (Spl.).—Reports circulating among political ranks today said the announcement of the resignation of E. Austin Baughman as commissioner of motor vehicles is expected before the end of the week.

Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, it was declared, has been under increasing pressure from some of his closest advisers to oust the commissioner since the disclosure that Baughman had authorized pay increases in his department without consulting the Governor just before the employes were called on to contribute to the Democratic campaign fund.

Some sources hinted the resignation had already been requested, but official sources denied it.

Gov. Ritchie said his only recent communication with Baughman had been to call for a report from him concerning the pay raises. This report has not been received to date, Ritchie added.

"I have not seen or talked with Col. Baughman," the Governor said, "and I have certainly not asked for his resignation. I have had no intimation that Col. Baughman contemplates such action."

The commissioner declared he had not offered his resignation.

City Democratic leaders said they understood the movement for the ouster of the commissioner had been brewing for a week and had been accelerated in the last few days. It was indicated that Baughman intends to remain in office until he is called on to resign.

Commissioner Baughman has been in office since 1916. On several occasions politicians have sought to replace him.

Wild Geese Take Skyline Drive as Highway to Dixie

Luray, Va., Oct. 30 (Spl.).—The Skyline Drive is proving a directing route for wild geese and wild ducks passing through Page County, according to residents of the Blue Ridge.

Several droves of the birds within the past week in their passage from North to South have been seen following the Drive for 40 miles. Phone messages sent out from the neighborhod of Panorama, now the northern end of the Drive as finished to date, to the southern terminus of the road at the Spottswood Trail, show that the wild geese and ducks are following the bright bed of the road.

Action Is Taken On Anchorage

Crisfield, Md., Oct. 30 (AP).—Proposals for a permanent anchorage basin here were discussed today at a hearing before Col. E. J. Dent, of the harbor board of the United States Engineering Department and officials of Crisfield.

Decision was deferred. Crisfield authorities have requested the board to improve the anchorage and remove all sunken craft and derelicts.

It was proposed to build a causeway at the head of Somers Cove and dredge the cove to allow an anchorage basin. This would mean elimination of the drawbridge connecting the lower part of the town with the Jersey section. Business interests at each end of the bridge protested such action.

Action Nears Jury In Lineman's Death

Harrisonberg, Va., Oct. 30 (Spl.). The $50,000 damage suit of David Fox, Page County deputy sheriff, for the death of his son, Basil Fox, while employed as a lineman by the Pennsylvania Railroad, probably will go to the jury today in United States District Court here.

The accident occurred at the Anacostia River Bridge in the District of Columbia, in August, 1933, after a washout which caused a passenger train to plunge into the water.

The plaintiff rested his case today, claiming the pole on which Fox was working was not properly inspected. The railroad maintained the pole had been inspected and that if Fox had carried out orders in the manner in which wires were to be cut and "dead-ended," the pole would not have fallen.

New Trial Sought By Kent Counsel

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 30 (AP).—Evidence has been uncovered on the basis of which a new trial is sought for Maj. Robert C. Kent, jr., sentenced September 8 at Fincastle to serve 13 years in the peniteniary for the kidnaping of Mrs. Mary Jane Hastings. It consists of a letter Mrs. Hastings wrote a friend in Baltimore, Samuel R. Price, attorney for Kent, said today.

Mrs. Hastings, who operated the Blue Ridge Springs Hotel in Botetourt County not many miles from Roanoke, wrote a Mrs. Henderson in Baltimore, also, whom she "visited before," that she expected to "be down the following week," the attorney said. He said the letter was dated June 6, 1934.

A body identified as that of Mrs. Hastings was found beside a highway near Stroudsburg, Pa., in the latter part of June.

Budget Bureau Weighs Report But Won't Talk

General Expense Items Are Discussed at Secret Hearings.

Budget Bureau officials yesterday sped through item after item in the 1936 District estimates without giving any definite indication of what their decision would be on any particular item or the budget as a whole as submitted by the District Commissioners.

Secret hearings at which budget bureau officials decide what the Commissioners may or may not submit to Congress for consideration were begun Monday and are to continue daily until the whole budget has been considered.

Proposals of the Commissioners to increase the Federal appropriation to $8,317,500 for the next fiscal year and the general financial program was discussed at the hearings on Monday. It was only at the suggestion of the Commissioners that the question of the amount of Federal appropriation was discussed at all, it was said.

Whatever may be the outcome of the hearings the budget bureau officials apparently have not begun consideration of the estimates with such definite preconceptions as they had last year and other years in the past, it is said.

Attention was devoted yesterday to so-called general expense items in the budget. These total $2,332,690. This represents a reduction of $416,191 made by the Commissioners in the estimates submitted by the agency and department heads within the group.

These include the public utilities commission, which wants its staff restored to its strength before the House severely slashed it this year; auditor, collector of taxes, corporation counsel; People's counsel, public library, William A. Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic, and others.

Democrats Try to 'Muscle In'

Will Attempt Invasion of Franklin County, Gibraltar of Republicans, in Pennsylvania's Election Next Tuesday.

Waynesboro, Pa., Oct. 30 (Spl.).—When voters of Franklin County go to the polls next Tuesday, the issues at stake have boiled down to whether rock-ribbed Republican Franklin County will support the Roosevelt Administration's policies or continue behind the Old Guard in this normally G. O. P. stronghold.

Democrats are making their greatest bid in Franklin County to gain a foothold, which they never held.

Aside from the State offices, the county is electing a representative to the General Assembly. A. J. White Hutton, of Chambersburg, Republican incumbent, is seeking reelection. Opposing him is Paul C. Moomaw, Waynesboro Democrat, who is making his first bid in politics.

Hutton, regarded as one of the most astute representatives in Harrisburg, is one of the State's old guard. If reelected, political observers in Harrisburg say, he will be named speaker of the house. He is a member of the faculty at Dickinson law school.

Harry L. Haines, Red Lion, York County Democrat, is seeking reelection from the Twenty-second Congressional District of York-Adams-Franklin Counties to the United States House of Representatives. A bitter fight against him is being waged by Emanuel C. Beck, York Republican, former naval officer. In Franklin County it is expected that Beck will come out with a good lead, while in Adams County the result is a toss-up. The result lies in York County, where both men live. Rural York County is likely to give Haines a lead, while York, the largest city in the district, is said to be favoring Beck's election.

In Franklin County both Republican and Democratic State candidates have made personal appearances with stirring addresses appealing for voters' support.

Oyster Dredges Set for Work

Eastern Shore Season to Start at Midnight; Outlook Bright.

Crisfield, Md., Oct. 30 (AP).—With the opening of the oyster dredging season scheduled for 12:01 a. m. Thursday, Eastern Shore watermen are prepared to climax weeks of preparation of boats and equipment with an early-morning descent on the oyster beds.

The first dredges will go overboard at 1 minute past midnight to inaugurate a season which State conservation officials say should be the most lucrative in the history of the industry.

Shipments of oysters have been comparatively light from the Eastern Shore since the opening of the tonging season because of the limited supply available in the tonging areas. However, watermen say, the outlook for the dredgers is the most prosperous in years.

Approximately 40 oyster packing houses will open with the dredging season and approximately 1,500 persons will be employed.

Life insurance companies tell us that the gradual breakdown of the human body causes more deaths every year than disease germs

1 If your physical let-down is evidenced by lack of appetite... loss of weight... nervousness... sleeplessness... paleness... a tired feeling or lassitude caused by a lowered red-blood-cell and hemo-glo-bin content in the blood—then S.S.S. is waiting to help you... though, if you suspect an organic trouble, you will, of course, want to consult a physician or surgeon.

Make S.S.S. your health safeguard and, unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food... sound sleep... and renewed strength.

2 Take a course of S.S.S. Remember, your present run-down condition may have been a slow, gradual process. Likewise, a reasonable time is required to rebuild full strength. S.S.S. is not a miracle worker—no rebuilding tonic is—but it is a scientifically proven and time-tested medicine. This is your guarantee of satisfaction. Its benefits are progressive... accumulative... and enduring.

3 Moreover, S.S.S. is not just a so-called tonic. It is a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also has the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood. This two-fold purpose is important. Digestion is improved... food is better utilized ...and thus you are enabled to better "carry on" without exhaustion—as you should naturally.

If your condition suggests a tonic... if you tire easily... get a bottle of S.S.S.... take an appetizing portion just before meals. You will find it is truly a blood and body tonic. You should feel and look years younger with life giving and purifying blood surging through your body. You owe this to yourself and friends.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two convenient sizes. The $2 economy size is twice as large as the $1.25 regular size and is sufficient for two weeks treatment. Begin on the uproad today. S.S.S. is really an inexpensive way to better health and more happiness. So many have said— "S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again"

Do not be blinded by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest that you gamble with substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

S.S.S. the world's great blood medicine

Braden Stays As Manager Of Arlington

Board Deadlocked, County Officer Automatically Remains in Post.

Deadlocked and with only four members present, the Arlington County Board, meeting at the Court House yesterday, failed to affirm the reappointment of County Manager Roy S. Braden for another term beginning January 1, 1935. Another matter the board failed to decide was the retention of James Simmons, assistant in the office of Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas.

The motion of Christopher B. Garnett that Braden be notified his services are not required for another year resulted in a tie vote. A General Assembly act provides that the county manager be notified of his reappointment or dismissal 60 days prior to the end of his term and, the period having expired, Braden is retained for another year.

In the absence of Chairman Lyman M. Kelley, B. M. Smith acted in that capacity.

Contract, divided into two sections for installation of the Four Mile Run inceptor from the sewerage disposal plant in the direction of Falls Church, was awarded as follows:

Section 8a, calling for installation of 700 feet of 18-inch concrete pipe; 2,400 feet of 21-inch, 3,800 feet of 33-inch, 5,800 feet of 36-inch, and 5,800 feet of 42-inch, to the Shulle Construction Co., of Akron, Ohio. Its bid was $124,112.

Section 8-B, calling for the installation of 4,700 feet of 27-inch, and 3,000 feet of 30-inch concrete pipe, to the Noland Construction Co., of Detroit. Its bid was $101,849.75.

Discussing the installation of Y connections for houses, John Campbell, engineer, said that in many cities they are being discarded as unsuitable. The proper connection to the main line from a house is the saddle joint, he said. He and County Manager Braden were instructed to draft an ordinance safeguarding house connections.

Hugh J. McGrath, representing the Arlington County Welfare Board, asked an appropriation of $600 for an assistant to the superintendent of welfare. The request was granted.

The monthly payroll, amounting to $12,479.25, was approved by the board, except the item covering the salary of James Simmons, assistant in the office of Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas. On the motion of Mrs. Elizabeth M. Magruder, the case was held over until the next meeting. The total expenditures amounted to $19,915.02.

County Manager Braden was instructed to take up the question of straightening Garrison road, in the vicinity of the high school, with the State highway department.

John Locke Green, Republican nominee for Congress from the Eighth Congressional District, will be the principal speaker at the Republican rally in Odd Fellows Hall, Clarendon, tomorrow night.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Washington Lee High School will hold a benefit card party in the school auditorium the night of November 16. The committee consists of Mrs. E. V. Colberg, chairman; Mrs. J. W. England, Mrs. E. W. Anderson, Mrs C. E. Simmons, Mrs. W. M. Fuller, Mrs. J. A. Dickey and Mrs. W. H. Jones.

Skyline Drive Will Stay Open

Winter 'Season' Is Planned for Shenandoah Park, Says Official.

The scenic beauties of the Shenandoah National Park may be viewed all winter by the public—that is, so far as weather permits, the Associated Press reports.

A. E. Demaray, associate director of the National Park Service, said today that Skyline drive, the highway through the park, would be kept open, except during such periods when snow and ice make travel over it hazardous.

He said it is hoped that at no time would the drive be kept closed for longer than a few days.

Skyline now is completed from Panorama to Spottswood Trail.

Frederick M. Morris, rector of Grace Church, Woodside, will officiate. Burial will be in Union Cemetery at Rockville.

Surviving are his sister, Mrs. Edwin Smith, of Rockville; a son, William C. Black, of Silver Spring, and three daughters, Mrs. Orland E. Way and Miss Lucy Seymour Black, both of Silver Spring, and Mrs. Lloyd Tilghman Everett, of Deland, Fla.

Nepotism Laid To Magruder In County Tilt

G. O. P. in Prince Georges May Spread Charge in Air Campaign.

Prince Georges County is to be invaded from the air in the latest development of the election campaign there. Republican leaders are considering plans for distributing campaign literature from planes, including charges of nepotism which were hurled at M. Hampton Magruder, one of the Democratic county leaders, yesterday by Charles T. Nicholson, Democratic election judge.

It was learned yesterday that some 15,000 of the circulars carrying Nicholson's charges have been printed and some of them were distributed at a Republican rally Monday night at Laurel.

Nepotism Is Charged.

Nicholson charges that Magruder, who is a prominent lawyer at Upper Marlboro, has placed nine persons, who are alleged to be members of his family, in public office, and besides has an "adopted" family he is interested in keeping in office.

The statement mentions in particular J. Guy Bell, candidate for sheriff, and R. Ernest Smith, candidate for treasurer, as members of the "adopted family." It further charges that Magruder is aspiring to the post of Collector of Internal Revenue.

The circular urges the voters of the county to "make a change."

Magruder declared yesterday that at first he had intended to ignore Nicholson's letter, but later decided to reply. He said that since he has held no elective office himself for 23 years, he believed that appointment of any of his relatives was but a partial recompense to him for 36 years of service to the party.

Accusation Denied.

Denying that all of those listed were relatives, he pointed out that one of those named was appointed by a Republican. As to his "adopted family," Magruder declared that he is supporting J. Guy Bell because Bell's election was one of the things that the late J. Enos Ray had desired.

As far as Smith is concerned, he pointed out, he is entitled to support for his long and faithful service to the party, both as county treasurer and as deputy treasurer.

"As is my custom, I am making an effort for the entire Democratic ticket," Magruder said. "If Nicholson has any regard for propriety, he will resign his position, as he is a Democrat in presense only. I ask my thousands of friends in Prince Georges County to resent this personal attack on me and to defeat decisively the candidates who are expected to be the beneficiaries of his letter."

The county board of election supervisors has prepared 38,000 official ballots and 23,000 sample ballots. Democrats are to use 10,000 sample ballots, and 13,000 have been ordered by the Republicans.

Hurled From Scaffold, Man Hurt Seriously

Daniel Murphy, 65, of Baltimore, was injured seriously yesterday, when a scaffold on which he was working at University Park, Md., broke, hurling him to the ground.

He was taken to Casualty Hospital with head lacerations and a possible fracture of the lumbar vertebrae.

Cornerstone's Laying Slated At Alexandria

Studebaker and Davison to Be Principal Speakers at Ceremony.

The corner stone of the Alexandria High School building, now under construction, will be laid at 3 p. m. tomorrow with ceremonies conducted by the officers of Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Masons. The trowel to be used in the ceremonies will be that which was used by George Washington in laying the corner stone of the Capitol.

The principal address will be delivered by John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education, and an address will also be delivered by Mayor E. C. Davison, of Alexandria. Leroy Bendheim, chairman of the Alexandria School Board, will preside.

The public schools will close at 2:30 p. m. to permit the pupils to take part in the exercises. High school cadets will assemble at Gadsby's Tavern and, headed by the Citizens' Band, will march to the building site on Mount Vernon avenue.

The building is expected to be completed in time for the opening of the 1934-35 session in September. It will contain a modern gymnasium, cafeteria and library, in addition to a sufficient number of classrooms to take care of the estimated increase in enrollment for several years to come. It is located on a tract of approximaetly 17 acres, and wil cost in excess of $300,000, funds for which have been borrowed from the Public Works Administration.

The controversy which has been pending for several weeks between Raymond V. Long, State school arhcitect, and the Alexandria city council as to whether buff or red brick would be used in this construction has been definitely settled by the PWA authorities in Washington, who held that the council will be permitted to use red brick. The brickwork, which has been held up pending this decision, will be resumed at once, it is understood.

Alexandria was visited Monday by Teav VII of the 21 teams of missionary speakers of the Episcopal Church, composed of the Bishop of Mexico, the Rev. Richard Trapnell and Miss Emma J. Hall. There was a luncheon conference for the clergy of the Potomac convocation, given in St. Paul's Parish Hall, and attended by practically all the ministers of the convocation.

The Rev. Mr. Trapnell explained the action of the general convention as to missionary finances, and the bishop told of his work in Mexico. In the afternoon the bishop and Miss Hall met 75 women in Christ Church Parish Hall, and Miss Hall conducted a round table.

At a dinner given in the George Mason Hotel, at which Robert South Barrett presided, Mr. Trapnell again explained the church's amended policy founded on "capacity to give and willingness to share." Bishop Salinas also spoke briefly.

After the dinner a large congregation gathered in St. Paul's Church, including the dean and three professors from the Episcopal Theological Seminary of Virginia; 12 ministers in surplices and several in the pews, and representatives of the four Episcopal churches in the city, as well as from Fairfax, Clarendon, McLean, Pohick and Falls Church. The bishop gave a picture of the prevailing ignorance and superstition in Mexico, and pleaded for support for the native clergy.

The Young Democrats Club of Alexandria will hold a meeting at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow in the George Mason Hotel, and a meeting of the city Democratic committee has been called for the same time and place by Chairman Charles C. Carlin, jr., to obtain cooperation of the Young Democrats in getting out a large vote in the coming general election in the interest of the Democratic nominees, Senator Harry F. Byrd and Representative Howard W. Smith.

Mrs. Margaret Burke, 72, widow of Michael Burke, died Monday night in the Alexandria Hospital. She is survived by three daughters and three sons— Mrs. H. J. Pero and Mrs. E. Shiflett, of Alexandria; Miss Mary C. Burke, of Washington; John S. Burke, Cambridge, Mass; Michael M. Burke, Washington, and William G. Burke, Alexandria. Mrs. Burke lived at 136 East Lloyd avenue. The funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Prescott Sees Fusionist Split Over Dr. Conley

Says Dissension Will Send Democratic Ticket to Easy Victory.

Charging a pre-election split in the ranks of the Fusion party in Montgomery County that has caused widespread dissension in the ranks, Stedman Prescott, Democratic candidate for State Senator, last night predicted an easy victory for the Democratic ticket at a campaign rally in Silver Spring.

Prescott laid the trouble to the primary fight between Gov. Ritchie and Dr. Charles H. Conley, declaring that espousal of the Conley candidacy by certain Fusion leaders had caused them to break with others in the party.

He said Fusion Leaders Charles Jones, John E. Oxley, candidate for State Senator opposing Prescott, and William L. Aud, campaigned for Conley in the upper end of the county, where the Rockville physician polled a substantial vote. This action, he said, caused a second group headed by Edward Peter, Vivian V. Simpson and Walter K. Bachrach to split when the latter group was accused of not working hard enough for Conley.

Bachrach, Mr. Prescott said, is extremely interested in land development in the county and hopes to place his personal attorneys in the position to counsel the county commissioners in the event of Fusion success November 6.

Prescott said: "Bachrach plans to place his personal attorneys, Peter and Miss Simpson, in such a position that they could work arrangements that would benefit him materially.

"If the so-called Fusion party can not keep itself free from dissension of this sort there is a certainty that if elected the leaders would use their political offices for personal gain."

Roger J. Whiteford, Washington and Maryland attorney, denied Fusion charges that special privileges in land purchases had been granted certain members of the Democratic organization by showing that the county paid less for land asquired from members of the party than other parties had paid for adjacent land acquired by private interests.

Miss Lavinia Engle, Democratic candidate for county commissioner, and James H. Pugh, candidate for State's attorney, also addressed the meeting.

Leader's Picture Given to District

Presentation was made by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, who described Mr. Bride in the following words:

"Man of sincere attitude in whom understanding and justice dwell not apart. Friends of this District of Columbia joined with the gifts of gentleman, lawyer and administrator. Under the variant usages of our tongue, a complete citizen."

Many Hurt in Riot Over Relief Slash

Denver, said he would give any aid asked.

The workers at Table Mountain tonight had erected a huge barricade of loose stone and said they would defend their mountainside position.

The riot broke today after a committee called on Gov. S. C. Johnson yesterday and declared unless its demands were met there would be violence.

Mob Attacks Policeman.

Gov. Johnson, who is without authority in relief matters in this State, referred them to C. D. Shawver, State relief administrator, whose discharge was one of their demands. Shawver declined to meet the committee.

Today the motorized column of the group, which called the strike yesterday, went to the Platte River project. Headed by a fifer and drummer, they pushed through three policemen who were there and marched through the working area, wresting tools from workmen.

Sergt. Henry Durkop seized a leader and was set upon by the mob. Other patrolmen arrived and were escorting the prisoner when the crowd, estimated at 200 men and women, broke through their ranks.

Still holding their man, the police began to use their clubs. Then Patrolman C. V. Satt fell. What happened is not clear, but police thought he had been shot. His condition tonight was critical. His skull was fractured.

Riot guns were on hand, but the police used only their pistols.

When the pistol fire began the crowd fell back. The police pushed their advantage and rioters were loaded into their cars and hurried out of the county.

Dispersed for the morning, the group gathered at 2 p. m., for a previously scheduled meeting. Surrounded by police, some 500 men and women, accompanied by many children, listened for an hour and a half to scores of speakers.

This is the annual community full-course turkey dinner given by the association, and a 50-cent fee is to be charged.

Charles Elgin Rites Held at Poolesville

Funeral services for Charles Elgin, 67, of Poolesville, Md., were conducted yesterday at the home by the Rev. Guy H. Crook. Mr. Elgin died Sunday after a long illness.

Besides his widow, he is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Arthur Mann and Mrs. C. A. Ritchey; three brothers, John T. Elgin, Edward W. Elgin, of New York, and Dr. A. G. Elgin, of Poolesville.

FHA Fund Aids Restoration of Gadsby Tavern

(Associated Press.)

Virginia's Governor, George C. Peery, yesterday helped add another piece to the history of old Gadsby's Tavern—a roof reisoration by FHA funds.

In an address celebrating the receipt of a $600 loan by the Alexandria (Va.) American Legion, present owners of the place, Peery said the occasion symbolized the whole better-housing campaign in Virginia.

State Housing Director D. R. Hunt, who accompanied him, gave the Federal housing program credit for having stimulated a $1,876,000 improvement program in Virginia within two months, and predicted the amount would reach $2,500,000 in the next two weeks.

He reminded his audience that George Washington began and ended his military career at Gadsby's, and there foregathered with John Paul Jones, the Marquis de la Fayette and Baron DeKalb.

"Memories of them, the gay gatherings, the solemn meetings, the mysterious missions linger, and it is to keep them as they were that this modernization loan is made under the provisions of the new Federal housing act," he said.

"However, this is not a sentimental loan, but one arranged on a strict business basis."

Trotting out its colonial costumes, Alexandria made a gala occasion of it. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, scheduled to have been the honor guest, was not present, and Peery was presented with a sheaf of golden chrysanthemums intended for her.

Church Revival at Laurel.

An old-time revival is being held at the Baptist Church in Laurel, Md., continuing each evening until November 9. The Rev. G. Harold Hill, a young minister from Marcus Hook, Pa., is the preacher. Musical talent from neighboring churches is assisting the regular choir.

Suspect Freed Of PWA Fraud

Jury Acquits Crisp of Forging Checks of Man With Poison Ivy.

A Prince Georges County Circuit Court jury yesterday acquitted W. P. Crisp, of Colmar Manor, Md., on charges of forgery of a PWA check.

The specific charge on which Crisp was tried was forgery of a check amounting to $7.50 issued to Lawrence Williams, colored. Crisp was assistant timekeeper on a University of Maryland project at Beltsville on which Williams was employed. He had been indicted on six other counts totaling approximately $42.

Crisp told the jury that he had felt sorry for Williams when the latter became infected with poison ivy and had kept him on the pay roll. He declared he signed the check with the consent of Williams and said he received a portion of the money.

M. H. Davis, in charge of county PWA projects, had declared that Williams returned to the project and said that he had found private employment after recovering from the poison ivy and now was out of employment again and wanted his job back. This led to an investigation, which resulted in the indictment.

We, the undersigned members of the Montgomery County Bar, recommend to the voters of the County as candidate for Judge of the Sixth Judicial Circuit F. Barnard Welsh, of Rockville.

Daily opportunity to observe Mr. Welsh in the practice of his profession as an active trial lawyer has won him the admiration and respect of the members of his own profession.

We feel that 30 years of active trial work enables him to bring to the bench a sound knowledge of people, wide and varied legal experience and that evenness of temperament which can be acquired only after many years of work in the legal profession.

To this end, we recommend him as a lawyer, well founded in law, and having the judicial temperament necessary to fulfill the duties of the high office of Judge.

The Cost Of The Bonus.

Congressman Lewis, candidate for re-election from the Sixth Maryland District, is under fire from certain organized veteran groups because of his consistent opposition to payment of the bonus during a period of deficit financing. And this week the Congressman has carried the war into the enemy's camp by a broadcast addressed especially to holders of life insurance policies.

In this address Mr. Lewis showed that under a regime of uncontrollable inflation, the heaviest sufferers are those who have invested in life insurance policies, contributory pensions and other fixed and non-disposable obligations. He pointed out that the paid-in value of life insurance policies in this country approximates the value of this country's railroads and that one out of every four in our population is either a holder or a designated beneficiary of one or more policies.

It was progressive currency inflation, Mr. Lewis explained, which resulted in sweeping away by far the greater part of life insurance investment in many European countries. After eventual currency stabilization German policy holders received, under an adjustment plan, only 10 per cent of their investment. In France, the amount recovered was 20 per cent, and in Austria only one-tenth of 1 per cent.

Mr. Lewis is not at all sensational in asserting that the proposal to pay the soldiers' bonus in greenbacks would start currency inflation with "no more hope of controlling the subsequent train of events down the toboggan of fiatism" here than abroad. A bond issue for the purpose he properly regards as equally disastrous, because of the destructive effects it would have on Government credit. So he courageously repeats his intention to stand or fall on his record in this matter, and to fight renewed attempts to expose our people to a menace that has ruined millions of hard-working Europeans during the past decade or two.

The effort of some candidates for Congress to attract thoughtless votes by indorsement of immediate cash payment of the bonus is a contemptible political maneuver. And, as Mr. Lewis points out, it is one which could easily cost the country many times the $2,200,000,000 ostensibly involved.

Life's Little Ironies.

Lou Tellegen went through life with a great handicap. True, his handsome face brought him fame and the adulation of women. But one can not help thinking, despite his confession that "women have been kind," that had he been less handsome he would have been much happier.

There was something particularly tragic about the way of his ending. He must have arisen, conscious of the fact that he was suffering with an incurable disease, and proceeded to the day's routine in the regular way. But, half-shaved before his bathroom mirror, he suddenly decided that the face which thrilled a thousand hearts, in the days when the phrase "matinee idol" meant something, was no longer his friend. A. E. Housman once wrote that he heard his finest songs while shaving. Lou Tellegen may have thought so, too.

Lou Tellegen had got by on his face for a good many years. But when the matinee went out and the movies began opening their doors at 9 in the morning, there was less and less demand for his personality. The screen is less kind to its favorites than is the stage. Science (if face-lifting belongs in that category) failed him. And pain racked his once lithe frame. So, the other morning, he fumbled his way voluntarily from life to death. And the woman whose name has always been most associated with his in the public mind, said of the news: "It doesn't interest me in the least."

A tragic ending to a life which, despite its handicaps, Lou Tellegen probably loved. It undoubtedly has a moral, if you want to search for it. Perhaps it is nothing more than that Ponce de Leon's goal can not be found in the beautician's office, even by matinee idols.

Inevitably Dull.

Probably no country in the world has as dull newspapers today as Germany. One need only to look at the slipping circulation figures to realize the dire consequences of censorship and propaganda. Berlin, they used to say, was a city of bricks and newspapers, but the dead hand of rigid state control has long since palsied the latter.

Now Paul Joseph Goebbels, propaganda minister, appears displeased with his handiwork. He has issued a book of rules for editors, because, as he says, the "dullness in the German press must cease." He is sharply critical of the timorous output of political, financial and society editors. But he shows no consciousness of the reason for lack of spontaneity. In fact, he issues orders which, if obeyed, can only result in a further decline in the once admirable standard of the German press. "An editor," he says, "must not only be the best man for the job, but also a good propagandist conscious of what propaganda is most suited for his paper."

What is more dull than propaganda? Only propaganda continually repeated. When the editors of Germany regain their freedom, and when they print their newspapers with the idea that there is nothing more stimulating than actual news, honestly told, and conscientious opinion, vigorously presented, Paul Joseph Goebbels will once again find the newspapers of his country readable. But we rather suspect that when that day comes the opinions of Paul Joseph Goebbels on the subject will not be quoted.

The Naval Negotiations.

The summons of former Secretary of State Stimson to the White House must be taken as an indication of the seriousness with which developments at London are regarded by the Administration. In face of the threat to the Washington Naval Treaty which is implied in the Japanese demand for parity it is admirable that the President should take counsel with an important spokesman of the preceding Administration. The action helps to illustrate that continuity in our foreign policy which has happily come to be independent of, and superior to, the changes of domestic politics.

For months it has been hoped that a formula of agreement would be reached during the preliminary conversations which have now continued for a fortnight at London. It is possible, however, that the issues are too fundamental for compromise. Japan believes that attainment of the principle of naval equality, immediate or delayed, is a matter of national honor. The United States, no less categorically, believes that any material change in present treaty ratios would be a threat to its national security.

Like all really difficult issues this is one in which it is easy to understand both of the opposing viewpoints. No objective judgment can fail to sympathize with the Japanese contention that so great a power should not be bound by treaty obligations to a position of naval inferiority. And the Japanese have strengthened their argument by assurances, made to the British, that if equality in principle is granted there will be no effort on their part to build up to either British or American strength.

Unfortunately, however, such assurances can scarcely be made binding. And in the absence of any effective pledge they would probably lead to constant suspicion and recriminations. A case in point is furnished by Japan's initial assurances that her operations in Manchuria would in no way affect the sovereignty of that Chinese territory. Perhaps because the shades of meaning in those original assurances were misunderstood, many have been led to believe that Japanese policy has diverged considerably from the objectives at first announced.

Because informal assurances are unsatisfactory to all parties, and because from the American viewpoint the 5-5-3 ratio already gives Japan superiority in the Pacific, it has so far proved impossible to secure a formula of compromise. The last argument possessed by the American delegates—the unquestioned ability of this country to outbuild others if an actual naval race is launched—has not been used. Nor should it be. For if agreement can not be reached by reason and good will, it is unlikely to be attained by any attempt at coercion.

The last word at London, of course, has not been said. It is still possible that the British, who have apparently tried to play the role of "honest broker" between our delegates and the Japanese, will decide to take a positive stand which would further agreement. Anything like an Anglo-American combine would be as undesirable as would be a common Anglo-Japanese front. But it is to be recalled that much trouble might have been averted in 1914 had the world known in advance, with crystal clarity, whether Britain would jump, and which way.

In the meantime, before anything like a crisis has developed, and while there is still ample scope for conciliatory forces, it is pleasant to know that the broad background of former Secretary Stimson is being utilized in the formulation of our policy. The problem is one which concerns the National destinies of at least three peoples. It is one in which every government concerned should consult all shades of informed domestic opinion before taking any irrevocable step.

Obsolete Budget Machinery.

Budget-making for the District of Columbia has been transformed in the last three decades from a loose and unsystematic arrangement to one of the most complicated schemes in existence. Prior to 1909, local agencies that were not directly under control of the District Commissioners submitted their requests for appropriations directly to the Secretary of the Treasury, who referred them to Congress without revision. Estimates for other local agencies were grouped into a loose preliminary budget by the Commissioners.

The current practice is to assemble all requests for appropriations from District funds into a single carefully drawn budget. In drafting the current proposals the Commissioners conducted public hearings and made an extensive analysis of community needs as well as of prospective revenue. Their budget is a compromise between the urgent need for civic improvements and the strong desire of the public to avoid higher taxes. All of the Commissioners' work is now being duplicated, albeit in a superficial way, by the Federal Budget Bureau.

The local officials considered each problem on the basis of community needs and resources. Presumably the Budget Bureau will now arbitrarily revise the total figures in accord with Federal policy, as it has done in previous years. Between these two methods there is no common ground. A satisfactory budget can not be anticipated when it must be judged by two widely different standards. And the assumption that the District budget inevitably needs executive revision is no encouragement to the careful preparation it should have.

Development of the executive budget is one of the most important steps toward orderly governmental finance that has been taken in recent years. But that affords no reason why a municipal budget should be distorted by the application of a formula designed for Federal bureaus. Conflicting budgetary control is in reality a step backward to unsystematic procedure and divided responsibility. Budget-making for Washington will scarcely be worthy of the name until the Commissioners have been given the right to send their estimates direct to Congress.

Clarify The Objective.

Washington's anti-crime movement has reached a critical stage. Civic groups and officials have been aroused to the necessity of action. But upon what specific objective should their energies be centered? As Corporation Counsel Prettyman said at the mass meeting on Monday night, "No assistance comes from hysterical yelling." By far the most difficult steps remain to be taken.

That law enforcement will be strengthened by this movement is indicated by the selection of a group to organize a permanent committee on criminal justice. Waves of emotion do not prevent crime; nor do they bring criminals to justice. But an active committee, chosen to represent the community in a permanent effort to uproot the sources of crime, is in a position to render service of inestimable value.

It will be the duty of this committee to direct scattered community efforts toward a practical objective. In order to do that, the committee must first know the nature of the crime problems in Washington and the most effective remedial measures. A mere stab in the dark would accomplish nothing, even if directed by the most energetic committeemen. If this campaign is to be systematic, if it is to enlist the support of thoughtful citizens, it must proceed on the sound basis of fact and expert analysis. In other words, a competent investigator is needed to give direction to the committee's efforts.

There is always a tendency to demand revision of the law when organized crime arouses a community protest. Experience indicates that such an approach to the crime problem is singularly ineffective. Doubtless some of our statutes are weak. Improvements may be expected from amendments dictated by experience. But the letter of the law is, after all, a minor factor in the control of lawlessness. It would be a serious mistake to turn this present community effort off on to the tangent of mere legalistic adjustments. The committee will do well to defer the formulation of objectives until the whole situation has been studied with the aid of disinterested experts.

It may be several months, or longer, before this long-term program of more effective law enforcement can be outlined. In the meantime more adequate public protection is urgent. There is no reason why the deliberations of this committee should delay augmentation of the police force. Under some false theory of economy Washington has 35 fewer policemen today than it had in 1925, in spite of the phenomenal growth of the city. Maj. Brown has repeatedly asked for more men, but Congress has given no heed to his arguments.

Criminals are quick to learn where law enforcement is weak. If they are concentrating in Washington, it is because they have had little reason to fear the local police. The most effective blow that could be struck at gangdom in the District would be an aggressive policy at police headquarters, supported by an enlightened community drive against the underlying sources of crime. That such an aggressive policy is contemplated was indicated by yesterday's surprise raid. More of these, without undue suppression of the identity of gambling-house patrons, would be in order.

Halloween.

Halloween is given over to pranks, parties, sprites, hobgoblins, witches and gimcracks galore, not forgetting the hollow, lighted pumpkin-shell. It is, of course, emphatically a children's evening, evoking fairy-like lore to stimulate their delighted imaginations in a way and to an extent that not even Santa Claus can do on the more august holiday later on.

Halloween is unique, jolly yet mystic, and mystic in its own peculiar way. In appealing to children's fancies it subconsciously associates itself with those elder days when civilization was also in its more childlike phase of social evolution. It carries us back to the old lure of superstitions and the like and reawakens half-forgotten hereditary memories in the process.

And, perchance, there is a more serious side to this brief festive celebration. Jokes are in place, and uppermost; yet beneath it all lies the great psychic fact of the unknown. Somewhere in the universe, and sometime, why may not fairies, for instance, have existed? Or other imagined beings? Is not the very fact that man has imagined or can imagine such beings a sort of evidence that they have been or can be?

Subjective? Of course; but does the matter end there? Or, if we try to probe the matter of spooks, of spirits of those departed, while we are justified from the scientific standpoint, in being smilingly skeptical, to say the least, have we the right to be more than agnostic? "There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy."

Meantime, on with the dance, the jollity, and the children's laughter!

It wouldn't be so bad for the majority of the adult population to follow the funny characters in the comic strips if they didn't go to the polls and vote for similar characters.

Scientists are at a loss to understand why kangaroo bones were found in Africa, near Johannesburg.—Press report. Possibly once upon a time there were kangaroos there.

Letters to the Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Long Chances.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Commissioner Hazen's stern ultimatum, "Get the gangsters," reminds the old-timers of that famous slogan of other days, "Get Villa"—and will probably accomplish about as much. All the determined resolutions, and all the impassioned luncheon talks, will result in no permanent betterment as long as fundamentals are ignored. Humanity abhors fundamentals, but loves miracles. We like to start wrong and then pray for a miracle to get us the right answer.

The gambling instinct springs eternal in the human breast. Witness the bridge game, the poker game, the marble game, the church fair. Everybody knows about it, but to do anything about it would be preposterous. If the laws against gambling in the District were strictly enforced, there wouldn't be enough people on the outside to feed the people on the inside. Home and club and church gambling are respectable, but gambling house and alley gambling are not.

Since the exit of prohibition, gangdom has turned to the gambling racket, and it was apparently a war among gambler racketeers that resulted in the death of an innocent bystander the other day. Nevada has met this problem by licensing gambling, and when gambling houses are licensed and are open to police inspection the gambler racketeer passes out.

The Travel-Lectures.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A traveler, who has been many times to Europe and several times to Asia, desires to express her wonder at The Post's travel-lecture course. Thus she enjoyed "On Wings of Memory," also in belief that she may return abroad at no distant date to gather and use knowledge of the people in foreign countries. As I looked over the Masonic Auditorium and into the faces of many I realized the big work you are doing.

An Oppressed Minority.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the last 15 years I have been a regular visitor to the Balkan States and particularly I have been interested in that little kingdom of Albania in the western part of the Balkan Peninsula. This little country made certain promises to the League of Nations to respect the privileges of the minorities residing in that country and, under those conditions, was admitted to the league. Among the promises were that the Albanian government would not interfere with the teaching of Greek in the parochial Greek schools maintained entirely at the expense of the Greeks residing in Albania. There were 360 of such schools, but the present government has abolished these privileges and has forbidden the teaching of Greek in any form in the country.

When I was there about a month ago, the Albanian government had placed in jail most of the Greek teachers because they had disobeyed the order. This terrible condition was reported to the League of Nations in a petition signed by more than 10,000 Greek residents of Albania.

Just why Albania should prohibit the teaching of Greek, when in every civilized country Greek is taught, is beyond my understanding. I thought it my duty to record these observations for the benefit of your readers and I will thank you if you publish this letter, as I believe The Post is the most cosmopolitan and widely read newspaper published in the Capital of the United States.

Crime And The Home.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As an observer of human emotions and reactions, I wish to call your attention to the fact that Washington, a city which I admire greatly, and in which I hope some day to reside, is making the usual human mistake in becoming indignant at the killing of an innocent person.

It would be well and right for her to do so should the desired results be permanently effected, but, as in the usual case, this agitation will cause only temporary relief and in a few months the condition will be as at present. We hear much said on rehabilitation of a criminal, and a coveted few are striking at the real base environment and the attitude of the home. But our real duty is to eliminate or supplant a criminal tendency by proper parental direction.

Our only and lasting hope, I believe, is going backward—that is, as far as parental discipline is concerned. We, as a Nation and a people, pride ourselves on being modern and possessing intelligence; but it seems to me that intelligence is something which we are losing—or have never achieved. Do you think we would have Dillingers, Floyds, and Nelsons if we were the intelligent individuals we claim to be? It is doubtful.

Personally, I have only one solution to suggest; and that is to give the American home back to the American people as it was during the time of our ancestors.

VERNON C. HAMILTON.
Washington, Oct. 29.

Unanimous Thanks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At the recent special meeting of this federation, on motion of Mr. Thomas J. Llewellyn, chairman of the committee of highways, parks and waterways, it was unanimously voted to thank and commend the press of Washington for its help in securing the sewage disposal plant for the District of Columbia.

Post Hoc, Propter Hoc.

(Ed. note: It is the policy of The Post to place its letter columns at the disposal of the community, never indulging in censorship merely because the writer's views are at variance with our own. For that reason we are glad to print the following unrestrained attack from Dr. Abernethy, regardless of language so immoderate as to dissipate, in our opinion, the value of the point he seeks to make.)

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Opening my copy of The Post this morning I was greeted by 11 alluring liquor ads advising me to buy this or that brand of whisky. No doubt you are finding it very profitable. One of these ads occupies a full page lacking one column. I am sure the business office of The Post has been tremendously stimulated since the advent of legalized liquor.

But is there not another side of this question that you ought to consider? Surely you have observed the amazing increase in the arrests for drunkenness since liquor became legal. For the first five months of the current year, according to official police reports, there were 10,101 arrests for drunkenness in this city as against 6,950 last year for the same period. That is an increase of 45 per cent. And be it known, too, that the police are not in the habit of picking up a man unless he is disorderly or unable to find his way home. That is not the worst of it. The number of arrests for drunkenness is apparently increasing steadily.

You must have noticed, too, that street fatalities in this city, as in other cities, are mounting to frightful proportions. It is perfectly evident that this sudden and startling rise has some connection with free flowing liquor.

These distillers and retailers of liquor are spending their money in advertising in your columns, not primarily to enrich your coffers, but to increase their sales. They want to open new markets. They care not a whit how many road fatalities may be caused by drunken drivers, or how many homes may be wrecked. They want to sell more whisky that they may bring in more dollars. And The Post, through its acceptance of these ads, is a contributing factor to this sorry tale that is being unfolded daily on our streets. The blame for every death that is caused on Washington streets by a driver who has been drinking must be laid partly at your door. You are loudly calling through your editorial pages for the exercise of greater caution by drivers, and through your advertising pages are helping to increase the toll of death.

In the name of thousands of Washington people who are offended by these liquor ads which appear in your columns daily, I wish to protest. You are putting out a good paper, and I want to commend you for that. But you are, through the methods you are now employing, causing a rising tide of resentment among a large number of your subscribers whose patronage I do not believe you can afford to lose.

WM. S. ABERNETHY,
Minister Calvary Baptist Church.

Pleasant News!

Two identity disks, one pending from the other, were worn about the neck of every American soldier during the World War. In case the wearer became a battle casualty, one disk was cut from its string, and the other remained on the body.

To safeguard the identification system further, it was made a court-martial offense for a soldier to be caught without his disk.

But these precautions were not enough, the War Department says, so now it considers a plan to tattoo soldiers for future wars. Why they were not enough is apparent. The identity disks were not infrequently blown to pieces along with that part of the wearer's body from which the tags were suspended.

The new identification scheme of the War Department is practically bomb-proof, and the term is used liberally. It purposes to tattoo the soldier on each shoulder and hip. If so much as one member of the deceased remains, it can be identified and given what might be whimsically called a decent burial.

This latest proposal suggests the degree of perfection in the planning for the next war. A "basket case," true enough, would lose his identification numbers and might cause some confusion in the hospital. The man who had the misfortune to run point-blank into a high explosive shell would also be unaccounted for. But only about one soldier in 5,000 goes to his death in this manner, and occasionally there is some one close enough to report that the deceased vanished in thin air.

So war is becoming gradually less horrible for the folks at home. And there will be less work for the Graves Registration Service.

Aunt Tillie's "Trouble"

Postoffice, Wednesday.

"EVERY time I take a drink I get a headache," said Aunt Tillie.

She told all her friends. Although she did not have many enemies, she told the few of them with whom she maintained "speaking terms." Everybody living on her street near Dupont Circle had heard that every time Aunt Tillie took a drink she got a headache. She mentioned it each morning, to her maid, over the boiled egg—and each evening when she took a drink.

"Ever since Prohibition went wherever it went," said Aunt Tillie, "drinking has disagreed with me."

* * *

We hasten to warn you against forming a false idea about Aunt Tillie's habits. They are not quite so vicious as she sounds.

Aunt Tillie—she's Kenneth's real aunt, but a score of wouldbe nephews and neices clamorously claim vicarious relationship—is probably the last surviving woman in Washington to deserve all that was implied by the good, old-fashioned title of "Maiden Lady." She wears a lavender-ribboned lace-cap over her silver hair; has delicate blue-veined hands, and walks about the house with the unnecessary aid of an ebony cane. She was born there when her parents kept a coach-and-pair. She "came out" during the brief Garfield Administration and swiftly went in again.

She never drinks anything alcoholic except:

(a) One glass of champagne at Christmas-dinner (with Kenneth);

(b) One "thimbleful" of Sherry—with a dainty piece of "raisin-cake" and an afternoon-caller;

(c) One glass of what she insists upon calling "claret" at every lonely "evening-dinner" of her life.

* * *

"I've done that for 60 years," she said, "and it never hurt me at all, until last month. But I have often heard that these things are cumulative. I suppose I am now paying for past dissipations."

* * *

Aunt Tillie had never before given token of egoistic hypochondria; yet, once these suspicions of wine seized upon her, they hardened into a fixed idea. Inevitably, Nephew Kenneth had to hear all about it when he came to Washington.

Kenneth is an interne at a Richmond hospital. His aunt holds a low opinion of his medical abilities. Nevertheless, she adores him, and, since he does have a diploma-right to M. D. himself, he was a target too inviting to be shunned.

After listening to her symptoms for an hour or so, he gave her a thorough examination in a neighboring physician's office. Alas, he could discover no flaw!

"Humph," said Aunt Tillie. "You're a lovely boy, Kenneth, but, if you can't find anything the matter with a patient who suffers excruciating headaches every time she takes a drink, you can't be much of a doctor."

Kenneth told her she evidently had developed an idiosyncrasy against alcohol: "All you have to do is to give up wine."

"I am too old to change the pleasures of a lifetime."

"Well, then, you'll probably be all right if you just take an aspirin tablet after the wine——"

"Aspirin!" Aunt Tillie came as near anger as her shocked dignity allowed. "Aspirin is a drug. I am surprised at you. It's bad for the heart. Aspirin? Haven't you always heard me say that aspirin is one of the curses of the new generation? Aspirin . . ."

Kenneth had forgotten her prejudice—and she refused to hear his counter-arguments. She would not give up her claret, and she would not take aspirin. What he had to take was his leave—under the heaviest cloud of her displeasure.

It wasn't dissipated until his return last week—to find her cured!

"Yes, Kenneth, completely—and," she condescended, "there's a professional lesson in this for you. I consulted a doctor more abreast of the times. He has just returned from Germany. He recognized my symptoms and gave me a wonderful medicine—not a drug, perfectly harmless, but thoroughly efficacious. I merely take one of his pills every evening after my claret. They were discovered only a year ago and are manufactured in Leipzig, by a secret process."

Kenneth hadn't heard of any such discovery.

"Precisely my point, dear boy. You should read the European medical journals." She produced an unlabeled phial of pellets. "They do cost fifty dollars the bottle, but they are well worth the price."

* * *

It required considerable finesse for Kenneth to get samples. Aunt Tillie refused his five-dollar offer for a single pill. However, she succumbed when he explained that he wanted some to analyze in his Richmond hospital and thus enlighten himself and spread the new blessing throughout the Old Dominion.

* * *

But now he is worse off than ever. He is in the toils of professional etiquette and dares not show himself to his aunt. He hates to lie; yet if he does show himself to her, she will certainly ask him a question the true answer to which will shock her prejudices and destroy the reputation of her learned doctor just returned from Germany.

For laboratory analysis has shown Kenneth that Aunt Tillie's fifty-dollar secret-process Leipzig pills are aspirin, all aspirin—and nothing but aspirin!

Spain's Revolution Is Vividly Described

By Col. William McCleave, U. S. A. (Retired).

MADRID, Oct. 12 (By Mail).—I hardly know whether it was good or bad fortune that led me here on the eve of the Socialist revolution. At any rate I was tied up in the city for days, unable to do any outside sightseeing, so it has been necessary to remain far beyond my anticipated two or three days. But this enforced stay has not been without its compensations. I know something of the complex political situation in Spain.

I saw Madrid change from a busy, teeming city to a city still teeming without any business: stores shut up, metal shutters tightly barred, sidewalk cafes were barricaded behind chairs and tables, restaurants were closed. Breadlines were formed to receive the rough product of the army ovens. I observed the public services crippled, only to be taken over and operated after a fashion by the police and the military. Filth and rubbish piled up in the streets, helped along by the strikers, who delighted in casting torn newspapers and other trash into the main thoroughfares.

I mingled with the idle crowds, noting their gloomy countenances, their furtive glances. No "gay Madrid," this. I witnessed the transition from civil peace to a state of war. Soldiers were everywhere. The army, largest of the military forces, the guarda civil, ancient organization from the days of the monarchy; the guarda de asalta (shock troops), offspring and special guardian of the republic; reservists, police, all cooperated to preserve public order and reestablish public services. Patrols and sentinels everywhere looked for signs of trouble, and ferreted out known enemies of the government. Flying squadrons were ready to swoop down on raiding revolutionists. Soldiers guarded public buildings and hotels; ran tram cars, drove taxis. Soldiers manned water wagons, lighted street lamps. Soldiers did all manner of things. Soldiers were everywhere. Martial law!

I HEARD the crack of musketry, the ping of bullets, as the forces of the law beat down Socialist guerrilla gangs or sought to search out skulking snipers on the roofs or hit-and-run fighters who sought to harass and wear down the morale of guards and populace. Several times about dusk, the favorite hour of attack, I, with other thousands, sought the shelter of side-street or open doorway at the sound of shooting. In a moment of quiet, hands aloft, as is the custom in time of revolution, I threaded my way by devious dark streets back to the protecting walls of the hotel on the Gran Via, a block from the center of disturbance, the 15-story Telephone Building. There I observed from darkened windows the uneasy progress of belated pedestrians hurrying homeward, likewise with hands raised.

Day after day I sought the English-language newspapers from Paris and London, even a French journal. But, no, they were somewhere between Madrid and Paris, or perhaps down in the railroad yards or at the postoffice. The newspaper kiosks are not open and the hotels are not receiving their mail. Three Madrid papers, non-union, were on the street. The illustrated ABC and El Debate had to do; at least one could look at the pictures. Madrid was a "lonesome town."

* * * *

I have had ample leisure in which to ask why Spain must have general strikes, revolutions, continual and violent opposition to the government. The answer is not far to seek. It is the old story of a militant minority endeavoring to impose its will on an overwhelming, but generally vacillating, majority. Spain has long been a seething caldron, politically. We recall the dictatorship of Primero de Rivera under King Alfonso XIII, from 1923 to 1929, six years of progress, progress such as Spain had not known in centuries.

But the way of even a dictator is sometimes hard. Rivera, having outlived his usefulness, was finally dismissed by his sovereign. Another shortlived dictatorship followed, took the wronk tack, and failed to act decisively on important questions at issue. Strong opposition to the monarchy developed. This new dictator was out after little more than a year. The monarchy was finished, with Alfonso XIII on his way to France after a secret flight from the royal palace in Madrid.

THUS, on April 14, 1931, came about the Republic of Spain. Scanning the political horizon from this point, one is reminded of the old saying, "This life, the next, and then the fireworks." Nothing but fireworks! Ten cabinets in and out in three years. Three since December, 1933, on the heels of the last election. Each conceived in compromise, each forced out in violence.

First, the parties of the left, ardent founders of the republic and led by the Socialists, formed one government after another in four years in the face of strong opposition from the parties of the center and right. Much of their legislation was socialistic, even extremist. But the general run of Spaniard is naturally conservative, and in the elections of last November he demonstrated this by sweeping the Socialists out of power to the tune of 278 deputies to 100.

Spain wears a political coat of many hues; there is the dyed-in-the-wool monarchist, of the Catholic party; the reddest-of-the-red Communist; and, in between, parties of every shade, representing the diverse and varying tenets of the right, the center, and the left. Spain is the paradise of the politician.

Spain, also, is a land of many and conflicting racial groups, with varied dialects and differing political and economic aims. All are descendants or admixtures of Iberian, Phoenician, Roman, Visigoth, Moor or of French or British troopers.

Small wonder that north disagrees with south, Catalan with Castilian. So the political war goes merrily on. No Spanish Mussolini, nor, as elsewhere, one of those strange egotists with equal stomach for murder and music, has yet arisen to beat into line the contending factions in one great national movement.

AS early as last August the fall of the Samper cabinet was forecast with considerable accuracy as to date. The perennial pressure of Catalonia was being handled with kid gloves, to the disgust of the conservative majority. The drift toward the right was alarming the rabid republicans. On October 3 the storm broke on the floor of the Cortes (congress of deputies), with a bitter attack on the dilatory tactics of Premier Samper by Deputy Senor Gil Robles, Catholic leader. He withdrew support of his party, sealed the doom of the government.

Premier Samper made a bitter reply, admitted the resulting impotency of his ministry. On October 4, Samper and his ministers handed in their resignations. The Socialists, in spite of their minority position, demanded control of the new government, with dissolution of the Cortes, threatening the alternative of revolution. Dissolution of the Cortes would have called for new elections. With the Socialists in control, their success would have been assured.

For once, President Zamora acted with vigor. On October 5, in the face of specific threats, he named Senor Alejando Serroux to form a new cabinet. More compromise followed, but in a dangerous direction, further toward the right. Three of the new ministers were of the Catholic party (monarchists) — a shock even to conservatives, a slap in the face for Socialists and other Leftists.

THE REPUBLIC must be saved, even at the cost of blood, said the alarmists. The Socialists were prepared; 40,000,000 pesetas went into munitions, scattered over the country. The Socialist militia, instrument of the party, swung into action. Attempts were made to seize government buildings and the government. The miners of Asturias, well armed, were on the warpath, battling loyal troops. Catalonia, alive to its opportunity, declared its independence; but its government, the Generalidad, underestimated the temper of the army. Now it languishes in prison, along with Don Manuel Azana, one of Spain's strongest statesmen, summarily to be tried for treason. All of this was accompanied by a general strike and paralysis of business.

With it all, strangely enough, no wild disorder or destruction of property occurred. As always, the mass of the people did not know what it was all about. All that saved Spain from disaster was the loyalty and the commendable energy of its military, combined with the support of its large conservative element. Many are dead, estimates varying from hundreds to thousands. So also is the revolution dead.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Getting In On the Ground Floor.

(Showing the difference between five years ago in Wall street and today.)

"Who's that prosperous-looking fellow over there?"

"That's Wimmuk. Most successful operator in the stock market. Made a fortune in six months."

"How?"

"Kept out of it entirely!"

"Is he unusually smart or just lucky?"

"I dunno. Must be smart, I guess."

"He must be on the inside. You can't be as successful as that and not be."

"Of course. To keep out of the market the way he has you have to have inside dope. Have to know just when it's a good time not to buy anything."

"Do you think it's a good time for me not to buy anything now?"

"I think it's a perfect time. There have been only two or three better times not to buy anything in history. It is at a time like this that great fortunes are made."

* * * *

"Gee, I wish I had your connections."

"Well, it just happens that I've got a cousin who is very close to one of the biggest firms in Wall street. I can't mention names—but he gets first-hand information on all stocks not to buy."

"You're lucky. I bet you clean up."

"I should say so. I must have made $50,000 in the last six months by not buying anything. This cousin of mine gave me three stocks, right from the inside. I figure I made $25,000 in those three alone."

"You bought 'em?"

"No, I never touched 'em."

* * * *

"Say, could you let me in on a good thing some day?"

"Is it good?"

"The biggest men in Wall street are not touching it. All you've got to do is string with them."

"Do I not touch it for a quick turnover or a long pull?"

"How long?"

"Well, I figure that if you don't buy it for the next three years you'll be well fixed."

"Thanks."

"Don't mention it. And if I hear from time to time of some swell stocks not to buy I'll give you a ring."

I like to see the football games
In weather mild or raw,
But the ones the papers tell about
Are not the ones I saw!

Do You Remember—

Away back when a young girl wouldn't drink raw whisky openly at a college football game, and when not even her mother would guzzle it out of the bottle?

Among the interesting football scores was: Huey Long, 29; Vanderbilt, 0.

The King of Siam is considering abdication. He no longer wants to be brother of the moon and could content himself with being a distant cousin of the Big Dipper. He may also give up the title of supreme arbiter of the tides, a job that bores one after the first week or two. And (this is probably what cheers him) he no longer cares to have the responsibility for the 24 umbrellas.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

Jim, the Goat

THE editors are always harping so much on Jim Farley's number of jobs that it is strange they omit one of his most important ones. In addition to being the Postmaster General, the National Democratic chairman, and the New York State chairman, it should be quite apparent that he is also the Administration goat.

BARGERON

Inasmuch as no effort has been made to sell him to the country as one capable of running all agriculture, all industry or as one whose heart for years has beat in sympathy for the common man, but as simply the party's political manager—inasmuch as he has simply been sold as this, every time anything goes wrong they blame it on Jim. The idea, presumably is that it would not do for the "great minds" to come in for ridicule. Yet it is a fact that Jim, regardless of what he did, could not be as rediculous as many of them.

It is also a fact that the job assigned to Jim he has done well, so well, in fact, that he is the secret envy of every politician in the United States.

* * * *

The matter is brought up because of the most recent ridiculous mistake assigned to him, the Upton Sinclair rubber stamp episode. All a mistake on the part of Jim, it is said, that a letter went forward indorsing Sinclair, and the editors ask how long the Administration can stand Jim's mistakes. My guess is that it will stand them as long as Jim will stand for being the goat.

The plain truth is that the rubber stamp episode reflects a change of heart on the part of the Administration. It had intended to go along with Sinclair. Finally, it decided it had better not do it. Its reasons, I suppose, are manifold. And it may be significant that the decision not to go along was made after the authoritative information came back here that Sinclair's goose was cooked.

There were other things connected with the renunciation ceremony which in themselves should cause one not to take seriously the explanation that it was all a rubber stamp mistake on the part of Jim. One was Mr. George Creel's statement after a visit to the White House and the definite declaration by Senator McAdoo that his program of speechmaking would not permit his going into California to speak in behalf of Upton.

News reports out of California following this renunciation ceremony were that Upton is now washed up. They were inaccurate. The information had been that he was already washed up.

* * * *

The Administration's change of heart has not been confined to Upton. It seems to have suffered a reversal in regard to Senator La Follette, Senator Cutting and those other Progressives whom Mr. Roosevelt was at first patting on the back.

He has not publicly withdrawn this pat, of course, but events of recent weeks hardly justify the earlier belief that he secretly would like to see them win but can't openly support them because it would offend the Democratic candidates. The Democratic National committee is working tooth and nail to defeat these gentlemen and one can't escape the fact that Mr. Roosevelt has some influence with the committee.

It would be interesting, in fact, in view of the activities of the committee in their respective States, to know what the gentlemen concerned now think of that earlier friendly pat.

* * * *

It is a matter of conjecture over a wide range what brought about this seeming flip-flop of Administration sentiment. Mr. Frank Kent makes the point that the Administration must look to delegates for the 1936 convention and for that reason could not afford to go counter to the Democratic leaders in the hitherto Progressive States. I doubt that this explanation fully explains. Because the Administration would have no trouble getting delegates from those States even though the existing leaders frowned upon it. The Administration would have only to set up new slates of delegates and recognize them as the "regulars" at the convention. It has been done before, and quite easily.

The real reason for the change, I suspect, is the Administration's realization that it had better not encourage third-party movements and independents too much, that it had better get all Democrats.

No End of Books

John T. Flynn's "Security Speculation" Plays Chess With Apologists for the Exchange.

By Theodore Hall.

FOR some time now I've been mulling over the stock market. Not with intent to throw my hat in the ring—I prefer a melee where the boys weigh in at about the same figure.

To someone still a bit hazy about debenture bonds and noncumulative preferred stock, John T. Flynn's "Security Speculation: Its Economic Effects" (Harcourt Brace, $3) makes pretty solid reading. It takes me more than a glance to get any sense from a page packed with huge figures preceded by dollar signs, no sum of which is less than 500 times the amount of lucre I expect my grandsons to amass in a lifetime. But slow as I was in comprehending, I must say I was unflaggingly interested.

The author of "God's Gold," "Investment Trusts" and "Graft in Business" (as well as some scarifying articles in Harper's Magazine) might be anyone's—except stock-brokers'—favorite expository author. He advances slowly and carefully; he builds up his case; and then he comes down on his opponents like a ton of bricks. It is, to say the least, a grand show.

* * * *

But remember that Mr. Flynn is perfectly serious. When he flays the Stock Exchange, its members and apologists, for certain malpractices, he flays them in terms which any impartial intelligence would use against the more obvious forms of bad logic—notably, argument by assertion.

John Doe, scorched in '29, will back up Mr. Flynn's charge with considerable emotion. Richard Roe, unscorched (because he wasn't near the fire) but interested in the exchange as a social fact, will watch Mr. Flynn's moves as if the book were a chess game. He will: Mr. Flynn check his opponents time and again, and he will applaud such sound and skillful playing.

* * * *

Primarily, the book is a warning to stay out of stock market speculation. The outsider hasn't a chance of even keeping his money. As the exchange is run, it is "a game between the insiders and the general public, with the public shut off from the sources of information about the instant shifts and eddies and turns of the market to which the exchange members have immediate access, and with the outside public paying three, four and five times as much to play as the members."

Secondarily, the book proves up to the hilt that stock market financing had no appreciable share in building up the country's railroads, utilities and industries. Stocks do not enter the scene until the enterprise has already been financed, and is on its feet and going.

Thirdly, Mr. Flynn shows how superficial is the exchange in the economic life of the while Nation. Even stock investment—which he is not attacking at all—involves no great share of the population. Out of 123,000,000 people, there can be no more than 2,500,000 stock-holders. But as to speculators—whom he is definitely attacking—their number must stand at about 560,000. And for all the activity of these gentlemen, only a very small fraction of the tangible wealth of the country is involved in their operations.

Indeed, Mr. Flynn makes the stock exchange into such a post facto and private sport that, glancing at his subtitle, I am hard put to see that the exchange has any "economic effects" at all. It does not finance business enterprise; it is not necessary to the sale of securities; its pricing of securities, even if unsound, affects only those who are foolish enough to speculate.

And yet there is a glimmer of economic effect, which Mr. Flynn might well have made stronger. The pyramiding of issues lays an absurd burden upon the earning powers of a corporation (but it does not destroy that earning power). The artificial whipping-up of stock prices by the Street—"making a market," in the brokers' euphemism, and quite indiscernible from bare-faced manipulation — keeps true values dark to the uninitiated investor. And the gravest charge is this: "More than any other force, it (pricing stocks on future earning power) has drawn us away from the equitable course of limiting the shareholder's claim upon industry to a reasonable return upon his actual contribution of capital to that industry."

In other words, the stock exchange provides too glamorous and irresistible a prospect of getting something for nothing. "Caveat emptor," however, has never gone out of date.

* * * *

But though Mr. Flynn flays the present technique of the exchange, and finds the Securities Exchange act altogether too flimsy and pusillanimous (he gives specific points in his last chapter), I'm still puzzled.

Granted a wholesale reform of the exchange, how can it help to stabilize the economic life of the country? How can a tail, no matter how well washed and combed, make the dog any healthier? It seems to me that Mr. Flynn was having so much fun with his curry-comb that he would have us believe the tail can wag the dog.

"I shaved myself this morning!"

Prying Passion

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

THE last day of October is Halloween, short for Halloweven, short for All Hallows Eve.

It being the night before All Saints' Day, it became customary in England centuries ago to celebrate the occasion with mirth and fun; a faint autumnal echo of Mardi Gras, or the Tuesday before Ash Wednesday, the beginning of Lent.

Harmless and amusing games took place on Halloween. Cracking nuts, "bobbing" for apples in a tub of water, and various mild revelries around the fireside were the order of the evening.

In more northern latitudes, especially in Scotland, there was a fascinating if somewhat fearful fever of superstitions associated with Halloween. The rural population believed—with more or less sincerity—in the superstition of the discovery of some mystical charm—which revealed the future in general, and in particular the future bride or bridegroom. Thus the whole festival had the glamour of romance.

It is therefore interesting today in every village and city of the United States when boys and girls celebrate Halloween with more or less fun in the way of practical jokes—that they are doing exactly what people did many centuries ago. They are carrying on an ancient tradition.

The lanterns made out of pumpkins, the mock horrors and all the element of the grotesque —are simply in the direct line of the Halloween superstition.

On one occasion in my own experience, the element of mirth and the element of foretelling the bride combined in the happiest manner. We had the house filled with mysterious lanterns, strange sights and stranger sounds. On the top floor were held games: a young clergyman bobbed for apples, as a consequence soaked his shirt front, as a consequence got a bad cold on his lungs, as a consequence went to an Adirondack sanatorium to get cured, as a consequence met an attractive girl there, married her and they have lived happily forever after.

The best poem ever written on the combination of humor and superstition of this day is Robert Burns's poem, "Halloween," to which Burns wrote the following introductory note:

"The following poem will, by many readers, be well enough understood; but for the sake of those who are unacquainted with the manners and traditions of the country where the scene is cast, notes are added, to give some account of the principal charms and spells of that night, so big with phophecy to the peasantry in the west of Scotland. The passion of prying into futurity makes a striking part of the history of human nature in its rude state, in all ages and nations; and it may be some entertainment to a philosophic mind, if any such should honor the author with the perusal, to see the remains of it among the more unenlightened in our own."—B.

Argentine Polo Star Dies in Plane Crash

Buenos Aires, Oct. 30 (AP).—David Miles, one of Argentina's leading polo players, was killed today when a plane he was piloting crashed near the town of Junin, Buenos Aires Province. Carlos Tillie Bell, well-known sportsman, was also killed.

The death of Miles, who was 43 years old, was considered a severe blow to Argentine polo. He ranked among the four best players of the country.

New Deal Now Needs Some Real Planners

Dean Donham Cites Necessity for Special Group to Coordinate Policies.

By Elliott Thurston.

CLOSE observers of the New Deal in action will agree with Wallace B. Donham, dean of the Harvard School of Business Administration, that President Roosevelt is attempting the impossible task of coordinating programs single-handed. Dean Donham is a "constructive" critic. In an address before the New York State Society of Certified Public Accountants he discussed the difficulties and conflicts inherent in the existing Governmental organization in Washington and suggested establishment of a general planning board, freed from administrative distractions, to assist in formulating policy.

"Our National cabinet," he said, "is a conglomeration of department heads rather than a group which determines general policies. These difficulties were serious under simpler conditions, but now as the State must take on new burdens the necessity for better organization is great. There must be clear recognition of the difference between thinking and acting, between determining policies and carrying them out.

"Specific programs," he said, "are based on conflicting social and economic theories. Much is done without reference to either logical or practical limitations upon human capacities and accomplishments. Emotional control, wishful thinking and good resolutions spawn hectic activity, and action is esteemed evidence of accomplishment. Sweeping regulations are little tempered by realism. Even when objectives are hardheaded, discipline and coordination are lacking."

* * * *

BY PLANNING, Dean Donham does not mean a quest for Utopias. "Foresight in any general sense for any long period," he said of the Utopians, "is logically impossible and National planning based on such foresight beyond the capacity of man. Under such conditions to plan for Utopias is to stop thinking and efforts to attain Utopias are efforts toward chaos."

He has in mind the violent conflicts in policy which have characterized much of the New Deal. He is proposing, what thoughtful New Dealers have lately been advocating—the creation of a group of Presidential advisers—not administrators—who will consider policy from practical as well as theoretical standpoints, who will survey and comprehend the whole panorama of governmental purpose and policy with a view to rational integration and correlation. Finding men of sufficiently broad training and experience, who are at the same time disinterested, is no easy matter. Nevertheless, it has been long evident that the New Deal, while it has alleged coordinators, has had no real coordination.

Secretary Wallace, in his writings, has proclaimed the absence of considered, rationalized policy. It is all too apparent. The New Deal has been, for the most part, a succession of separate attempts to deal with a series of problems. Not only is little time or attention given to relating action in one field to action in another, but no medium exists for the kind of forethought meant by Dean Donham. Cabinet members do not function as a general council. Cabinet meetings are given over largely to routine and individual departmental matters. Existing emergency councils and advisory boards are only different combinations of these and lesser administrative officials.

* * * *

WITHIN the New Deal there is continued conflict between spenders and savers, inflationists and deflationists, nationalists and internationalists, practical men and impractical visionaries. Out of the ferment come innumerable plans, projects, policies and politics. Mr. Roosevelt alone shoulders the responsibility and burden of approving or disapproving. Solomon himself could not have been wise enough for such a superhuman task. The frequent result is confusion, cross-purposes, undoing with one action what is being attempted by another. More and more the Government tends to become a one-man affair, particularly in a period when there is no effective, organized opposition. Blocs and cliques succeed in dominating according to their persistence or ingenuity.

The beginnings of a change are becoming visible. As the pressure for emergency action abates, calmer councils, more reasoned, rational approach to fundamental problems become both more possible and imperative. Now that the New Deal and the banking business world have shown a new disposition to pull together, to understand each other's viewpoint, the vital thing is to translate the "better feeling" into better practical results. And this depends to a large degree on better Governmental oganization such as Dean Donham suggests.

Washingtonian Buys Large Fauquier Estate

Warrenton, Va., Oct. 30 (Spl.).—Kilkenny, a tract of nearly 900 acres, near Orlean, Fauquier County, has just been purchased by John Arthur Hinckley, of Washington.

Mr. Hinckley, who is secretary to the American Minister to Canada, has been affiliated with the Old Dominion Hounds for several years, and proposes to build a hunting box on the estate in the spring. Kilkenny, owned by the Braxton family of the Fredericksburg section for several generations, was once the property of Chief Justice John Marshall, from whom the place descended by inheritance.

U. S. Rejects $4,200 In Income Tax Action

The Department of Justice rejected yesterday a proffered compromise by Leon Blackman, of St. Paul, in a suit charging him with income tax evasion, the Associated Press said.

Blackman had offered to compromise for about $4,200, officials said, whereas the Government was claiming civil and criminal liabilities of around $62,000. A previous trial at St. Paul ended indecisively. The department said a new trial would be held Novmber 12.

Belle of the 60's

Those dear dead days of hoopskirts and bustles . . . hour-glass figures and mustachioed villains . . . are not beyond recall. They are brought back vividly in the yellowed leaves of a buckram-bound volume called "The Belle of Washington," published in 1858 . . . a tearful tome revealing the most sacred thoughts of a debutante of the 60's.

In an amusing story, Hope Ridings Miller tells of this deb's elegant dress . . . the splendor of her parties . . . and the dashing style of her equipage . . . and recites the heartrending tale of how she learned that "although duplicity and falsehood may seem to prosper, its fruit is bitterness; whilst the practice of virtue brings pleasantness and peace."

Kay Ware.

If you feel you're too old to go creeping around in a sheet, ringing doorbells and soaping windows, there are plenty of other ways you may be gay and giddy tonight.

Shoreham's Max Lowe decided that the only thing that would make festivities festive would be the Albertina Rasch dancers themselves. You've seen them many times on stage and screen, and they will appear in the "Merry Widow" starting at a local theater Friday.

Held over are Eugenie Gray Woodruff and James Struthers, society dancers, whose Park avenue grace is lovely to behold. Also John Hale, tenor of the Vanities, and the Paxton Sisters contribute.

Favors, noisemakers, fancy decorations, and an extra effort on the part of the management complete the bill.

Maryland Club Gardens opens its indoor cabaret tonight. It's called Club l'Hiver and please don't pronounce it like the delicacy that comes from the calf. Try Lee-vair instead. Means "winter" in French.

Club Michel imports more entertainers from New York. Ginger O'Neil is a red-haired singer, Audrew Jones dances and Jack Beckman is master of ceremonies. Also, Crawford and Caskey, dance team, go in for satire in the collegiate manner.

If Halloween offers you an afternoon holiday, drop in Club Chanticleer and listen to Senor Don Gomez play the organ. His repertoire includes South American selections.

Pete Macias is inclined to think the "Goblins will getcha if you don't go to Heigh-Ho." But he wouldn't really wish hardships on anybody.

To prove it, he's working very hard concocting extra entertainment for tonight. Ramon practices on a smoother "Good evening," George and Frenchy, the gentlemen behind the bar, shake and mix with new inspiration, and the dance team, Enters and Borgia, count off their best dances on their fingers and decide to give them all.

Mayflower coaxes a witch into the lounge. In her boiling kettle she'll brew charms and deadly potions, so if you have an enemy, ask the witch to help you out. If you have a friend or two, treat them to the potions mixed behind the bar, the soft and subtle music by Sidney and orchestra.

Epitaph.

The ghost and naughty bugaboo.
(I don't believe in them. Do you?)
And so, a prayer—a little pause,
And then, with loud and bold guffaws
We'll bury them with Santa Claus.

Madrillon believes in spicing its floor show as well as its menu. "Three Ginger Snaps" from the Carolinas play mandolins, guitars, banjos and other stringed instruments you may mention. They sing as peppily as they play.

Dancing folks of the show are Allen and Mona Drake and Toma Genare, held over from last week.

The Drakes have a new number—impression of a gigolo and gigolette. Very modern! Miss Genare's whirl number brings down the house. Her slave dance is full of breaking of chains and shattering of illusions.

The regular comedian, Jack Schaeffer, tells you about "Annie's Sister Fanny," and if you're well educated, you'll understand all its academic illusions. Ray Donahue sings romantically and makes you sigh at your dancing partner.

Never-to-be-forgotten: Brusiloff and his violin.

Two more cocktail lounges prepare to make tonight a real holiday. Hi-Hat and the Bamboo Room import a few hobgoblins and other entertainment.

Hi-Hat's Hawaiian Troubadours, with their South Sea Islandish rhythms and harmonies stroll between tables and play request numbers; new cocktails adorn the beverage lists. Find out what a "Monkey Gland" is. One warning: Don't look at yourself in the blue mirrors unless you're feeling strong.

Bamboo Room promises lots of noise, some of which you may make yourself with the aid of those twirling and hammering gadgets. John Slaughter is musical host, and is assisted by Ernestine Gardner and Fenton Froom, singers.

Blonde Libby Rowland, now singing at Casa Rita, says she could sing before she could talk. Evidently her talents were recognized, because she has contest winnings and scholarships to her credit. Discovered in South Carolina mountains. Met Three Aces, then was heard by Madrillon's Brusiloff and as a result sang at Madrillon for 22 weeks. Sang at New York's Stork Club.

Did you know that Marie Fowler, now singing at La Paree, is a local girl? Before she made good she lived in Congress Heights; now she's moved to Silver Spring. Started a radio career in New York with Edith Reed. Has sung over WGY and WJSV. Is small, brunette, pretty and prefers vocal career to matrimony.

And did you know that La Paree is presenting a floorshow that sports seven featured performers not counting a chorus, Rocco Plaza, the M. C. and the orchestra? Their names are Gussi Stader, dancing with fan; Sylvia Kaye, who taps on toe; Beatrice Golden, whose dance is Russian; Anita Bender, with a rhumba; Lillian Lopert, with a hotch (short for hotcha) number; Ruth Mann, acrobatic, and a dance team, De Ronda and Barry.

The Lotus Restaurant borrowed its show from Earl Carroll's "Vanities." The girls have been chosen for their good looks and their acting abilities. The entertainers total 16; there will be songs and dances suitable for the occasion.

King of Revelry Brooke Johns plans to return to play host at his Barn after his trip down Constitution avenue. If you want to see him in a reveling mood, drive out to Norbeck tonight.

The sign is up at the gate so you can't miss the place. If the upper floor looks deserted, it's because it's warmer downstairs, so the dancing and merrymaking is done there. They've put in a dance floor, installed heating, and a 10-piece colored orchestra.

As Brooke says, "Dancing from 9 o'clock till—?" and the question mark is a big one.

Projects division of the PWA had a party at the Barn last Monday. Among those present were Phillip E. Fleming, acting deputy; Fred E. Schnebfe, P. F. Seward, Mortimer Moorehouse and George T. Heckert, passport division of the State Department.

Randal Gardens is bigger and better. Tonight is the formal opening. The dance floor is enlarged, the orchestra, Ridgeley's Hollywood Serenaders, is in the middle, there are two shows—one at 11 the other at 1 a. m.

The place with the glass front, Sho-Case, is under new management with a new orchestra. Dine, dance, sip, and no parking worries.

Cotton Club's shows are packed with "Mellerdrama" and chills, knives and desertions. And the actors really can act! You'd think you were at a theater instead of a night club.

Two different shows a night, and plenty of excitement. Somebody said, "Cotton Club's an experience." Right.

Survey of tomorrow morning: Fall over garbage can tops on the front steps, . . . "What I'd like to know is, Who soaped up my parlor windows?" . . . crumpled paper hat over one ear . . . wooden noise-maker still dangling from hip pocket . . . confetti . . . in hair, behind ears . . . Finger Nails Assist Chemist To Solve Arthritis Mystery

(Copyright, 1934, by United Press.)

With only finger nail clippings as clews, a detective in the person of a research chemist yesterday announced solution of a mystery of medicine.

The chemist is Dr. M. X Sullivan, of the Chemo-Medical Research Institute at Georgetown University, who has spent years studying arthritis.

By analysis of finger nail clippings of normal persons and arthritis victims, Dr. Sullivan discovered that the sick persons showed a deficiency of sulphur in their nails. Further study resulted in the theory that injections of sulphur compounds might help.

Such injections were tried. Within a few weeks the patients showed the normal amount of sulphur in their finger nails, and, more important, they improved in their physical condition.

"In the majority of the arthritic cases the low cystine (sulphur compound) content of the finger nails seems to imply an intoxication factor which draws on the sulphur complexes and thus diverts the sulphur from its normal channel, which would lead to the finger nails containing at least 11 per cent cystine," Dr. Sullivan explained.

"From other lines of work we have evidence that other conditions tied up with infection, or, more correctly, the presence of injurious material generated perhaps by micro-organisms, give finger nails with a lowered cystine content."

Eckener Given Right to Land At U. S. Fields

Plane's Merits, Demerits Discussed Before Aviation Body.

The merits and demerits of airships were argued yesterday before the President's Aviation Commission as the Navy granted authority for Dr. Hugo Eckener to use its landing stations at Miami and Lakehurst when his new giant dirigible crosses the Atlantic next summer.

The permission, however, was accompanied by the stipulation that Eckener must pay the expenses of landing his LZ-129, larger than the Navy's Macon, which will be used for the test flights.

Eckener said he intended to start the new service in July, using the Miami base only if weather conditions force him to go south from Lakehurst. The service will continue three or four months, the new airship then being put on the Germany-to-South America run with the Graf Zeppelin.

Subsequently King went before the policy-mapping Aviation Commission and urged development of airships for both military and commercial purposes.

But Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, assistant chief of the Army Air Corps, insisted that "no Government, Army or Navy funds should be diverted to commercial airship development"—certainly not before "the needs of National defense are cared for."

Rear Admiral H. I. Long, retired, a member of the Shipping Board Bureau, and E. P. Farley, former chairman of the Shipping Board and prominent Pacific Coast steamship operator, both told the commission that the Government should construct rigid airships for operation by private steamship lines.

Duck Hunters Die In Shallow Water Concealing a Bog

Frankfort, Mich., Oct. 30 (AP).—The bodies of two Frankfort duck hunters, missing since Sunday night, were found late yesterday in Little Platte Lake.

The victims, Helmer Erickson, 29, and Gale Robinson, 28, were caught in the heavy mud near the shore of the lake, and pulled down to their deaths in two feet of water only a few yards from the shore.

Their bodies were found upright in the mire with little more than their heads above the surface of the mud. The water barely covered the tops of their heads. It is believed they accidently ran their canoe aground, jumped out into the knee-deep water, and sank into the mire.

Pastry Animals First Models Of Decorator

A Washington architect, Edward St. Cyr Barrington, called "Billie" because his name is also William, may have started his career with a cookie, but many of night life's most attractive settings are the results of his later efforts.

He grins about his first inspiration. "I was about 4 at the time, I guess. I remember holding the animal cracker in one hand and drawing a likeness on the wall paper with the other. I drew and drew and pretty soon I couldn't reach the uncovered part of the paper, so I climbed up on a table, lost my ballance and fell off.

"Mother scolded me; said I had offended her, and that I was not to draw any more. I quit then. They had to paper my room three times in four months." He leaned back and laughed and his blue eyes twinkled.

When he was 10 he met J. H. De Sibour and when he was 11 he was learning to draw in Mr. De Sibour's office. Now Mr. Barrington has many important architectural ventures and adventures behind him, among them (in the night-club field) the Lotus Restaurant, Madrillon, Heigh-Ho Tap Room, Spanish Village, the Press Grill, and many hotel private dining rooms.

Inventor-Mechanic Artist.

He is a tireless worker, an inventor, a mechanic, an artist, and somewhat of a philosopher. He's a stickler for detail, and will spend almost any amount of time and money to achieve the effect he wants.

"When I opened the Westchester Gardens in White Plains, N. Y., I offered the kids a cent apiece for lightning bugs. So all the kids went to work. One little boy came to me and said, 'Mr. Barrington, you'll have a hard time counting 'em, but here are 236 bugs.'

"All right, said I, and here's $2.36."

"I must have collected about 5,000 which I let loose the opening night in the big hall. (He spread his arms.) They were beautiful, just a big cloud of glowing bugs on the ceiling!

"Oh, yes, and another time I spent three hours catching a live spider to spin me a web. I was doing the Spanish Village—when it belonged to Peter Borras—and cornered a spider in the basement. I put a wad of cotton on the end of a stick, lured the spider with a dead fly, his feet got tangled up in the cotton and he couldn't get away. How I ran! I turned over tables, and pushed people off the sidewalk yelling, 'I've caught a live spider—out of the way!' They thought I was crazy."

Blind Too Natural.

So he set the spider to work spinning webs about old bottles used in the decorations. He antiques the bottles with powdered pumice stone—dust to the customers—and had special cracks put in the glass windows.

"The Spanish Village was supposed to be a simple semi-poverty-stricken inn in a poor town," he explained. "I slept on boards to get myself in the mood for it; knew what it was to be hungry for the same reason.

"I fought for detail. I hung one blind and tore it so naturally that people wouldn't sit at the table by it. Borras, who is one of the most patient and understanding clients I have ever had, called me up and said for heaven's sake let him tack up the blind; he was losing business.

"I wanted a donkey to walk around carrying the tea and coffee, but Peter balked at that. What if the donkey had ideas of his own? What if he didn't want to walk between the tables? So I had to give up that idea."

In the matter of research, the architect reserves the right to use his imagination. Says Mr. Barrington, "I wanted buffalo on the walls of the Madrillon's Mayan Room. Peter said there were no buffalo in South America. But I imagine that the buffalo might have swam across from this country. Furthermore, the Mayan temples are lavishly decorated with elephants, and there have been found no trace of elephants that might have lived there.

"The splayed door of the Mayan Room in the original plan—they have removed it now—represented the tragedy of man," he related. "At the bottom of the door were two men, thinking." He cupped his chin in his hand in the best Rodin manner. "At the top of the door were serpentine decorations representing Man's final conqueror, the worm," he went on. "So it goes, and the worm, small and unimportant as it is, waits to devour."

Operates a Mill.

Jumping from the historian and philosopher, Mr. Barring, on his practical side, owns and operates a mill. There he has a machine that will make worm holes and passages so naturally that you'll look for the worm itself. Mr. Barrington has a special formula for antiquing wood, for rusting hinges, smoking ceilings.

"If a customer wants an antique wood paneled room, I bury the boards in the ground and let Nature do the rest," he said. "I'm working on a special formula now, through which I can transfer a photograph to wood to look something like a bas-relief. Which will mean you can have your portrait on your coffee table or your best beau permanently a part of the woodwork.

"Heigh-Ho-Tap Room was my first attempt at the Early American decoration. I had to put myself in the mood of the old Puritan fathers. I made holes in the hickory shutters—I imagined they had holes in the shutters through which they could put their muskets while fighting the Indians. I shot holes in the fireplace as the Indian might have done."

"My next job will be the Belasco Theater. I have to talk to Steve Cochran about it. It'll be—if the job goes through—like the Casino de Paris in New York. The interior will be like an Arabian chieftain's tent, the stage the opening; and across the back drop camels and people will move—lantern slide effect. It'll take a lot of money, but ought to be magnificent when it's finished.

"Yes, I like Arabian designs. Best of all, I like the Spanish; it's rugged and masculine, and flexible enough for a designer to incorporate his own ideas."

Barrington Finds His "Hall."

A few nights ago Mr. Barrington sat in the Lucky Strike Tap Room, one of his creations, and wrote an article. He says he can write better than he can talk, and his talking is amusing enough. This is part of what he wrote:

"I have a belief that all the many rooms in our minds lead to one immense hall. In other words, all the talents we develop are, after all, only effects leading back to one cause. But this cause is too far away, too vague, for the average individual to find at the outset."

So Mr. Barrington, artist, scientist, inventor and philosopher, has found his "hall" in interior architecture.

Stolen Jewelry Found In Candidate's Store

Philadelphia, Oct. 30 (AP).—Joseph E. Abrams, 28, proprietor of a jewelry store, was held in $15,000 bail today charged with receiving stolen goods, recovery of which was said by police to clear up four robberies.

Police said Abrams, who is a candidate for the State Legislature, had no way of knowing the articles were stolen.

P.-T. A. Debates Aid in Politics

Special Meeting Is Called to Decide on Backing for Candidates.

Division on the advisabilitiy of indorsing political candidates has resulted in a call for a special meeting of the Bladensburg Junior High School Parent-Teacher Association Friday at 8 p. m. The association last week indorsed four candidates who had pledged themselves to support erection of a senior high school.

Harry G. Mercer, vice president, charged the meeting was packed with those who favored the policy of giving indorsements. He said he personally was opposed to such a move and believed the majority of members also were opposed to such a policy in the belief it might inject politics into the school system.

The meeting was called by P. J. Newmaker, president, after a petition requesting it had been circulated. The notices of the meeting urged members who feel dissatisfied with the results of the last meeting to attend and express their feelings.

Association officers say the membership is united in its effort to obtain a senior high school. It was pointed out that defeat of the indorsed candidates might be considered as a repudiation of the need for the high school.

Ballots Urging G. O. P. Ticket Stir Fusionists

Grumblings Heard Among Ranks of County Party Over Samples.

Rumblings of dissatisfaction were heard among the ranks of the Fusionist party of Montgomery County yesterday when 10,000 sample ballots, containing "X" marks beside the names of Republican State candidates, were distributed.

It was said to have been understood generally at the beginning of the campaign that the anti-Democrats who joined the party would not be embarrassed by having to indorse Republican State candidates.

Especially was it said to be embarrassing to those who joined the party solely for the purpose of undermining the Democratic E. Brooke Lee faction in the county.

The sample ballots of the party, which is composed of Democrats and Republicans dissatisfied with the original system of politics, indorsed Harry W. Nice, the Republican gubernatorial candidate, for Governor.

The ballots also indorsed Dr. Joseph I. France for United States Senator, George Henderson for attorney general, Frederick Paul Adkins for comptroller, Walter E. Quenstedt for clerk of the Court of Appeals, and Frederick N. Zihlman for United States Representative. All are Republicans.

The ballots also instructed the voters to approve F. Barnard Welsh, Republican, for associate judge of the Sixth Judicial Disrtict.

The only Republican overlooked on the ballot was the lone Republican listed for a county office—Edward T. Benton, candidate for county commissioner, First District. All other county candidates, other than Democrats, are listed as "Fusionists."

Wilson Demurs In Two Suits

Takoma Park Judge Files Answered to $10,000, $5000 Actions.

Alfred L. Wilson, Takoma Park, (Md.) police court judge, yesterday filed a demurrer to the $10,000 suit brought last month by Dorothy Tedford, of Baltimore.

At the same time Judge Wilson, in cooperation with his attorney, Benjamin Wilson, filed an answer to another suit for $500 brought against him last July by Ralph E. Brightwell, of Baltimore.

The suit brought by Miss Tedford charged that Judge Wilson had her arrested "solely for the ulterior, wrongful, and unlawful purposes" of procuring certain goods from her.

The arrest came after the plaintiff is alleged to have removed a stove from the Wilson home, which she claimed she rightfully owned. The defendant charged in his demurrer of yesterday that the suit was "bad in substance."

Brightwell alleged in his suit that Judge Wilson was the operator of an auto which struck one in which he was riding on the Colesville Pike near White Oaks, Md. The accident, the suit charged, was caused by Wilson's failing to stop at a stop sign. The defendant's demurrer denied the charge.

Church Denies "Call to Arms" Aim in Mexico

Catholics Have Not Sought U. S. Intervention, Says Archbishop.

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 30 (AP).—Archbishop Ruiz, the apostolic delegate to Mexico, declared today that although "thousands upon thousands are out of sympathy with the outrages against religion" by the Mexican government, the Catholic Church has advocated neither armed resistance by Mexican Catholics nor intervention by the United States.

In a statement through his headquarters here, Archbishop Ruiz declared the mysterious "Sophie" letters, recently published in Mexico City, did not come from any authorized source. These letters purported to show that Catholic leaders in Washington were seeking United States intervention in the current religious conflict in Mexico.

Archbishop Ruiz's statement follows:

"I feel I should answer, briefly but definitely, a charge made by El Nacional of Mexico City and reported in press dispatches under date of October 27.

Charges Prejudice.

"El Nacional publishes a letter or letters of mine pleading for an armed defense by the Mexican Catholics. I ask the American people to be on their guard against said journal in all matters concerning the attitude of the Catholic Church and of Catholics in Mexico. This journal is the official organ of the National Revolutionary Party and is naturally prejudiced and bitter.

"The only evidence this journal gives for its charge against me that I try to incite to armed rebellion is that, in a letter I wrote to the father provincial of the Jesuits, I asked the latter to give us help for the defense of the rights of the Catholic Church. The meaning of defense as used here is perfectly clear to every unprejudiced reader. To support its charge, El Nacional should prove that I intended defense to mean force of arms.

Says Aim Is Peace

"All bishops, clergy and Catholics of Mexico know very well that in my office as apostolic delegate I have constantly repeated that the church by no means will have recourse to arms.

"Gen. Calles himself heard that same principle announced when, in the conference of August, 1926, he and Archbishop Diaz and myself other to apply to the Congress or to take arms.

"As Gen Calles will well remember, Archbishop Diaz answered, Mr. President, the Church does not look for ephemeral triumphs like that of arms. She looks for a settlement of our problems based upon right, justice and sane democracy.

"We subsequently appealed to the Congress by petition with over 2,000,000 signatures, but no answer was ever given to it. If individual Catholics have had recourse to arms, they were not the church.

Mysterious Letter.

"As apostolic delegate to Mexico, I wish to refer further to a news item concerning a letter signed 'Sophie,' reported as being carried by El Nacional.

"No lady nor layman nor cleric has any authority to speak for the Mexican bishops, or to ask the bishops of the United States to seek any intervention on their part, either armed or moral, in the affairs of Mexico. I myself am the only one who has authority to speak on matters Mexican, and I think I need not say I have made no such request, nor anything like it.

"The 'Sophie' held by El Nacional to be a sort of Ambassador of the Mexican clergy, wrote, of course—whatever she did write—without any authority.

"Mexican Outrages."

"It is well known that thousands are out of sympathy with the outrages against religion carried on by the present Mexican government and particularly by its atheistic aims as expressed in the recent amendment to the constitution. Not only have Catholics voiced protest, but members of other religious denominations also. Jews and Lutherans have publicly showed their opposition to certain actions of the present German government.

"They who would have liberty of religious worship and of education are right in protesting against the present Mexican government.

"El Nacional hints at plots of rebellion and even the murder of some leaders. This journal seems to be preparing the ground for charging the Catholic clergy with any excess that may break out from people provoked by this persecution, or for covering political plots and possible murders among the revolutionists themselves."

Governments at Odds Over Racing Ship's Delay.

An aftermath yesterday of the recent air race from London to Melbourne revealed the United States and Persian governments at sharp variance as to what happened to two American contestants when they made a forced landing in Persia, the Associated Press says.

The fliers, John H. Wright and John Polando, said they were detained for 24 hours by local authorities at Mohammerah, Persia. They later withdrew from hte race because of the delay.

The Persian Legation here late last week flatly denied this allegation, and said the aviators' statement of imprisonment and difficulties was "entirely without foundation."

The State Department yesterday announced the American Legation at Teheran had confirmed the report, the fliers were detained 24 hours on the ground they did not have a landing permit.

There are no helpless young among the brush turkey's brood in Australia. These birds are hatched fully feathered and ready to fly, instead of feeble and helpless like the young of most other birds.

The brush turkey is a member of the family of birds called mound builders which, strange as it seems, have used artificial incubation to hatch their eggs for untold ages. They build tall mounds of vegetable matter, sometimes 10 to 12 feet high, in which they bury their eggs. This undergoes slow decay, giving off heat enough to incubate the eggs.

If a rigid, flat map of the United States is balanced on a single point, this point will coincide with the location of the Ogden Monument shown in the above drawing. This point is the geographical center of the Nation, according to the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey. The above method was that used in determining the center of the country. It is accurate enough for most purposes.

Strange as it seems, however, the closer the land is to the geographical center the smaller the part it plays in determining that center. One acre of ground 100 miles from the center will balance 100 acres only a mile away.

Zion Protocols Still Mystery, Expert States

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 30 (AP).—Celebrated names resounded through the courtroom here today as Jewish leaders continued their legal battle to prove the 'notorious "Protocols of the Elders of Zion" were fabrications.

Sarah Bernhardt, famous actress, and the celebrated French and Spanish dancers, Saharet and Otero, were mentioned in testimony that further extended ramifications of the trial in which the plaintiffs seek to disprove charges, based on the protocols, that Jewry plans any world hegemony.

Counsel for the plaintiffs presented photographic copies of archives in Moscow having to do with publication of the protocols in Russia under the alleged direction of the Russian writer Nilus, described in previous testimony as imbued with the spirit of an anti-Christ.

Swatikow Recalled.

Sergius Swatikow, official under the Kerensky regime, who testified yesterday, was recalled and declared that the archives revealed Nilus wanted to include references to Bernhardt, Saharet and Otero in his book dealing with the protocols. Censorship of the old imperial regime prevented, however, Swatikow said.

While the crowd, including many noted Jews of the Continent, listened intently, Swatikow said that the archives revealed that Nilus, presumably inspired by the Russian secret agent Rachowsky, wanted to depict Mme. Bernhardt as a great Jewish actress who would "charm Christians."

The purpose, it was indicated, was to create belief that world Jewry wanted to make use of the actress to advance Israel's domination.

Reasons for bringing Saharet and Otero into the matter were more obscure, Swatikow testified, since they presumably were not Jews.

Work of Censors.

References to other world personalities also were eliminated from Nilus' work by the imperial censors, he said the archives revealed.

Testimony by Jewish leaders to show that the protocols were spurious received substantial support today when an expert appointed by the court returned the opinion that the protocols were apocryphal.

To counteract this blow, the four defendants, among them the Swiss Nazi leader, Theodore Fischer, who also is serving as attorney for the defense, brought forth their star witness, Alfred Zander, of Basel, another Nazi, who is a defendant in a separate case at Basel growing out of the protocols.

Zander admitted writing an article in the Nazi party organ, Swiss National Front, affirming the authenticity of the document which, it has been contended, caused anti-Semitic policies of the Russian imperial regime, resulted in pogroms and gave rise to the Nazi activity against Jews.

He said he believed the protocols authentic because no one had complained of their falsity and because they had existed 14 years in the German language.

Comparison With Essay.

The Nazi writer admitted that certain passages in the protocols resemble the famed essay, "A Dialogue in Hades Between Machiavelli and Montesquieu," written by Maurice Joly, French author, in 1864, from which the plaintiffs contend the protocols were derived.

"Nevertheless," he said, "I am convinced that the protocols are as authentic as the Holy Scriptures themselves."

Further testimony by Swatikow was to the effect that Russian police received orders not to interfere when pogroms were started.

Commenting later on his testimony, Swatikow said Bernhardt's life was endangered when she visited Odessa in 1882 because of the intense anti-Semitic movement. Elsewhere in Russia, he added, she was received enthusiastically.

Hungary Likely To Gain Some Lost Territory

Premier Goemboes, Visiting Mussolini, Will Urge Treaty Revision.

Rome, Oct. 30 (AP).—Revision of the Treaty of Trianon, which dished out huge slices of Hungary to Rumania, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia, will be discussed when Premier Julius Goemboes of Hungary visits Premier Mussolini.

Goemboes was encouraged in his treaty revision program by a recent telegram from Mussolini after Il Duce's speech in Milan. In that address Mussolini spoke of international justice, without referring to any nation in particular, but subsequently telegraphed Goemboes he was thinking of Hungary.

The Hungarian premier's visit is considered significant for several reasons.

One is, he has just returned from a visit to Warsaw. Mussolini will want to know how Poland stands in her relations with Germany and with France.

Another reason is that Czechoslovakia's foreign minister, Edouard Benes, is scheduled to visit Mussolini in November. Czechoslovakia wants to enter the Rome economic pact linking Italy, Austria and Hungary. Goemboes will tell Mussolini, it is said, that Hungary would like to have from Czechoslovakia certain political guarantees before agreeing to the new partner. One of these guarantees would be with reference to the Hungarian minority in Czechoslovakia.

A third reason is that French Foreign Minister Pierre Laval will come to Rome soon to confer with Il Duce. One of their principal topics will be a possible rapprochement between Italy and Yugoslavia. Goemboes will want to talk to Mussolini about that, since Hungary is one of Yugoslavia's eastern neighbors, and for a long time there has been much tension between the two countries.

Otterback Will Benefits Widow

Anacostia Banker Leaves Trust Fund of $5,000 to His Son.

Mrs. Anne A. Otterback, widow of Maurice Otterback, chairman of the board of directors of the Anacostia Bank, who lost his life saving that of a pedestrian October 23, will receive the majority of his estate, it was shown yesterday when his will was filed for probate in the District Supreme Court.

A son, Raymond E. Otterback, is to have a trust fund of $5,000, from which he is to receive $250 semi-annually. The remainder of the estate is to go to the widow.

The petition listed personal property valued at $30,000 and real estate assessed at $2,500. In addition to this there was a large amount of real estate which Mr. Otterback held jointly with his wife, and which, under the District laws, automatically goes to her on his death, making it unnecessary for him to will his interest to her.

Otterback suffered fatal injuries near his bank building when he pushed a young woman from the path of an automobile. He was injured when struck by the machine.

Attorney George C. Gertman, representing the estate, indicated there were other items the widow would receive, such as life insurance.

Frontier Garrisons Held Ready Should Trouble Arise in Plebiscite.

Nancy, France, Oct. 29 (AP).—French army garrisons in Alsace-Lorraine tonight were held ready to protect French interests should Nazis attempt a putsch in the Saar region, inhabitants of which will vote in January whether to join France, unite with Germany or continue under League of Nations rule.

Orders were given the twentieth corps at Nancy and the sixth corps at Metz to be prepared to take the field should the League of Nations issue an appeal for help.

Newly-arrived recruits were being given instructions more rapidly than usual in oder to fit them for emergency duty.

The Saar governing commission's warnings to the league that a putsch was possible were said to have given rise to nervousness among Frenchmen living on the Saar frontier, as a result of which the general staff ordered the garrisons to stand ready.

The league commission reported to the league seizure of letters in which Nazi leaders referred to a putsch.

The treaty of Versailles gives the French army the right to enter the territory, but officials said the government probably will not take advantage of that provision unless the league asks it.

Body of Tellegen, Idol of Women, Taken to Morgue

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 30 (AP). The body of Lou Tellegen, actor, lay in the county morgue tonight.

Despondent, his health failing and haunted with the fear his sickness would affect his mind, Tellegen stabbed himself seven times yesterday with a pair of scissors as he stood before a mirror in the home of Mrs. J. P. Cudahy, widow of the Chicago packer's son. She had befriended him in his misfortune. He was 53 years old.

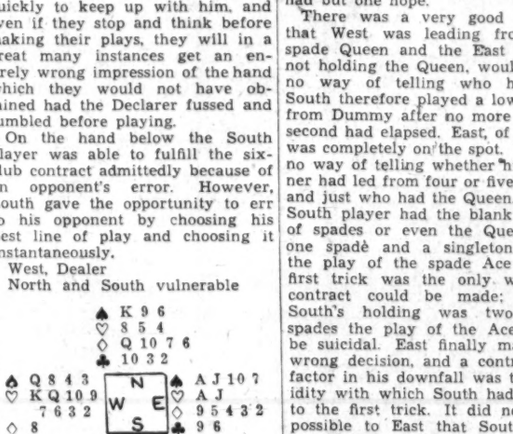
A Quick Decision.

Quick thinking is an almost essential ingredient in the make-up of a good Contract player. It is particuarly important in the play of the cards. If the Declarer for instance can decide upon his best line of play without an instant's hesitation, he will have an enormous advantage over the defense. They will have to think equally quickly to keep up with him, and even if they stop and think before making their plays, they will in a great many instances get an entirely wrong impression of the hand which they would not have obtained had the Declarer fussed and fumbled before playing.

On the hand below the South player was able to fulfill the six-club contract admittedly because of an opponent's error. However, South gave the opportunity to err to his opponent by choosing his best line of play and choosing it instantaneously.

West, Dealer
North and South vulnerable



The bidding: (Figure after bid refers to numbered explanatory paragraph.)

West	North	East	South
4♡	Pass	Pass	6♣(1)
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A very daring bid. However, South knows that he is "fixed" by West's pre-emptive bid. He further realizes that the spade Ace or even a lower spade honor will give him a play for the Slam contract and he knows that North with just a smattering of strength will not be able to raise five clubs to six. South's gamble in my opinion is a justifiable one in view of the bidding and the vulnerability situation.

The West player quite wisely decided, in view of South's jump to six clubs, that the latter was probably void of hearts and accordingly opened his fourth best spade in an effort to find the Declarer's vulnerable spot as quickly as possible. The Dummy was spread out and South had to think quickly. He realized from the bidding that the spade Ace was almost surely in the wrong hand as the West player was not one to pre-empt with side strength. Furthermore West would not blindly lead away from an Ace against a Slam contract. With the spade Ace definitely marked in the wrong hand, South realized that he had but one hope.

There was a very good chance that West was leading from the spade Queen and the East player, not holding the Queen, would have no way of telling who held it. South therefore played a low spade from Dummy after no more than a second had elapsed. East, of course, was completely on the spot. He had no way of telling whether his partner had led from four or five spades and just who had the Queen. If the South player had the blank Queen of spades or even the Queen and one spade and a singleton heart, the play of the spade Ace at the first trick was the only way the contract could be made; but if South's holding was two small spades the play of the Ace might be suicidal. East finally made the wrong decision, and a contributing factor in his downfall was the rapidity with which South had played to the first trick. It did not seem possible to East that South, with two small spades, could duck with but a second's hesitation. East went up with the spade Ace and then laid down the heart Ace. South trumped this, and of course was now able to claim the balance of the tricks without even using the extra diamond discard. West made a very fine opening, but South countered with an even better play, and poor East was the goat.

Soviet Claims Artificial Heart Briefly Restored Suicide's Life

Russian 'Died' Again After 2 Minutes, Scientist Declares.

Moscow, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—For two minutes, according to a high Soviet medical authority, life actually has been restored to a "dead" person by artificial means. The experiment succeeded, according to Russian scientists, after a man had been dead for three hours, a suicide by hanging.

A report of the experiment was released today by an official of the Central Institute for Blood Transfusion, which already is said to have similarly revived dead animals.

In this instance, it was declared, "life" was retsored by means of an "artificial heart," the invention of Prof. Sergei Bruikhanenko, one of the leading scientists attached to the institute.

According to Prof. C. I. Spasokukotsky, one of Bruikhanenko's colleagues, numerous attempts have been made to revive dead persons, but, until the present case, all of the experiments were unsuccessful.

The artificial heart pumped blood through the circulatory system and lungs for several minutes, the professor said. Suddenly it was noticed that the man began breathing and showed other signs of life. For two minutes this activity continued, and then the subject "died" once more.

Venus stepped down from her pedestal at the Corcoran Art Gallery and sighed enviously. There was a wistful look in her eyes as she patted her hair back into place.

"You don't know what breaks these modern women get," she moaned. "Now in my day, things were different."

"Why," she continued, "when I wanted vanishing cream or a new lipstick, I had to send that flighty daughter-in-law of mine, Psyche, over to Proserphine's house across the River Styx to get it, and, would you believe it, I tramped all the way from Olympus to the Parthenon without finding a single decent Beauty Shoppe! And you know how catty those Athens newspapermen could be. That awful Aristophanes, who had that scurrilous column in The Daily Gazette, actually said that if I got another wrinkle my face would look like a prune-skin!

"But these modern women have all their beauty and personality problems solved by Frances Mangum of The Washington Post. And she knows ever so much more about Beauty than I did." She smiled weakly. "But then, I had my moments. There was that dear boy Praxiteles . . ."

Well, since Beauty is Truth, Venus was right. Miss Washington does get a break: All she has to do to keep her nose from being shiny or her chins from doubling is to follow Frances Mangum's advice in The Post. Frances knows her cosmetics, whether they're to be used to please a sweetheart, hold a husband, or make the blonde next door jealous. She tells you where to get 'em, how to apply 'em, and, when the date is over, how to peel 'em off. In short, Frances' column is the answer to a perplexed maiden's prayer.

And, Handsome being what Handsome does, Frances also advises you on ways to develop your personality . . . how to acquire that charm which will make men want to shower you with attentions . . . and other women long to cut your throat. Even Madame de Stael could have profited from our Frances' column.

If you have wrinkles instead of dimples . . . circles instead of curves . . . girl-friends instead of boy-friends, let Miss Mangum tell you the reason why. Follow her advice and you'll have that movie-actress figure . . . that peaches-and-cream complexion . . . those come-hither eyes . . . and you'll have a lot more fun. Miss Mangum's column is found on the Woman's Pages each day in

H. B. Butlers To Be Feted ByDiplomats

Informal Affair Will Be Held Monday at Swiss Legation.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Among the interesting and distinguished visitors who arrive every day, Mr. and Mrs. Harold B. Butler, of Geneva, Switzerland, are among the most delightful who have visited here in many a day.

Mr. Butler is director of the International Labor office at Geneva, and with his charming wife, is spending about 10 days in the Capital.

Yesterday morning in her apartment at the Carlton Mrs. Butler received me. She is a beautiful Irish type, fresh, clear complexion, very blue eyes, and soft dark hair fluffed around her face and combed into curly bangs. Animation and a bright, breezy charm are distinct characteristics of this lovely person who is known to a large number of members of Capital society, for with Mr. Butler she visited in Washington in 1919 when the latter was attending the first international labor conference.

Envoy Will Entertain.

They were here for three months and made their home at Wardman Park Hotel, where they made the acquaintance of Senor Felip Espil, then Counselor of the Argentine Embassy, now Argentine Ambassador here, whom they have seen many times since at their home in Geneva. The Ambassador and Senora de Espil will entertain informally at dinner Sunday evening for Mr. and Mrs. Butler.

The Butlers, who arrived in this country some weeks ago, went first to California, and thence from Los Angeles to Mexico City by plane Mrs. Butler, who is quite air-minded, having flown in Europe as well as in South Africa, where she spent several months five years ago, says "American pilots are marvelous;" and "The scenery between California and Mexico is too beautiful for word." She was also delighted with Xochimilco, a suburb of Mexico City, which is the Venice of the Western Hemisphere. There, all the fruits, vegetables and flowers are grown for the use of the city, and the islands which dot the lake are brilliant with the color of tropical blooms and foliage. Mrs. Butler's apartment yesterday was still filled with masses of roses, carnations of all shades, and huge purple violets as large as pansies, which had been presented to her as she left Mexico and which she had tended carefully on the train coming to Washington.

Sir Ronald Gives Luncheon.

On Monday the Ambassador of Great Britain, Sir Ronald Lindsay, entertained informally at luncheon for Mr. and Mrs Butler, and the latter was amazed at the handsome new residence which has replaced the former embassy on Connecticut avenue. The stir and bustle of the Capital which has increased so enormously since her former visit here and "the general atmosphere of prosperity and happiness" impressed her.

Unbelievably, Mrs. Butler is the mother of three children—young Mr. Ewan Butler, who makes his home in London, and whose marriage to Miss Lucy Byron took place October 20, while his parents (much to their distress) were away from England; Mr. Rohan Butler, 17, who is at school in England, and the daughter, Noorna, 13, who has remained in Geneva with her tutors.

In answer to a question about the extraordinary names of her children, Mrs. Butler said, "I am so easily impressed by the names of people, that I always wanted my children to have names of nobody I ever knew." Noorna is named for the heroine of Meredith's "Shaving of Shady Path," a favorite story of Mrs. Butler, and suits very well the flower-faced little girl whose picture was standing on a piano in the room.

Swiss Envoy Plans Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Butler, whose home is England, have been living in Geneva for 15 years and so know many of the present residents of Washington who from time to time have been in Geneva for the League of Nations meetings, and whom they have entertained there.

The Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter are close friends of Mr. and Mrs. Butler, having known them in Switzerland for many years. They are planning an informal dinner for Mr. and Mrs. Butler Monday evening at the Legation. The Minister of the Irish Free State, Mr. Michael MacWhite, who is a countryman of Mrs. Butler, and Mrs. MacWhite are also friends of the Butlers, having made their acquaintance while the Minister was a delegate to the League of Nations.

Mr. and Mrs. Butler will go to New York following their stay here, and after a few days there will sail for Europe, and it is hoped it will not be another 15 years before they again visit in the Capital.

Becks Pay Visit To House Member

Young Couple on Trip to U. S. From London.

Representative and Mrs. James M. Beck had Mr. and Mrs. James M. Beck, jr., as their guests last week.

Young Mr. and Mrs. Beck are spending several weeks in this country from their home in London and will probably spend their weekends in the Capital. They have returned to New York.

Mrs. Beck was formerly Clarissa Tennant, a niece of Margot, Countess of Oxford and Asquith, and a daughter of the first Lord Glenconner, and a sister of the present Lord Glenconner. Her former husband is Lord Tennyson, grandson of the famous Alfred Lord Tennyson, one-time poet laureate of England.

Helen Manley, Lieut. Johnson Wed in Manila

Bride Made Bow Here When Father Was at War College.

Word has just been received of the wedding of Miss Helen Pendleton Manley, daughter of Col. Frederick Willis Manley, military adviser to the Governor General of the Philippine Islands, and Mrs. Manley, to Lieut. Max Sherrel Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Mount Johnson, of Greenville, Pa.

The ceremony took place October 20, at 4 o'clock, in the Episcopal Cathedral of St. Mary and St. John in Manila, P. I., with the Rev. Malcolm Ward officiating. The church was decorated with palms and white cadena d'amor with calla lilies arranged on the altar.

Bride Wears White Velvet.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a becoming Vionnet gown of white velvet, made on simple molded lines. Her veil of tulle was arranged in cap fashion and held in place by a coronet of old rose point lace.

Miss Natalie Weed was the maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Mrs. Olaf Kyster, Mrs. Herman Ohme, Miss Violet Graham and Miss Jane Price. Deb's Diary

Who, What and Where —as She Sees It.

DEAR DIARY:

The morning mail brought an invitation to Frida Frazen's reception Wednesday, November 14, in her lovely country home. With it there was another smaller card, giving the directions for finding Ranleigh. Now wasn't that the very height of Southern hospitality?

Betty Marsh must possess some powers of magic or something. Yesterday at the luncheon given in honor of Mary Kay Spinks and Peg McMullen she had on a gorgeous corsage. After many oh's and ah's Betty explained that it had been given to her at her debut last week. It is a good thing not many of us are as clever as that or else the florists would go out of business.

Grayson, Mrs. John Crosby, Mrs. Stuart Fuller, Mrs. Joseph Tumulty, Mrs. Walter Distler, Mrs. Margaret McChord Boyle, Mrs. John Carter, Mrs. Ellsworth Alvord, and Miss Florence Crowley, sister of Mr. Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the board of directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Senator and Mrs. Duffy have taken the house at 3155 Highland place for the winter and have entered their four children in school here. Senator Duffy is now in Wisconsin and will remain there until after election day.

High School Course Unnecessary For Career, Says Woman Attorney

Junior Lawyer With AAA Tells Her Experiences

Mrs. Leo Robinson Talked Dean Into Admittance to Law School Here.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

A HIGH SCHOOL education might be all right for tea-room hostesses and insurance solicitors, but for a woman lawyer it would be a waste of time. So decided Mrs. Leo Dunn Robinson when at an early age she was planning her professional future.

She was in the tenth grade of the Fremont, Nebr., public school when she made this momentous decision. Her teachers were disappointed in her; her family was annoyed. But Mrs. Robinson—she was then Miss Leo Dunn—knew what she wanted. She put away her books and came to Washington to enter law school. That was less than four years ago. Today she is a junior attorney with the AAA.

Her welcome to the Capital was hardly auspicious. She had set her heart on matriculating at National University, but National University wasn't interested in little girls who had run away from high school.

Heated Argument With Dean.

"Dr. Charles Pergler, dean of the law school, and I had a terrific argument over my entering," said Mrs. Robinson yesterday. "He tried to tell me I couldn't take a law course, that I couldn't be admitted to the bar, that I couldn't do anything until I had a high school diploma. It took a lot of talking on my part to convince him I could get along without one."

Dr. Pergler evidently is something of a diplomat. He admitted the tempestuous Miss Dunn to the law school. But he persuaded her to complete her high school work. She did so in National University's School of Economics.

"I still think it was a waste of time," Mrs. Robinson said yesterday. With her boyish haircut and wide mouth constantly on the brink of a grin, she looked more like the sprite who had fled high school than a Government attorney.

Mrs. Leo Dunn Robinson went to law school at night. During the day she worked in the general counsel's office at the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Although the university course was no more difficult for her than those with high school educations she admitted she probably studied harder than the majority of law students.

Copied Lectures in Shorthand.

"That's because I'm Scotch," she laughed. "I was paying for that law course and I intended to get my money's worth."

Today on her desk in the Department of Agriculture is a notebook filled with lectures by professors at National University. Mrs. Robinson took every lecture down in shorthand.

In her second year at the university she won the school's gold medal for writing the best paper on equity jurisprudence. She was in the midst of an examination when a professor stopped at her desk, told her her paper was the best he'd received in 20 years.

"I got so excited it was half an hour before I could go on with the examination," Mrs. Robinson confided.

A year ago last September she married Joe T. Robinson, jr., nephew of Senator Robinson, of Arkansas. Mr. Robinson is also a lawyer. Soon after their marriage he persuaded his bride to take the District bar examination.

"I wasn't at all keen about it," Mrs. Robinson said. "I hadn't finished my law course and I didn't think I was ready for the examination. Besides only high school graduates and those with three years of law are admitted to the District bar."

Wins Officials' Consent.

But once she had made up her mind, young Mrs Robinson got around these difficulties just as she had gotton into National University. She talked. And after she had finished talking, the officials decided to consider her year in the general counsel's office equivalent to a year of law; they decided her high school work in Fremont, Nebr., plus the high school work she had taken at the university, was equal to the standard high school course. Mrs. Robinson was admitted to the District bar.

She was graduated from National University law school last December. In the following April she passed the Arkansas bar examination. In May she became a junior attorney at the AAA. She recently completed research work for the brief written by the Department of Justice on the Hawaiian Sugar situation.

She plans to go with her husband to his home town in Arkansas within a couple of years and build up a private practice.

"But I want only civil cases. I shouldn't like to defend persons who were guilty," Mrs. Robinson said.

Underwood & Underwood.

This boyish young woman is Mrs. Leo Dunn Robinson, a junior attorney with the AAA. High school struck her as a waste of time. She left it in her sophomore year, persuaded a law school to let her enroll, and then captured a gold medal for her paper on equity jurisprudence.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have been too busy in life to marry, as I have had the care of a parent for years, and also many very complicated business matters that took up all my time and energy.

I had several chances to marry but it seemed I was most needed at home and did not feel I should leave.

• • • •

I can marry now, but the man I like is neither of my religious faith nor of my racial stock and I do not believe in mixed marriages. I am of Welsh ancestry and a Protestant and he is Italian and Catholic, but we are both American-born and English speaking.

• • • •

Also I am in the thirties and almost too old to marry, I feel. I am really afraid of marriage as I have been single so long.

TROUBLED READER.

Its Great Handicap.

DEAR TROUBLE READER: There are exceptions to all rules, of course, but I agree with you that marriage between two persons of such different traditions and backgrounds is a very great risk of happiness.

• • • •

First you must consider the sharp fundamental difference between the Latin and the Anglo-Saxon conception of woman's role in marriage. The tradition of the one decrees her realm is home; her function, motherhood. The tradition of the other, yet in the making, accepts her as a social and economic comrade, even, occasionally, as leader, and allows her to function along individual lines.

• • • •

Then, you must consider that the circumstances of your past have called into being in your own character perhaps a more pronounced quality of independence and self-sufficiency than is developed even by the average Anglo-Saxon woman.

Thirdly, you are a mature woman, whose religious convictions, ethical standards and personal preferences have been forged by years of freedom of will into an individual, practically unbreakable mold.

I'm afraid it's a case of "East Is East and West Is West, and Never the Twain Shall Meet."—not on any common ground of sympathy and understanding and mutual acceptance of respective rights and idiosyncracies.

• • • •

Long since grown accustomed to ordering your own life, and, in a measure, to bringing order to lives around you, could you gracefully and happily yield the control to other hands?

• • • •

To remain unwed until one has reached the thirties isn't, necessarily, to have been unwed overlong. However, to hesitate and to agonize over accepting a proposal of marriage which comes to one then gives reason to think it isn't essentially a highly suitable offer. My advice is, think this thing through very carefully, know your own mind and be answerable for your own reactions before marrying into what amounts to another world.

M. H.

Changing Styles Menace to Loan Shops in China

Chinese women, once the envy of Americans because they didn't have to bother keeping up with the styles, now have gone fickle in matters of dress.

Certain Chinese women, in order to keep abreast of the styles, have hit on the device of buying new clothes early and often and pawning them after a few wearing. By adding money to the loans they get on the garments they can buy new dresses.

Luxury Lines Provide More Women's Jobs

(Associated Press.)

SEVERAL luxury-producing industries figured prominently during the last year in the return of women to jobs, the Women's Bureau has found.

In silverware there were nearly 39 per cent more women employed in August, 1934, than in August, 1933; in clocks and watches, 23.5 per cent; in jewelry, 12.3 per cent; in radio and phonographs, 37 per cent; in electrical machinery and supplies, 18.7 per cent.

There were increases also in the number of women employed in the food industries, where canning and the beet sugar industry accounted for the major portion of the gain, and in meat packing and ice cream making.

Other Gains Noted.

Smaller gains were made in laundries and banks which were employing between 3 and 4 per cent more women this August; in retail stores and telephone and telegraph establishments, where an increase of 4 to 5 per cent was found, and in hotels, which registered an increase of 11.8 per cent.

While the general increase of employment was affecting the country, various sanitation and labor and wage commissions were at work on special and localized problems.

Connecticut did a survey into home work being done by families in the fabricated metal industry, where many women are employed.

"Wages are oppressive for the majority of women and minors employed in this industry," Miss Helen Wood, deputy commissioner of labor for the State, reported.

Her study covered nine factories which made small metal products, such as snap fasteners. Pay roll records showed that the average earnings per person was 7.9 cents an hour. At the same time the lowest hourly rate allowed for factory work under an NRA code is 32½ cents. Miss Wood recommended the appointment of a wage board to set fair wages for the employes.

Laundry Wages Rise.

In New York laundries, which were placed under a minimum wage order, the Women's Bureau reports that women's average weekly wages increased 16.4 per cent. The amount of increase ranged from one-half cent to 22 cents an hour.

Across the Canadian border, in British Columbia and Ontario, further gains were being made by working women under minimum wage orders.

A survey in British Columbia showed 117,895 women receiving an average weekly pay check of $14.87 and working an average of 41.3 hours a week for it. They were employed in stores, laundries, offices, manufacturing and personal service.

In Massachusetts a special study was made of 145 plants using benzol in the shoe industry. Benzol fumes were found in 53 plants which were ordered to install adequate ventilation.

Stout Women Should Avoid Bargain Shelf

Foundation Is of Prime Importance in Hiding Curves.

YOU FREQUENTLY see the stout woman at the bargain counter, hopefully battling for a prize, but it is the last place she should be looking for clothes, says Nina Hyde, because quality and fit are what she requires, and markdowns seldom answer her purpose.

Advising the curvey woman how to dress to type, Miss Hyde, in the November Good Housekeeping, first stresses the importance of the foundation. The best of modern corsets and a glove-fitting slip are the secrets of looking slim, she says. When bulges are controlled and the lines are right, then you consider color, texture and accessories.

Black Slenderizes.

Black has the magic gift of making you look thinner. The prize slenderizer is black velvet, but velveteen, duvetyn, and the new mossy textures can be just as effective. Brown, rust, green, mulberry, dark gray and deep reds are also excellent.

Select a material without a glow, she advises, and never wear anything too clinging. Materials with body, particularly reversible fabrics, are a wise choice. Among these, crepe with a satin back is excellent because it glides when you move, and yet remains in place and gives the pleasant assurance that you are always neat and trim. Coming to the awkward business of concealing curves, learn to use contrasting colors. Have the bodice well adjusted from shoulder to waist, so that all unpleasing bulges are banished. Then try to work out an effect with contrasting bands or revers. A shirred neckline, a cascading effect of some sort, or a bow if properly placed will go far to conceal curves.

Tunics Help the Stout.

The straight cut skirt, the three-quarter or uneven tunics are splendid curve concealers. If curves are bulgy from the waist down, resort to seams and contrast. To overcome large hips, do not start the flare too low, and don't bother with bias skirts. If you are stout about the hips, always sit down in front of a mirror before you decide on a dress, to see that it does not creep up when you sit down.

Hats and shoes are most important. Choose your hats according to your stature. Tricornes, higher crowns, and turned-up brims are new and becoming. Never choose a hat so heavy that it squashes you down, or one so small that it looks perched on you. Have it with definite clear-cut lines. Pumps often should be avoided, they have a way of pushing up an overflow of flesh at the instep on a stoutish foot. Select a shoe with a strap, particularly the more graceful type on which the strap comes low on the foot.

Novel Accessories for the Stadium Sound Brand New Fashion Note

FOOTBALLS have soared above gridirons, landing in the wardrobes of feminine fans.

For several seasons the stadiums have been enlivened with dashing spectator sports clothes, designed expressly for crisp afternoons out-of-doors But a brand-new note has been introduced this year with accessories obviously inspired by the football itself.

These novel accessories score a couple of fashion touchdowns on their own account. When combined with a smart tweed and sweater ensemble, they walk away with the game.

At the left is pictured a classic costume for the football season. The tweed skirt has a matching topcoat built on popular reefer lines with four big buttons emphasizing the double-breasted effect. Since the slipover sweater has a turtle neck, no scarf is necessary. And if a chill wind should sweep over the bleachers in the last exciting quarter, the fan can button her coat high beneath her chin.

Hat of Vagabond Felt.

The hat illustrated is the newest version of the vagabond felt. Its small brim shields the eyes from a bright wintry sun. The creases in the crown are held in place by a lacing which looks for all the world like the lacing on a football.

Hats with laced crowns are exceedingly smart for stadium wear. So are spectator sports shoes with markings on the toe which resemble the lacing on the galloping pigskin.

Then there are gay, little wool dresses in bright red, gold, green and blue with tiny footballs used in place of buttons. Rabbit's hair is a favorite fabric for stadium dresses. Corduroy, velveteen, ribbed wool and jersey are also important materials.

Sweaters are as much in demand for the game as ever, which means that four out of every five girls nave them in assorted colors and weaves. The smooth-surfaced, mannish types with small V and turtle necks head the sweater lists.

New Bags Resemble Footballs.

When the dress has football-shaped buttons, the accessories are usually conservative in design. But for the plain tweed skirt and sweater costumes there are new bags that look exactly like footballs with half the air let out of them. Made of calfskin, they have a slide fastening across the curved top. A silken cord is attached to one end. Thus, the bag can swing over one arm or may be waved frantically as the home team gains a couple of yards.

Black may be exceedingly important for street clothes and for formal attire, but for the stadiums bright colors are the thing. Many fans are decking themselves out in the colors of their favorite college. This is an easy process when two or three piece costumes are chosen. In fact, some maidens have caused a furore by wearing the colors of both teams at a major gridiron struggle. This isn't recommended for the fan who wants to be in condition to attend a dance following the game.

Debs of 1858 and 1934 Have Much in Common

A debutante of the 60's. From the frontispiece of a recently discovered romance published in 1858 and entitled "The Belle of Washington: A True Story of the Affections," which the author carefully explains was written to lead readers "to a true appreciation of and the practice of early piety."

By Hope Ridings Miller.

THE MODERN debutante, whose days are a round of luncheons, teas and calls, is probably concerned with many things other than how grandmother made her bow to Washington.

But if this 1934 society product should thumb through the yellowed leaves of a buckram-bound volume called "The Belle of Washington," published in 1858, she might find the social life of the Capital has not changed greatly in the last 75 years.

Recently discovered among the old books of Mrs. Elizabeth Shirley Enochs is "The Belle of Washington," by Mrs. N. P. Lasselle. This throws a new light on what most concerned a girl in the days when a trip to Baltimore was a day's journey; when most girls had Mae West figures topped by Janet Gaynor faces, and "strove for piety above all else;" when a fat purse was the password into society and a lean one insured a hasty exit; when a woman who earned her own living had only three vocations from which to choose—washing, dressmaking and keeping a boarding house.

Story Has a Moral.

Like all stories popular in the '60's—or even in the '70's, '80's and '90's—this one has a moral. The author makes it clear "The scenes portrayed are not fancy sketches, but pictures drawn from life; the truthfulness of which persons familiar with Washington society will at once recognize. In portraying them, we have endeavored to impress upon the young mind the danger of giving up to a love of pleasure and outward display."

This "true story of the affections" centers around Annie Grayson, a Senator's daughter. In the first chapter she is "a fairy child of barely 5 summers," a pupil at the Academy of Visitation in Georgetown. But, as the author carefully explains, "time ever flies most rapidly when pleasure gilds his wings," so by the end of the second chapter she has "burst into young womanhood" and attained her eighteenth birthday.

Annie's mother is a "gay woman of fashion," whose greatest ambition is to "create a sensation in society by the elegance of her dress, the splendor of her parties and the dashing style of her equipage." But in these respects Annie is not her mother's daughter.

She is much more like her father, "a man of superior intellect and sober common sense views of life," who has been "so entirely captivated by the rare personal beauty of Annie's mother," he did not (more was the pity) "discover her only enjoyment was derived from society until she had become his wife."

Annie's love for Edwin Stanmore is the greatest thing in her life, but it does not, by any means, crowd out anything else. Being as pious as she is beautiful and lovable, she goes on through the story, helping those in need, uttering platitudes and beatitudes, and never forgetting those friends who have lost their wealth, "through the vicissitudes of Fate."

Ambitious Belle Fares Badly.

In the meantime, while she does good deeds by the dozens, the impoverished Edwin Stanmore pulls himself up by his own bootstraps out in Illinois and eventually returns to Washington as a Representative. Then—and only then—he feels free to ask Annie to be his wife.

But there are others in this simple tale of the dear, dead days who are not so satisfactorily disposed of. Clementina Wilkie, for instance, is a proud belle whose heart was infused with ambition rather than piety, who stood before her mirror by the hour, arranging her raven locks while the fair-haired Annie trudged the streets on her missions of charity. At one time Clementina's hand is sought by many an eligible young swain in Washington society, and she eventually wins one man's heart so completely he warns her each time he takes his leave, "My own love, for the sake of one to whom you are dearer than life, be careful of your health."

But he finds out "ere long her external beauty was no indication, nor proof she had a worthy heart." And the story leaves the crafty Clementina with these words: "At levees, receptions and assemblies, you will still see her faded face, glossed over with an artificial bloom, derived from paints and cosmetics, whilst the furrows worn by the footprints of time are attempted to be concealed by a preparation procured for that purpose."

Sidelights on human conduct and etiquette of the 60's are sprinkled as lavishly through this book as commas and exclamation points. The author obviously knew her Washington society back in the days when Buchanan was President. And what is more interesting is the fact that many of her terse observations would be equally as appropriate today. For instance, when one character asks artlessly, "Do all Senators and persons holding distinguished offices have two sets of principles to govern their conduct, one for Washington and one for home?" another replies, "There are a few so green they act the same way both places."

The book is gengrously seasoned with morals from first to last. And at the end the reader is left with this injunction by Mrs. Lasselle: "We have endeavored to show that, although duplicity and falsehood may seem to prosper, its fruit is bitterness; whilst the practice of virtue brings pleasantness and peace."

Oil Treatment Best Remedy For Chapping

Treatments, Given Easily at Home, Soften and Lubricate Skin.

By Frances Mangum.

THE WRONG of a chapped skin may be righted with an oil facial. This softens and lubricates the skin and normalizes the natural oil content.

Skins that suffered from over-exposure to the sun during the summer are apt to become dry and scaly during the winter. The first cold spell takes its toll by making such complexions rough and red so that powder and rouge will not go on smoothly. These skins are easily irritated and prone to blemishes which increase unless a cure is immediately sought.

The surest and most lasting remedy lies in oil treatments, which may easily be given at home.

Press Cloth Against Face.

First open the pores by pressing a hot cloth against the face. Keep several cloths or cotton pads in a bowl of hot water. Press surplus water from one of these and hold against the skin. As it begins to cool replace it by a warmer one. After five or ten minutes the pores should be opened sufficiently to allow the oil easy access.

Use either a high grade olive oil or else a certain especially prepared skin oil sold at several local stores. Warm first and then apply either with cotton or your hand. Pat it in quite softly and rub with a rotary movement until you feel sure that the oil is coaxed into the skin. Leave on 10 or 15 minutes and then remove with a tissue.

Have Chipped Ice Ready.

Now pat in a rich nourishing cream, concentrating on the area of the eyes and the lines from neck to mouth and any lines on the neck. Remove with a tissue and pat the skin with either an iced skin tonic or else cold cotton pads. Have a bowl of chipped ice in which you keep your cotton. Press out the water and apply these to the skin to close the pores.

If you have this facial immediately before going out, remember to apply a good foundation cream or lotion before you put on your make-up. This will protect the skin from temperature changes and keep it from chapping.

Hearers Limited By Gertrude Stein

Gertrude Stein, labeled by the literary world as one of the most widely known and least read authors in the English language, has set iron-bound limits on the number of persons who may attend her lectures in this country. In order not to be "exhibited as a freak," Miss Stein declared she will talk only before gatherings of 500 or less, hence the organizations that are sponsoring her lecture tour of American schools, museums and other institutions of academic standing, are restricting their audiences to members only.

Dr. Russel Potter, dean of the Institute of Arts and Sciences at Columbia University, says she is utterly sincere and "that she can not conceive of herself interesting more than 500 people at one time."

Capital Store Now Operates Perfume Bar

By Ruth Anne Davis.

FURTHER proof that this is a "bar age" is offered by a local store which recently opened a perfume bar.

Customers who stand in front of the counter-like bar are dazzled first by the modernistic mirror with its lavish trimmings, second by the splendor of the tall ornate perfume bottles arranged along the shelves, and finally by the fragrance of the dozens of perfumes on display there.

It's an ideal spot for women with perfume intentions. If they don't know what they want they can make their choices leisurely, as sniffs are offered free.

It was interesting to see who was buying what. Elderly women seemed to have a preference for the little wicker covered bottles of a Devon lily scent. Some preferred the poppy put up in the same way.

Very young girls, for the most part, asked for flower fragrances, many wanting a pure gardenia. Some of them shopping for their mothers asked for violet or jasmine.

French blends seemed to be preferred by women of 30 or thereabouts, who wanted something "nice for furs."

A certain South American perfume, one of the newest in the perfume mart, was called for by several gentlemen, who wanted something "rich," said one, "exotic," said another.

A rather overwhelming Parisian perfume put in a striking black and white bottle appealed to all ages and types. It seemed to combine an air of sophistication with extreme naivete—to be at the same time sweet and spicy.

Light Rain Capes.

Long, light rain capes in white, black, brown and blue are all-season favorites. They're easy to carry over your arm and when it rains throw over your shoulder to protect your winter coat. Because they are so light and fit so loosely they're ideal for wearing over heavy clothes.

These capes are made from an especially fine quality of rubber that stands rolling up into minute bundles, tossing away in dresser drawers, resting on closet shelves, or hanging in the clothes closet, without any sign of wear and tear. For fall rains or winter snows they are indispensable.

Vegetable Hair Rinse.

A vegetable hair rinse that comes in 12 colors will glorify the dullest hair. Women who fear artificial coloring can use this with perfect assurance that it will do no harm. It comes off with one washing, neither dyes nor bleaches, and will not stain the scalp. One rinse will bring out the highlights and give the most nondescript hair decided character.

It comes in an envelope package which costs 25 cents and contains sufficient coloring for five rinses.

Glass Ventilators.

An air meter glass ventilator keeps out drafts, rain and snow, but allows enough cool air to seep into the room to make it always comfortable.

First you fasten some grooved brackets to the window casing. Next you slide your glass plate into these. Now raise your window according to the temperature you desire. As the cool air rushes in, it comes in contact with this ventilator which sends it upward to fuse with the hot air which has risen. In this way a stuffy room is soon made comfortable.

Such a ventilator is ideal for windows near a bed. The air, regulated by a ventilator, pours in indirectly and there is no danger of a draft.

Bedroom Slippers.

You'd scarcely suspect these were bedroom slippers. They are made of heavy black faille silk and cut to resemble cocktail slippers. The heels are medium height, and the vamp perfectly plain. This tailored designing of a dress material suits them ideally to any type of dressing robe. You may also wear them around the house without looking as though you were wearing bedroom slippers.

There are dressy mules trimmed in ostrich feathers which are exceedingly chic with the beruffled, lace-trimmed negligees.

Nobby Canes.

Gentlemen who want to add that dapper, dauntless touch to their winter outfit should drop by a local store and see the nobby cane display. There's every kind under the sun from those to lean upon to those for merely show. They are priced from 25 cents to $10.

For Modern Apartments.

What Today Means

"Scorpio."

IF OCTOBER 31 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m., and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:15 to 8:15 a. m. and from 12:15 to 2:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m.

There is a possibility that a number of things requiring your immediate attention may be thrust suddenly upon you on this October 31. Do not allow yourself to become agitated or nervous, should this occur. If you are calm and systematic you will probably have no trouble handling the various things you are required to, and will be able to do so in a very much shorter time than you anticipate. News regarding a matter in which you are deeply interested may be received through a third party or a letter.

Transportation facilities are liable to be subjected to delays on this date, so the wise who have appointments will allow ample time in which to reach their destination. If an invitation is extended to you and you are tempted to decline it, think twice before doing so, for if there is a possibility of offense being taken by your refusal, it might be tactful to accept. Married and engaged couples, as well as those seeking to create favorable impressions on susceptible hearts, should avoid drawing too much on their imaginations if relating a commonplace incident, if there is a desire of not having their veracity questioned.

If a woman and October 31 is your natal day, Dame Fortune will probably prove generous and reward your faith in human nature by a very definite demonstration that there is a great deal of love in this work-a-day world. Artistic and discriminating, you should do well as a professional shopper, interior decorator or modeler. Short-story writing or newspaper reporting are also fields of activity worthy of your consideration. Married life should appeal to you, as it is full of promise for one of your disposition.

The child born on October 31, when it is old enough to understand should be impressed with the importance of orderliness. As soon as there is the slightest indication of it indulging in carelessness it should be corrected.

If a man and October 31 is your birthday, you should be able to do a great deal with your hands. The playing of string instruments or the piano may gain you a reputation if taken up seriously. Painting, sculpturing, surgery or mechanical work requiring a skilled touch, might offer you excellent money-making possibilities. Love, if given the opportunity should bring much brightness into your existence, and prove a great stimulation to your efforts.

Woman Directs Play by Barrie

Others of Varied Vocations Have Important Part in Production.

WOMEN WITH varied vocations play an important part in the production of Barrie's "Quality Street," to be presented at 8:30 o'clock Thursday and Friday nights in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets.

The play is directed by Mildred Curran, who has run the gamut of theatricals. The leading role will be played by the secretary of the Pierce Hall Players, Charlotte Tilley, who is also an outstanding student of sculpture at the Corcoran School of Fine Art. Ada Louise Townsend, playwright, takes the only character role in the play. Also a member of the cast is Ruth Hansford Snodgrass, widely known locally as a vocalist and as publicity director for the Washington branch of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Snodgrass' young daughters, Ruth-Maye and Eleanor, will make their theatrical debut in "Quality Street."

The business world is represented in the cast by Katherine Kammerer, of the National Education Association, and by Rose Ellen Mattern, of the production staff group.

Although the production staff is in charge of a man, all his assistants are women. These include Mary Foley Benson, a scientific illustrator for the Department of Agriculture, who will paint the backdrop of "Quality Street"; Ina Hawes, assistant librarian of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, and two art students, Catherine Wheeler and Jessie Harden.

Research on Diets Made by Writer

Finds Small Earners Fare Worse Than Relief Group.

Low income families fare far worse, as far as diet is concerned, than families on relief.

This information is set forth in an article by Miss Dorothy G. Wiehl in the current number of the quarterly magazine of the Memorial Fund Foundation.

Miss Wiehl based her article on a house-to-house canvass of families in Baltimore, Cleveland, Detroit, Pittsburgh and Syracuse. On the basis of Government standards for the quantity of food needed to supply human energy, which is approximately 3,000 calories a day for each adult male, the survey showed a deficiency of 10 per cent in relief families and 20 per cent in low income families.

According to the article, low income families buy less food than in 1929, instead of reshaping their menus to retain the essential vitamin and mineral foods with cheaper produce. Lack of balance in diet was shown by the fact that most poor families eat more meat and fish than is required in a minimum cost adequate diet. Sugar and other sweets are used in excess of needs, and not enough eggs are included in the average diet.

Dark Semi-Sheer Frock Suitable for Afternoons

Pattern No. 647.

A ROOM crowded with bridge tables and chatting ladies gets very warm and stuffy. That is why women include one or two dark semisheer frocks even in their winter wardrobes. This dress is casual enough for any afternoon occasion, yet its draped cape-collar makes it quite appropriate for informal dinner and theatergoing.

The design is cut in sizes 32 to 46. While the gown is graceful and young in its smaller sizes, women who wear larger sizes will welcome it particularly. The neckline, the little half-belt in the back, the collar, and the cut of the skirt, all serve to hide unwanted plumpness.

Semisheer crepe is recommended, or a deep-toned velvet for a more formal dinner dress. The pattern is very economical of fabric, size 40 requiring only 3⅞ yards of 39-inch material.

Why They Are Always Happy

This isn't going to be any story at all; it's going to be a lot of little truths, and if any of you don't care for those little things, you are the very ones that ought to sit still and listen.

Jay Bird said he was in a tree at the schoolhouse in town the other day, eating some china berries, when he heard a lot of children talking about Blackie Bear and the other Creek Folks, when one of the little girls said it was strange, but mighty nice, that they didn't seem to ever have any fusses among themselves, but that everything went along just as nice as could be. If we take what that little girl said, and turn it around a little, we will have the whole answer to her question. Everything goes along as nice as can be just because they don't have any fusses.

The Creek Folks never say to each other: "You are crazy," or "You don't know what you are talking about," or "I won't do it," or "If you can't do it this way, I won't play." With them, Blackie is the teacher and the real director of the neighborhood and when he decides anything and tells them what to do, they go right on and do it. Blackie knows he can count on them, and they know they can count on him.

Yes, Blackie does let them say what they think about the way to do things, and if their way seems better than his he pats them on the back and tells them how much help they are to him. But if he decides that they are wrong, they don't have another word to say about it, but just go on and do it his way.

You see they all work together and try to do the same thing in the same way, and that's why they keep out of trouble and are able to outwit Mr. Man and Uncle Joe. Just as you have heard before, they "plan their work and work their plan."

When children at school try to do what the teacher is trying to help them to do, that is a case of two people working on a one-man job, and so it isn't hard to do. And when children at home try to do just what Mother and Daddy are trying to help them do, it's easy to get it done. So that's why the Creek Folks get so much done, and have such a good time. They don't waste any time in quarreling and finding fault with each other. And always with them it is "Do it now," while with Mr. Man and Uncle Joe it is "Do it tomorrow." And "tomorrow" Blackie and the boys are sitting around the big fireplace laughing at them.

Bull Fighter's Wife Flirts With Death In Ring With Him

Wives who assist their husbands in earning the family's living are numerous, but so far only one has appeared who goes into the bull ring to help her mate. She is Mrs. John Paget, daughter of an English racehorse trainer.

Just before Mr. Paget, who is from Leicester, flirts his cape at the frenzied bull for the death thrust, Mrs. Paget gallops around on horseback, sticking darts into the animal.

Recently the English matador and his feminine assistant killed a bull at La Linea, near Gibraltar. The crowd went wild and threw hats into the arena in honor of the Pagets, reports the London News Chronicle.

Reserve Stock Of Emergency Food Is Urged

By Dorothea Duncan.

KEEP AN emergency pantry shelf, and you will never be caught unaware if guests drop in unexpectedly just before mealtime.

The food you keep on your pantry shelf need not be an elaborate, expensive display. It is surprising how many delectable dishes can be prepared in a jiffy from the most inexpensive and unassuming can of spaghetti or beans.

Your grocery store offers unlimited suggestions for the emergency pantry shelf: soups, fruit or tomato juice cocktails, stews, potted ham, jars of bacon, cheese, pickles and olives, spaghetti, tins of crackers or cookies, mushrooms, tuna fish, salmon, baked beans, vegetables and fruits.

Friends from out of town often have the ungraceful habit of arriving a short time before luncheon, and usually on a day that you have planned to lunch lightly on soup and crackers. This is just the time that your pantry shelf will save your reputation as a perfect hostess. A glance at the well-stocked pantry shelf and a menu will form itself right before your eyes. It might be something like this:

Emergency Luncheon Menu.

Pineapple juice cocktail
Tomato and mushroom omelet
Asparagus tip and pimiento salad
Toasted crackers and cheese
Coffee

Everything on this menu, with the exception of the eggs for the omelet, the lettuce and the salad dressing, may be stored on an emergency shelf. The pineapple juice, asparagus tips and pimiento should be put in the coldest part of the refrigerator so they will chill as rapidly as possible.

The omelet is the only dish that requires a recipe, and it may be prepared quickly and skillfully as follows:

Tomato and Mushroom Omelet.

3 cups tomatoes
Salt and pepper
1 cup mushrooms
6 eggs
2 tablespoons chopped onions
2 teaspoons sugar
½ cup milk

Strain the tomato, add the onion, sugar, salt and pepper and cook several minutes, then add the mushrooms, sliced very thin. Make a plain omelet of the eggs and milk. Pour part of the sauce over the omelet just before folding, fold, place on a hot plate, pour the remainder of the sauce around it and serve at once.

While the omelet is being made, the crackers can be toasting in the oven, and the water for the coffee heating on the stove.

An emergency dinner offers just as small problem, if you have an emergency shelf on which to depend. Suppose you are planning to ask your husband to take you out to dine, and at 5 o'clock he calls to say he is bringing an old friend from California home to dinner? In this dilemma, the pantry shelf will help you out again.

Emergency Dinner Menu.

Consomme with wafers
Tuna fish shortcake
Green string beans Pickled beets
Head lettuce salad with Thousand Island dressing
Peach ambrosia Cookies
Coffee

Tuna Fish Shortcake.

Make a medium white sauce in a double boiler and flavor with a bit of chopped green pepper, red pimiento, olives and hard cooked eggs. Remove the tuna fish from the can and flake before adding to the white sauce. Heat thoroughly and serve between hot biscuits that have been split and buttered and cover top of biscuit with tuna mixture also.

There are several prepared biscuit mixtures on the market. With the addition of milk, and by carefully handling while rolling the dough, you can produce a delicious biscuit in half the time it would take to prepare an entire biscuit recipe.

Peach Ambrosia.

Chill canned sliced peaches, and just before serving remove from can, drain free from almost all of the juice and place in sherbet glasses. Sprinkle with coconut, the moist variety, and garnish with maraschino cherries.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Urticaria or Hives.

If the skin of normal persons is stroked rather firmly with a hard, smooth object, such as a penholder, there will usually follow a line of reddening due to a dilation of minute blood vessels. The reddening will be sufficiently distinct for a short while so that the entire extent of the pressure may be traced. In certain persons such irritation of the skin is followed by marked swelling and the development of wheals. Such a condition is known as dermorgraphism.

Many observers claim that the skin of about 5 per cent of all persons will swell following mild stroking. The swelling is caused by a pouring out of fluid from the circulation into the layers of the skin.

There are many toxins which produce this same phenomenon, the effect varying in proportion to the amount of the offending substance absorbed.

We know that now and then individuals are extremely sensitive to protein. Some are naturally so, others are rendered sensitive by the injection of protein.

There is no better exemplification of the saying: "What is one man's food is another man's poison" than urticaria. There may be and ofttimes is a personal reaction to certain foods that will bring on an attack of hives in one individual and not in a dozen others partaking of the same substance at the same time.

Occasionally, toxic products that may bring on urticaria will be taken in with foods that are partly decomposed or spoiled. Again, toxins may be developed from food through some disturbance in the digestive process.

Manifestations of urticaria are exceedingly annoying. There is usually sudden and intense itching of the skin with the appearance of wheals of various sizes and shapes. Some of these are the result of pressure of clothing or irritation by the fingers, as the more the skin is irritated the greater will be the extent of the swellings.

The acute attack may last for several days, although individual wheals may subside within a few hours. When the toxin circulating in the blood has been either eliminated or destroyed the condition will disappear.

The treatment is related as far as possible to the cause. If hives has resulted from the absorption of toxins from the intestinal tract, a brisk saline cathartic is advised. The diet should be confined to milk unless there is reason to believe that the patient is sensitive to milk protein. Warm baths, the water containing baking soda and a considerable amount of oatmeal or bran, often give considerable relief. After the bath the body should not be rubbed but dried gently with soft cloths. The coagulation of the blood is markedly diminished in urticaria, hence calcium salts are usually advised.

Many Leaders Plan to Attend Concert Nov. 8

Stokowski Conducts First Program of Philadelphia Orchestra.

Society and music lovers will attend the opening concert of the Philadelphia Orchestra in Constitution Hall, November 8, at 8:45 o'clock. The audience will be distinguished by the presence of Mrs. Roosevelt and her guests. The orchestra will be conducted by Dr. Leopold Stokowski, with the pianist, composer, Sergei Rachmaninoff, as soloist.

The boxes will be filled with season subscribers, as will many parts of the big auditorium, for "the Philadelphia" always attracts outstanding music lovers. The orchestra will give three concerts, others to be conducted by Otto Klemperer and Eugene Ormandy. Many persons who do not hold season reservations are also planning to attend the opening concert.

Among the distinguished boxholders at the opening concert will be Mr. Alexei Naymann, the charge d'affaires of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Others planning to attend are Mrs. Henry Morganthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. and Mrs. Johann G. Lohmann, of the German Embassy; Mrs. J. D. Brodhead, Mrs. Edwin Hahn, Mrs. Julius Lansburgh and Mrs. Norman Oyster, who will entertain at her home several members of the orchestra.

Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe will attend, returning in time for the event at which her own composition will be played.

JENNIFER HALE

By Rob Eden

Suspected of the murder of David Corey, Jennifer Hale escapes to Seattle under the name of Mary Dixon, meets wealthy Kent Severn, who falls in love with her and announces his engagement to her despite the objections of his mother. Mrs. Severn hires a detective, Andy Young, to search Mary's past for anything reflecting on her character; he discovers that she is Jennifer Hale and calls the police, who arrest her. Kent believes her innocent and announces that he will give his last cent to defend her; his father cuts him off in his will because of this decision.

SO that's what Severn thought, did he? A mistake? Sly minx—this Jennifer Hale, taking in a fine guy like Kent Severn. Ought to be strung up. Jim felt sorry for Kent.

"Got pass to see Miss Hale, I mean, Miss Dixon?"

Kent admitted he didn't have a pass.

"I'll fix you up. Mr. Severn, don't worry. Lucky I came down with you. May be some time before you can se her, though, because the cops will have to question her first. Routine work, you understand, but I'll see if I can't shoot you right in."

It was 7 in the morning before Kent saw a haggard Mary Dixon, whom everybody persisted in calling Jennifer Hale, and then his visit lasted only three minutes.

"Well, well, my boy. Been waiting long? Come in."

Kent, who had been waiting an hour for his father's attorney, followed him into his office and threw himself into one of the deep leather chairs. Tyron laid his brief case on his desk and removed his topcoat.

"Glad you've come to your senses, my boy. Just got away from your father. What an ordeal!" His eyes rolled back in his head. Tyron looked worn, too. He was too old to be routed out of bed at 2 o'clock in the morning for a session with Henry Severn. In his youth he had stood for it, and had been none the worse for it. Now it was different. He was as old as Henry, and yet Henry, aside from his heightened color, was standing the strain like a youngster.

Kent rubbed his unshaven chin.

"I can handle this—glad you came to me instead of your father. He's pretty bitter, but he'll see the light. Don't you worry. I can bring him around. A little hasty last night, eh? But that's the way with you boys. A pretty face and you're ready to throw aside your families——"

Help for Jennifer.

Kent interrupted impatiently.

"I didn't come to see you, Tyron, to have you go and intercede with my father. I came to see you because I want your advice on a lawyer."

Tyron started up in alarm.

"Not going to sue your father, Kent?"

"No, no. I want the name of the best criminal lawyer you can give me—for Miss Hale."

The name came hard. It was the first time he had uttered it. Miss Hale. Jennifer Hale . . .

"Now, my boy, this is nonsense, utter nonsense. I tell you it isn't too late to bring your father around. He admitted as much to me before I left the house—but if you persist in getting lawyers for this—girl—"

"I want the name of the best criminal lawyer I can get. That's why I came here, that's why I waited for you," Kent said doggedly.

"Miss Hale asked you to get a lawyer for her?"

"No, I offered."

"Are you crazy?"

Tyron threw up his hands. "You offered! Are you crazy? Don't you know what you're doing? I don't have to tell you how rich your father is. You should know—you're in the business with him even if you don't own any of the business yet. And your father's not a well man by any means. You should know that. And Larry's no executive. If Henry were to die next week, and Larry were to run the business himself—well, there would not be much business a couple of years from now. You know that, Kent. Listen, Henry hasn't signed the new will yet. I'm to take it to him tomorrow—we spent all morning making it out so that there's no possible chance of your getting a cent, not one cent. Larry can't give you a cent, that's fixed, because that's the way Henry wanted it. Larry can't give you a cent or he forfeits his inheritance. Damnedest will I ever drew up. But it's not signed yet, and if I know it, it won't be signed—"

"I didn't come to talk about wills, I came to talk about lawyers," Kent interrupted again. "Criminal lawyers."

"She Killed a Man"

Tyron fumbled wih the brief case, and finally with shaking fingers opened it and drew out some papers.

"These are notes on your father's new will, Kent. Reams of notes. This afternoon my secretary is going to start getting them together. She'll be busy on them until long past dinner. Tomorrow at nine I'm to go up to Henry and he's to sign the new will." He spoke slowly, carefully, as if he were talking to a small child.

Kent glanced at the paper, and then at Tyron, whose face was drawn and white. "Put it away. I don't want to hear any more about this will," he said wearily. "I want to hear about lawyers."

Tyron left the notes on the table and leaned back heavily in his swivel chair. "She killed a man, Kent."

"I saw her this morning, and she told me she didn't," Kent returned quickly.

"And you believe her?"

"I believe her," simply. Tyron's office faded away and he was once more in the plain room at the police station where he had seen Mary Dixon. Mary sitting under a bright blinding light, her face very pale. Her hat was off, and the light brought a red glow into her dark hair. Near her chair three detectives were standing. Another was sitting opposite her. "I didn't do it, Kent! Won't you believe me? I wouldn't lie to you!" One of the detectives winked at Kent when she said that, and the youth's fists clenched, but he controlled himself when he felt Hackett's hand on his shoulder and Hackett's voice saying "Steady there, old man, steady."

Everyone Believed.

All morning he had been hearing her tense small voice saying, "I didn't do it, Kent!" All morning he had been seeing those tragic brown eyes looking up at his, begging him to believe in her. The hour he had waited for Tyron, she had been with him, on the couch beside him. Mary who was not Mary at all, but Jennifer. . . .

If he could have touched her, held her in his arms, but he couldn't. Hackett had told him what he could do and what he couldn't before they went into the room. How tired she looked, how worn. Hackett had explained the officers were questioning her to get a confession. "But she said she didn't kill Corey!" Hackett hadn't answered that. Hackett believed with the rest of them that she had killed David Corey. Tyron believed it too, or else he wouldn't look so pityingly at him.

"I think you need some sleep, boy," he heard Tyron say as if he were far away. "Rest. You're overwrought. You should see a doctor."

"I want the name of a lawyer, and if you don't give it to me, I'll consult somebody else, Tyron."

"This defense is going to cost you money, Kent. Lots of money—that is, if you are going to take it on. Where are you going to get the money?"

"Sell your stocks at a loss, I suppose?"

"Yes."

His Stubborn Streak.

"Bad business. If you'd hold on to them, you could make some money. No time to be selling stocks now. Just how much money have you, or can you raise?"

"My stocks ought to net me $7,000, and I can sell my boat for about $2,500. I've got about a thousand cash."

"All you've got you're going to sink into defending Jennifer Hale? All the money you should use to put yourself into a business of your own!"

Kent reached for his hat and got up stiffly. Tyron took hold of his coat sleeve. "No, don't go, if that's what you're going to do, that's what you're going to do. I might as well try to change Henry's mind as yours. You've inherited his stubborn streak."

"Girl waive extradition?"

"She did. She leaves here for the south as soon as the Los Angeles police come up here to get her. They've already started—by plane."

Tyron shook his head slowly, and a groan left his lips. If anyone had ever told him that a son of Henry Severn would get mixed up with a murderess! When he finally spoke, it was with difficulty.

Eyes Had Glowed.

"Haller's your man. Neil Haller, Los Angeles lawyer, and a fine one. I wouldn't recommend him if I didn't trust him. I don't know him personally, but I know his work. He's expensive, though—and he takes only cases that appeal to him. You've got to sell your case to him yourself. You'll be leaving here soon, then?"

"Tonight—by car. I'm driving. Thanks, Tyron. I'll wire Haller right away."

Tyron watched him leave. He was fond of Kent, almost as fond of him as if he had been his own son. Two sons Henry had, and he had two daughters. One son, Henry had now, only one, the weaker of the two. The stronger had flown.

Kent Severn and Jennifer Hale! And the boy loved her. His eyes had glowed when he said, "I believe her."

Tyron's hand moved to his buzzer, and in a moment his secretary was in the room, and he was explaining to her the notes he had taken on Henry's new will.

Dillinger Break Brings Grilling Of 7 Indianans

Crown Point, Ind., Oct. 30 (AP).—Like a Halloween spook, the shade of John Dillinger bobbed up today to bedevil Indiana politicians in the closing days of the campaign.

Answering Republican critics who have attributed Dillinger's strange getaway from the jail here last March and the State Prison break of last September to Democratic introduction of the spoils system in the administration of penal institutions, Gov. Paul V. McNutt recently has predicted revelations concerning Dillinger's escape.

J. Edward Barce, assistant attorney general, today seized eight Lake County residents, carted them off to Monticello, 60 miles away, and there announced he had obtained from them information that he expected would lead to the arrest of three persons on charges of aiding Dillinger in his escape.

Warden and Seven Seized.

Those detained by Barce included Lewis Baker, warden of the jail from which the notorious Dillinger fled; Ernest Blunk, the jail fingerprint expert, who told of being forced to accompany Dillinger to Peotone, Ill., and four other men and two women.

The action of the assistant attorney general brought criticism from Democratic office-holders in Lake County who apparently felt the onus of the Dillinger break was being shifted to them by State party leaders.

Judge William J. Murray, of the Criminal Court, said he would summon a grand jury to investigate the activities of Barce and the State police. Robert G. Estill, prosecuting attorney, referring to the detention of Baker and the others, said, "It seems that we have a very good kidnaping case on our hands now."

Barce Charges a Plot.

Prior to detention of the various persons Barce had indicated he expected to develop that a plot to free Dillinger had been hatched in a Lake County beer tavern by associates of the gangster.

Barce said he had learned the gangster's pals once proposed to remove him by force from the jail here, where he was being held pending trial for the slaying of Patrick O'Malley, an East Chicago detective killed during a bank holdup.

This proposal, Barce said, was abandoned in favor of a more subtle scheme. The assistant attorney general said jail attaches were bribed to furnish the desperado with blue prints of the jail and adjoining buildings and thus he was enabled to make a smooth escape after he had intimidated jail employes with his wooden gun.

Barce said the plot had many ramifications, but he denied recent gang slayings in Lake County had any connection with it.

"The report that some gangsters have been murdered because of their knowledge of the plot to free Dillinger has persisted for several months," Barce said. "There is nothing to it. Our investigation is along entirely different lines."

12 Defendants In Insull Case Ask Acquittal

Directed Verdicts of Not Guilty Sought by Their Attorneys.

Chicago, Oct. 30 (AP).—Twelve business leaders, codefendants in the Samuel Insull mail fraud trial, took the spotlight today as their attorneys argued that Judge James H. Wilkerson should free them on directed verdicts of not guilty.

For Insull and his son, Samuel, jr., who have decided to save their first pleas for the jury, it was a quiet day.

The dozen, plus the three who made similar pleas yesterday, constitute all the defendants except the Insulls.

Attorney J. F. Reeve, speaking in behalf of four officers of the Utilities Securities Co.—Fred H. Scheel, Robert W. Waite, Frank R. Evers and George A. Kemp—pictured the defendants as victims of their attempts to rescue the Insull stockholders.

Reeve's argument followed that of Attorney Harry S. Ditchburne in behalf of Harold L. Stuart and his brother, Charles B. Stuart, and Clarence T. Machneille and Frank K. Shrader, all officers of the brokerage firm of Halsey Stuart & Co.

Then Attorney James G. Condon moved for directed acquittal verdicts for Waldo F. Tobey, counsel for Corporation Securities; Edward J. Doyle, former president of the Commonwealth Edison Co.; Philip J. McEnroe, vice president of "Corp," and John J. O'Keefe, its secretary.

Arguments were made yesterday in behalf of Stanley Field, former officer in Insull companies; Charles W. Sills, vice president of Corporation Securities, and Halsey Stuart and Clarence R. Whitworth, Chicago partner in the firm of Touche, Niven & Co., auditors for Corporation Securities Co.

Gloria's Picture Brings Tears To Eyes of Mother, on Stand

Judge Moves Further to Insure Secrecy of Proceedings.

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, pale and weak, wept on the witness stand in supreme court today when shown a picture of her 10-year-old daughter, Gloria, whose custody she is fighting to regain.

Staring straight ahead, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, paternal aunt of the child, seemed to pay no attention to the breakdown of Gloria's mother. She is seeking to retain custody of the child, who is living at the Whitney estate on Long Island, charging that the mother is not a fit person to rear Gloria.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, accompanied by a nurse, testified for several hours, tears streaming down her cheeks intermittently. Her counsel, Nathan Burkan, who examined Mrs. Vanderbilt, handed her many documents during the course of her testimony. She will take the stand again tomorrow.

But the nature of the widow's testimony was not disclosed. The public has been barred from the courtroom by Justice John F. Carew, who also has ruled that witnesses can not repeat their testimony outside the courtroom.

For the present, at least, the young mother will be barred from disclosing her answer to the charges of her former servants that she had not properly conducted herself while the child was in her custody.

The justice took two more steps to insure the secrecy of the case today. He ruled that outsiders may no longer peer through the glass windows of the courtroom door to identify witnesses and that he will also refuse to see newspapermen after each day's hearing. The only information to emanate from the courtroom will be a list of witnesses.

Jones and Waller Off for Bagdad

Mollisons Give Returning Fliers Engine Cylinder.

London, Oct. 30 (AP).—After being delayed by low pressure in the port engine, Cathcart Jones took off from Karachi, India, for Bagdad, Iraq, at 8 p. m., G. M. T. (3 p. m., Eastern standard time), in his flight from Melbourne to London.

While he and Ken Waller, copilot, hurriedly made repairs and set out back along the trail they flew in the England-to-Australia Derby, the movement of the Melbourne-bound derbyists was confined to Australia.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Mollison, who were forced out of the race at Allahabad, gave the returning fliers a cylinder out of the engine of their plane, a model identical with the one flown by Jones. After installing it the Englishmen were able to fly on to Karachi. Previously engine trouble had caused them to turn back.

More Refunds May Follow Baltimore Decision.

Baltimore, Oct. 30 (AP).—Federal tax refunds totaling $85,264.65 were ordered today in decisions by Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut in United States District court here.

The refunds were ordered on grounds of overpayment on estate taxes levied under the tax estate act of 1924. The largest of the refunds, $84,704.50, was to the estate of Mrs. Celeste M. Winans Hutton. The second, $560.15, was ordered returned to the estate of Mrs. Bessie K. Fleming.

Federal attorneys said that if the decisions are upheld the Government stands to lose millions of dollars which have been collected by the Internal Revenue Department on other estates.

Manager Slain In Garage Row; Employe Held

Murder Charge Is Placed Against Prince William Man After Shooting.

Edward Walsh, 34, World War veteran, was fatally wounded by an employe in the garage which Walsh managed in Woodbridge, Prince William County, Va., early yesterday morning, according to police.

Prince William County authorities were holding Olaf Pierson, 32, who worked at the garage, on a charge of murder.

According to Harry C. Burdette, sole witness to the crime, two hunters entered the garage about 3 a. m. and asked for food. Both Walsh and Pierson were on duty, and Pierson, Burdette said, went to a back room and returned with a .38-caliber revolver.

"Get out," he told the hunters. A moment later, according to police, he fired three shots into Walsh's body. Walsh died three hours later.

Police said a motive for the murder was lacking.

Walsh was a widower and Pierson unmarried.

Following the shooting, Pierson found Burdette outside and told him to call a physician. He then went to the home of his brother-in-law, where he surrendered when officers arrived.

Nice Charges Underworld Aids Ritchie

Quotes Article Citing Gambling Resort Near D. C.

Westminster, Md., Oct. 30 (Spl.).—Quoting from an article appearing in a Maryland newspaper recently, which stated that "just one mile from the center of Washington, D. C., only a few feet from the District line, is located the most notorious gambling resort in the world" and charging that "everybody knows that many of the most prominent and notorious figures of the underworld are working day and night to bring about Gov. Ritchie's election" Harry W. Nice, Republican candidate for Governor, answered a statement attributed to Gov. Ritchie last night, in which the Governor is alleged to have stated that Nice is favored by the underworld.

The answer to the charge featured an address by the Republican gubernatorial candidate, delivered at a rally held at the Westminster (Carroll County) Armory this evening, and attended by a capacity crowd which included State and County Republican candidates.

In his statement, Mr. Nice asserted that the "satellites" of what he termed the Governor's "dangerous and menacing machine" are "according to rumor, pressing for campaign contributions the various elements of the underworld, the hijackers, gangsters, racketeers and gamblers."

Framing his remarks in the form of a personal answer to the Governor, Mr. Nice said, "According to your own statements Maryland, under your administration, has been freed of these (underworld) organizations; there are none according to you, and I have it upon your own authority that there does not exist, either in Baltimore or anywhere in Maryland, gangs of kidnapers, racketeers, hi-jackers or organized vice, which you now say are supporting me. If your statement is true that there are no such in Maryland, then how can you say for a minute that I am being supported by such organizations, which you claim do not exist.

"All these statements by you concerning the underworld are being made for the sole and ulterior purpose of misleading the people and diverting their attention from the important issues of banking, waste and extravagance in your State departments, your broken promise to the motorists for a $2 license tag, and other important matters now occupying the public attention."

Motorist Is Held In Fatal Collision

Culpeper, Va., Oct. 30 (Spl.).—A crowd from Rappahannock and Culpeper Counties filled the Culpeper Courthouse today for the trial of E. A. Walter, jr., in county court. Walter, charged with involuntary manslaughter, was held for the grand jury.

The case arose from a fatal accident on the Orange road, near Culpeper, the night of September 26, when Dr. F. M. Hite, a dentist, was killed by a car driven by Walter. Mrs. B. R. Bell was seriously injured and remains in a critical condition in Charlottesville Hospital.

Commonwealth Attorney R. A. Bickers had charge of the prosecution, and C. T. Bowers, of Culpeper, and V. R. Shackelford, of Orange, appeared for the defense. Judge C. E. Reams, jr., presided.

When You Take 'Em The Fire, Salisbury Gives Curb Service

Salisbury, Md., Oct. 30 (AP).—Now that they are bringing the fires to the firemen, the Salisbury volunteer firemen are giving curb service. A truckman started it. His vehicle caught fire near here. A passing tourist, noticing the blaze, inquired:

"Do you want me to call the fire department?"

"No, thanks," replied the truckman. "I'm going right by the firehouse. I'll stop on my way."

With smoke and flame billowing from his machine, he drove nonchantly through Salisbury to the firehouse.

Rubbing their eyes in surprise, the firemen swung the big doors open, hauled out the water hose and put out the blaze without moving the fire truck out of its tracks.

A new use for fire extinguishers—extermination of snakes.

At least that is the use to which Ernest L. Shipley, telegraph operator at Mount Airy, Md., put a fire extinguisher the other day when he spied a 5-foot black snake curled up sunning itself on the railway tracks.

Shipley, without a gun or other weapon at hand, is said to have taken the fire extinguisher from his telegraph tower and to have doused the reptile with the contents of the fire-fighting apparatus.

To quote Shipley, the snake after its bath "curled up and went into everlasting bliss where all good snakes go."

If you lived down in the vicinity of Coeburn, Va., you probably would not go out of your home tonight without a bodyguard or at least a protective weapon. The reason—reports are prevalent in the neighborhood that a strange animal of "fearsome proportions" is loose in that mountainous country.

Dogs are said to be "scared to death" of the animal and one farmer reports his prized dog was badly mauled by the roaming creature.

"Has ears standing straight up, and has a lean, lanky body."

It is reported that some residents of the Coeburn neighborhood are attempting to organize a party to search for the animal, but to date the ranks of the huntsmen are very thin.

Billy Smith, Front Royal, Va., youngster, is in about the same predicament as the man who built a boat in his cellar only to find he couldn't get it out.

Billy decided to build a dog house for his canine companion. He completed the task and called in friends to admire his work. They all agreed Billy had done an excellent job.

Then Billy decided that he would move the dog house to the back yard—but the door to his workroom was too small and now it appears the dog will have to be admitted to the workroom before he can sleep in "the house that Billy built."

The poultry business has become a flourishing industry in Talbot County, Md.

Some years ago the farmer's wife raised a few chickens and took the eggs to market to exchange for coffee, sugar and other pantry necessities. Now, the farmer raises the chickens by the thousands. He ships hundreds of broilers to metropolitan markets and the eggs—crates of them—are sold to city buyers.

The chicken industry has changed from a side line to a means of livelihood.

Campaign Hot At Cumberland

Both Parties Put Complete Tickets in Race in Allegany County.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 30 (Spl.).—With both the Republican and Democratic party in Allegany County having full county tickets, the first time in a number of years, the present campaign carries much more interest than usual.

The closing weeks finds hundreds of workers on both sides putting forth every effort to win with the odds in favor of the Republicans, who have a majority of 4,928, according to the figures of the last registration. They gained 419 over the registration of two years ago.

While the Republicans have always put a complete county ticket in the field, this is the first campaign in several decades which is matched man for man.

Fugitive for a Year, Suspected Thief Held

Sheriff Ray Yohn said a tip that led to the arrest came from Wolfe's father, who said his son had threatened to burn the family home after getting into a fight with members of the family.

Walter Hampden Will Present a Repertoire of Classic Plays at the National

To Be Seen in Four Roles of Giant Stature

Recent Bills Not Repeated; Critics See a New Film; About the Showshops.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Respectful attention to his comparatively recent activities in the local theater might reasonably have led to the conclusion that any week of repertoire offered by Walter Hampden in the National Capital inevitably would include Rostand's "Byrano de Bergerac," Arthur Goodrich's "Caponsacchi" and Sir James Matthew Barrie's "The Admirable Crichton."

It is proportionatly inspiriting, therefore, to learn from the veteran Sam Weller, one of yesterday's welcome callers and Mr. Hampden's anticipatory cymbal-whanger, that when his star arrives in the National Theater the week of November 19, the plays which he will present will be Arthur Goodrich's slightly sharpened and accelerated acting version of Bulwer Lytton's "Richelieu" and Master Will Shakespeare's "Macbeth," "Hamlet" and "Richard III."

Played Record Run.

With what success Mr. Hampden has recreated the character of Cardinal Richelieu is evidenced by the fact that he played a record-breaking engagement of 12 weeks in it in his own theater in New York—the longest run "Richelieu" ever had enjoyed, despite the fact that the role is associated with some of the most brilliant and most famous names in the theater: William Charles Macready, for whom it was written; Samuel Phelps and Henry Irving, Edwin Forrest, John McCullough, Lawrence Barrett and Edwin Booth.

Hampden's Hamlet, of course, has been the standard for this matchless role in the United States for many seasons. If any ever won higher acclaim it might have been Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson's, not seen in this country for many years.

The supertragedy of "Macbeth" and the heroics of "Richard III" give promise of a week of classic drama in which the plays will be sharply and effectively in contrast.

Mr. Hampden will be supported by a scrupulously selected company of 35 schooled artists.

The presentation of George M. Cohan in Eugene O'Neill's drama of youth, "Ah, Wilderness," the week of November 12 and Mr. Hampden's repertory week, November 19, represents a slight realignment of bookings since the original announcement of the incoming plays. Next week, according to present outlook, the National will be dark. Then, instead of Eva Le Gallienne and a few Barrymores in "L'Aiglon" and the Theater Guild's production of Maxwell Anderson's "Valley Forge," will come Mr. Cohan and Mr. Hampden, in the order named. The others, it is expected, will come along a little later.

Seldom has an actor received such a tribute, by the way, as was accorded George M. Cohan in North Brookfield, Mass., the town of his birth, on Monday night. He played "Ah, Wilderness" in the Town Hall to an audience of 500, while 4,000 stood outside and listened to it through a public-address loudspeaker system. He came out and made them a speech after the performance.

And I wonder how Providence, R. I., where George M. wasn't much liked in his debut, liked that?

Miss Hutchinson Makes Debut.

I should hesitate to say that the new Warner Brothers production of "Happiness Ahead," costarring Dick Powell and Josephine Hutchinson, which was previewed by the dramatic desks yesterday afternoon, will turn out to be another "It Happened One Night"—with music added—but there can be no denying that in certain of its aspects it does come close to the freshness of viewpoint, originality of subject matter and breezy unconventionality of the Gable-Colbert hit.

It is primarily of interest to Washington, of course, because it signalizes the screen debut of Miss Hutchinson, a former Washingtonian and resident member of the old Ram's Head Players.

Miss Hutchinson's last appearance in Washington, I believe, was with Eva Le Gallienne last season, when she scored a decisive personal triumph by the excellence of her work in the title role of Miss Le Gallienne's elaborately fantastic production of Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland."

Hollywood Improves Her Art.

The cameras, Hollywood lighting and the experiness of studio makeup, if one may be permitted to say so, have a glorifying effect upon the already lustrous talents of this able young actress. There is that about her speech that is as distinctive, say, as Margaret Sullavan's, she photographs extremely well and is as free from any trace of camera-consciousness as any veteran actress in the film colony.

The story of "Happiness Ahead" is an imaginative romance involving multi-millionaires and window-washers that will be comprehensively reviewed in this space in due course. Its songs are for the most part catchy and whistleable, although I wouldn't be too sure about the one during which Dick Powell and Frank McHugh are strapped to the window ledges.

"Happiness Ahead," it may be set down with some surety, nevertheless, will click nobly with the vast majority of picturegoers. It has what it takes, even if it does sag just a trifle once or twice.

New Romantic Team.

And Josephine Hutchinson is someone to see, because a great deal will be heard of her on the screen from now on. In point of fact, she already is articled to costar with George Brent in an item called "Skipper of Ispahan," a colorful tale of the Orient, the high seas and New York, which will be directed by Michael Curtiz, who directed "British Agent."

In the belief of the Warner executives, the Hutchinson-Brent combination is destined to become one of the cinema's great romantic partnerships. Their optimism seems well founded.

The run of "The Gay Divorcee" will definitely come to an end at RKO-Keith's Thursday night, after two weeks of capacity business. Instead of "Lady by Choice," the succeeding picture originally announced, Manager Hardie Meakin calls up in practically high dudgeon to say that at the last moment the May Robson-Carole Lombard vehicle has been snatched right out of his hand, along with the new three-tone color process production of "La Cucuracha," one of the most widely applauded short reels of the year.

In place of this combination, "Gift of Gab" will open on Fifteenth street on Friday. This is the Universal special, starring Edmund Lowe and Gloria Stuart, with what the press agent denominates "30 stars in support." Among the 30 are to be found Alice White, Ruth Etting, Phil Baker, Paul Lukas, Ethel Waters, Victor Moore, the unforgettable Vice President Alexander Throttlebottom of "Of Thee I Sing" and "Let 'em Eat Cake;" Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Roger Pryor and Gus Arnheim and his orchestra.

Dots and Dashes.

R. J. W. writes interestingly to express a little friendly resentment that our reference to the Henry W. Savage production of "The Merry Widow," on which Ernst Lubitsch's picturization, coming Friday to the Palace, is based, ignored the charming actress who created the role of Sonia in this country. . . . Ethel Jackson, who was, and is, all that my correspondent so enthusiastically states, was not mentioned solely because Frances Cameron was the Sonia Washington knew best. . . . Some have tried to tell me that Lina Abarbanell also sang Sonia with success, but I seem able only to recall her in that French vaudeville that was so popular so long under the title of "Madame Sherry" . . . In which she, of course, played the title role. . . . And a card from Corbin Sheild, former manager of the Leader, Garden, Rialto and RKO-Keith Theaters in Washington, from an unheard of place in California by the name of Dinuba, where one of George Mann's string of 16 theaters is located. . . . Mr. Sheild is by way of being Mr. Mann's general field manager with headquarters in Modesto, Calif. . . . Then along comes a train-written letter from George H. Atkinson, recently here in the interests of "Roberta," now at the National, and preceding that admirable opus into the West. . . George recalls that he holds two records at the National — a $32,000 week with Jeanne Eagels in "Rain" and an eight-week run of Dr. W. Griffith's "The "Birth of a Nation . . . The three one-act plays to be presented by the Arts Club Drama Group on the evenings of November 13, 14 and 15, will be directed by Hester Walker Beall, Belle Howell Bohn and M. Forney Reese . . . The Albertina Rasch ballet in Lubitsch's "Merry Widow" are currently at the Shoreham . . . Doing two dances from the film. . . . The Drama Guild of Washington will inaugurate its season with a dinner assemblage in the Lafayette on Thursday evening, November 8, to which this column greatly appreciates having been invited as a perhaps not very innocent bystander. . . . Tickets, as you must know, are on sale for the first of the season's presentations by the Children's Theater of New York, "Pocahontas" . . . At the National Saturday morning, that would be. . . . The Pierce Hall Players' first play of the season will be Barrie's "Quality Street" . . . Sam Wheeler, manager of the Fox Film Exchange, New Jersey avenue and K street, is chairman of the ticket committee for the Variety Club's first annual frolic in the Willard, Saturday night, November 24 . . . The tariff is high, but the show will be worth it . . . $7.50 a plate . . . Cocktails at 7 . . . You ought to have no difficulty in arriving safely home by Tuesday!

Defiance Note.

Go to the National and hear her sing "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," in "Roberta," and then try to tell me there is no Tamara!

Spooks, Ghosts, Black Cats, Hoot Owls!

Not to mention Mary Carlyle, who somehow seems not at all to mind all of these eerie creatures associated with Halloween. If you are ever going to encounter any of these scary symbols of an evening of fantastic celebration, tonight will be the night! It might be well to keep an eye open, but the chances are that the blonde and buxom Miss Carlyle will not be among those present up and down Constitution avenue, riding a black cat or otherwise!

Straight From the Studios

By Speed Kendall.

Hollywood, Oct. 30.—Until Peggy Watters, a society belle, arrived here from Birmingham, Ala., Lyle Talbot was playing the romantic field in the cinema colony. He met her a week after her arrival last July and since then Talbot has been virtually out of circulation so far as other feminine charmers are concerned.

SALLY O'NEILL

So a little inquiry as to an engagement seemed in order yesterday, but Lyle opined that their romance hasn't reached the point of betrothal discussion yet, but there's no telling about the future. We'll wager on orange blossoms. Miss Watters came to Hollywood for only a short visit as the guest of Gail Patrick, who also claims Birmingham as her home.

Whence Film Titles?

The fact that, for all film marriages, the wedding service from the book of common prayer of the Church of England is used, brings to light an unusual paradox. Virtually the entire service has been used at some time or other for film titles.

Just now, M-G-M is filming "Forsaking All Others." Titles of the past include, "Love, Honor and Obey," "To Have and To Hold," "For Better or for Worse," "For Richer or Poorer," "Till Death Do Us Part," "I Take This Woman," and others. Scores of screen titles, also, are gotten from the Bible.

Small World After All.

Gwenllian Gill came to the screen from England, winner of Paramount's search for beauty contest in that country. Yesterday, she was hurrying out of the studio and ran smack into a man trying to enter. First, she was annoyed, then puzzled, and finally smiled.

The obstruction proved to be Lionel Tregellas, who made her screen tests in England that won her a contract. He is a technical director now on Gertrude Michael's picture, "Father Brown, Detective."

How It Goes In Show Business.

Charles Judels, on the screen, usually takes Italian or French character roles. Just now he is playing Italian in Ann Harding's "Enchanted April." Judel's Italian dialect is well nigh perfect.

A large group of real Italians were used on the set yesterday. One of the women, after hearing a scene run off, walked over to Judels and started jabbering to him in Italian. He couldn't savvy a word of it and finally called an interpreter, who informed him the woman was saying Judels was a credit to the race and a mighty fine actor.

But his admirer was much crestfallen when she learned that Judels is not an Italian and knows virtually nothing about the language.

Odd and Interesting People and Events.

Katharine Hepburn baked a cake and took it to the studio yesterday for all members of the "Little Minister" troupe . . . Romance reported between Cecilia Parker and Lanny Ross, but they know each other only from studio associations and have never been out together—that is, socially.

Tiffany Thayer, writer, has gone in for painting . . . Terry DeLapp, former publicizer for Mae West and her pictures, welcomes an 8-pound son at Pasadena Hospital; it's Terry 2d . . . Jean Muir's stand-in, Jane Downey, is a well-known swimmer . . . Frank R. Swezey, 9, of Newburgh, N. Y., writes Director Josef von Sternberg asking for one of the little aluminum soldiers used in "The Scarlet Empress;" Von Sternberg dug two of them out of the prop room and sent them.

Toby Wing and Howard Hughes making the rounds, first the Cocoanut Grove, then Hollywood Brown Derby for midnight supper . . . J. P. McAvoy has taken a Hollywood apartment for the winter months but will maintain his Laguna Beach home for week-ends . . . Clark Gable off to Utah on another hunting trip . . . Ruby Keeler entertaining 40 women golfers from the Los Angeles Country Club tournament at Warners' studio.

Fred Keating dining Barbara Blair at the Brown Derby . . . Sally O'Neil is a popular young lady, sitting amongst four young men at Levy's Tavern . . . Robert Barret, the character actor, speaks nine different dialects . . . And Arthur Vinton is growing a mustache.

Onslow Stevens much better after an attack of ptomaine poisoning . . . Andy Clyde has three watch dogs . . . Director Al Santell, now in England, is the champion long distance salesman. He sold his automobile to Lawrence Howard merely by sending a picture and the machine is now en route by boat from the Continent.

Each "Siamese" Twin Takes Husband Soon

Mansfield, Ohio, Oct. 30 (AP).—The Hilton "Siamese" twins came forth again today with pronouncements, Violet that she would marry in South Carolina "soon" and Daisy, that she "might get married in six months."

Violet said they would go to Harrisburg, Pa., to join an orchestra with which Maurice Lambert, her trombonist sweetheart, plays, for a Southern tour.

A Daughter Is Born To Swedish Princess

Stockholm, Oct. 30 (AP).—A daughter was born tonight to Princess Sybilla, wife of Prince Gustaf Adolf, eldest son of the Swedish crown prince, inaugurating the fourth generation in the Swedish royal family.

If the child had been a boy it would have been a future heir to the Swedish crown. The birth was heralded by the pealing of church bells and a royal salute of 42 guns, half the number that would have marked the birth of a prince.

Post's Travel Lecture Draws 1,000 Hearers

'Romance of West Indies' Is Portrayed By Albert K. Dawson.

The second of the 1934-35 series of Washington Post Travel Lectures, given last night at the Masonic Auditorium, attracted 1,000 "armchair travelers" as Albert K. Dawson, famous traveler, lecturer, and author, described the "Romance of the West Indies." The first lecture, "Around the World in 90 Minutes," was given a week ago.

Mr. Dawson's lecture, which was beautifully illustrated with colored slides and motion pictures of scenes in the West Indies, and along the northern coast of South America, was particularly interesting since Mr. Dawson has visited those countries more than 60 times. After the lecture, many persons who had met him during cruises in past years renewed their acquaintance with him.

Besides a description of the countries "visited" during the lecture, Mr. Dawson told many interesting details of the history of Cuba, the Republic of Haiti, Venezuela, Panama, and other places, giving an insight into the glamorous romance typical of the islands and countries of the Caribbean Sea. He has recently returned to this country after several months spent in Russia, and will be the speaker at The Post's Travel Lecture on Soviet Russia, next February.

The third of The Post's Travel Lectures this year, "India, Burma and Ceylon," will be delivered next Tuesday evening at the Masonic Auditorium, Thirteenth street and New York avenue northwest, by Walter T. Biscoe, well-known platform speaker and world traveler who has spent many years in the Far East. Tickets for this and future lectures of The Post series may be obtained at the business office of The Washington Post, E street near Fourteenth, or at the box office in the auditorium the night of the lecture.

2 Found Guilty In Police Trial

One Faces Dismissal for Unlawful Use of Gun; 2d Fined $100.

Charges against two policemen were upheld yesterday by the Police Trial Board.

Policeman John E. Cockrill, attached to the Traffic Bureau, was found guilty on charges of unlawful use of his service revolver and was recommended for removal from the department. Charges of conduct unbecoming an officer brought recommendations of a $100 fine against Sergt. William F. McDuffy, of the Ninth Precinct.

Cockrill, it was alleged, fired several shots at a taxicab on October 22. The trial board was told that Cockrill's wife was in the taxi and that the shooting climaxed a family argument. No one was injured. Recommendations for his dismissal will be forwarded to the District Commissioners.

Sergt. McDuffy, it was testified, used unnecessary violence against a motorist. On September 9, it was charged, he stopped the automobile of A. B. Curtiss, 26, of the 1800 block of Minnesota avenue southeast, near Twenty-second street and Railroad avenue northeast.

After jerking Curtiss' permit from his hand, Sergt. McDuffy allegedly slapped the motorist and roughly handled him. Curtiss testified that the policeman was in civilian clothes and failed to make known his identity. Recommendations for the $100 fine also will be sent to the Commissioners.

IF YOU are weary of apartment-hunting or cooling your heels on a street car platform, you may be able to exchange positions with some one anxious to come to Washington from the South, Pacific Coast or Middle West. Or if for other reasons a transfer is desired, as an excerpt from one of many such letters to the Federal Diary indicates:

If You Don't Watch Out!

"Oh the goblins will get you,
If you don't watch out!"
Better stick to Uncle Sam—
Who knows they're all about.
He has spotlights playing
Over every den and dive;
And the day must surely dawn
When crime will cease to thrive.

He has shrewd witches riding
On broomsticks through the air—
They wear those Justice badges,
And will always take a dare.

Have you seen his old black cat
With the bullet-proof tail?
He just adores criminals,
And invites them all to jail.

So try to be good children,
And stay close to Uncle Sam.
If you don't obey his laws
You'll get in an awful jam!
You can't escape his witches—
They are stationed everywhere!
"Now mind your P's and Q's,"
If for freedom still you care.

Millions of Dollars at Stake in Running of Cambridgeshire Today

Coach Pixlee Learns—Too Late.

THE week of the big wind and the great aerial attack is in full swing in Washington. Pass snatchers, adept at snaring ducats to the big games, are rising like magic in the unprotected zones. They have one creed, one doctrine—the pass is better than the gallop to the box office.

These pass snatchers, if laid end to end—well it would be a pretty good idea. But make no mistake about these babies who form on the right. They know their football, can scent the choicest games months in advance, and are an infallible index to the box-office success of the games. But, unlike Gaul, they are divided into only two parts—those who can be insulted, and those who can't. The latter are in the majority, and bounce when dropped.

This week they are in a dilemma, with George Washington, Catholic University and Maryland U. offering conflicting attractions. The game that draws the most requests for complimentary tickets is the game that will be complimented by these football savants as the best attraction. At this writing, the G. W.-Vanderbilt and Catholic-Western Maryland battles are running neck-and-neck for the approval of pass list.

Of Several Classifications.

WHAT manner of men are these pass snatchers? Not all of them are the boys with the one-way pockets. Fellows well able to pay their way, even rich men, like their passes. There is even the specie of pass-snatcher who would pay for the privilege if need be. These are the folk who like to be seen filtering through the press gate, which, by some perverted reasoning of their very own, seems to establish them as important figures in the scheme of sporting life.

They have more methods of approach than the New Deal has initials, do these ducat seekers. Their tactics run the gamut of flattery, cajolery, cunning and unblushing demands. And woe to the sports editor who turns down the testy ones. Friendship that probbably was never more than synthetic flies out the window. Hell hath no fury like such a pass-seeker scorned.

Past masters at masking their requests are these hopeful pass-snatchers. Weeks before the start of the football season, they elicit a casual promise of "a coupla ducats to the game on November 10," without mentioning the rival teams. Too late does the sports editor realize that this November 10 game is the battle between G. W. and the unbeaten Louisiana State—the outstanding game of the season here. He is hooked by the cunning of the pass-snatchers. Verily, one must be on guard.

A Lot of Huey, Espey's Desire.

JOHN KINGSBURY ESPEY, the best-dressed reformed sports writer south of U street, who is currently engaged in beating the publicity tom-toms for George Washington's football teams, is intent on a master stroke. Nothing less than the presence of Cheer Leader Huey Long with the Louisiana State team at Griffith Stadium one week from Saturday will appease the ambitions of Maestro Espey, whose sense of showmanship is exceeded only by the height of his collars.

As Minister of Propaganda and Public Enlightenment of G. W. U., Espey has already flooded Louisiana with his persuasive literature calculated to induce a sizable delegation from Dixie to the game. But not until his agents reach the ears of Senator Long with a sensational plan that is the product of Espey's ingenuity, will Espey feel that his hopes are headed toward success.

Briefly, Espey has outlined the following program for Senator Long, pointing out that the Capital is the fitting setting for the launching of the long-projected Long coup: Senator Long will address the crowd through the amplifiers between the halves and then announce his plans to take over Mexico and in due time annex the United States, thus doing away with the necessity and expense of a Presidential election with Huey's hat in the ring.

Coach Pixlee Learns—Too Late.

TOO late, alas, did Coach Jim Pixlee, of the Colonials, learn of Espey's maneuver. If there is one human being Pixlee would be pleased to see absent from the ball park on the day that G. W. plays Louisiana State, it is Huey Long. He learned from his scouts at the Louisiana-Vanderbilt game at Nashville last week how Senator Huey led the parade, led the cheers and otherwise disported himself until the Louisiana team was inspired to surpass itself in physical output.

Louisiana, 29-to-0 victor over Vanderbilt, will be tough enough G. W. plays Louisiana State, it is Huey Long. He learned from his scouts that Senator Huey led the parade, led the cheers and otherwise disported himself until the Louisiana team was inspired to surpass itself in physical output.

Giants to Sell 12 Men? Huh! Comment of Terry's Bosses

By George Kenney.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—If Memphis Bill Terry intends to send 12 of his Giants to the baseball auction blocks of the lower Mississippi, he may find Casey Stengel, of the Brooklyn Dodgers, and Frankie Frisch, of St. Louis Cards, among the assembled bidders. But neither of Terry's rival Simon Legrees frantically packed his portmanteau today to attend the disposal of the Giants' Uncle Toms.

Whether Memphis Bill was pulling merely another costly wisecrack when he announced in New Orleans yesterday his intention to wreck the Giants by trading a dozen or so of his ball players, or was really speaking with the voice of authority, was something that even his best friends couldn't tell today.

Air of Embarrassment.

In fact, Charles A. Stoneham, who pays Terry's salary, as well as the salaries of the rest of the Giants, and who should, therefore, be in a position to know what is to become of his organization, didn't know quite how to treat Terry's remarks. In fact, there was an evident air of embarrassment in the business headquarters of the Giants here today.

On the one hand, Stoneham, through Eddie Brannick, the Giants' traveling secretary, indicated he would prefer not to discuss the Terry tirade just yet, and gave the impression that, perhaps, Terry had reason for saying that all but himself, Mel Ott and Carl Hubbell were available for the auction block. On the other hand, the thought of parting with such stars as Joe Moore, Freddy Fitzsimmons, Hal Schumacher, Travis Jackson and Hughey Critz was, indeed, painful.

Couldn't Mean Moore.

"I'm sure," said Brannick, somewhat fearfully, "that Bill didn't mean he'd get rid of Joe Moore, for instance. And as for the others . . ."

Brannick shuddered at the thought.

"But maybe there are some deals pending," he added, hastily. "There might be, you know."

To lend credence to the theory that htre may be barters in the offing involving Giant players was the announcement that Jim Tierney, secretary of the club, was "out of town for a few days." Where he was, however, remained a secret.

Wisecracking Again.

"Terry must have been wisecracking—again," said Casey Stengel, manager of the Dodgers, in a long-distance conversation from his winter home in Glendale, Calif., today. The "again" referred to the ill-advised observation of Terry last spring—"Are the Dodgers still in the league?"—which inspired Stengel and his Dodgers to knock the Giants right out of the National League pennant in the last two games of the season.

"Or maybe Bill waited too long to do any trading," Casey added. "He should have traded some of them a few weeks before the season closed. They looked—er—tired."

"I know we have a few men that Bill would certainly consider if we were to discuss trades, but whether I'd consider letting them go is something else again.

Worth All 12 Men.

"Van Mungo, for instance, is worth all 12 of the guys Terry wants to get rid of. Didn't he lick the whole Giant team by himself a couple of times last year?

"But if Bill wants to trade, why, sure, I'll be interested. I'd trade with any one if I can help our ball club."

"Why should I break up a winner?" he wanted to know at his New Rochelle, N. Y., home. "Of course, I'll make any trade that's a bargain for the Cards, but it'll have to be a real bargain. I wouldn't trade Dizzy Dean, for instance, in a straight player deal for Hubbell. Hubbell can't pitch as often as Dizzy without breaking down."

4 American Horses in Big Field

Mate, Bondsman, Statesman to Start; French Entry 10-1 Favorite.

NEWMARKET, Eng., Oct. 30 (AP). Four American horses are among the 37 named today to run tomorrow afternoon in the historic Cambridgeshire Stakes, one of the great fall stakes of the English turf.

Although somewhat overshadowed as a sporting spectacle by the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes which is decided on its running, the Cambridgeshire annually attracts most of the better handicap horses in training on English tracks. Victory in the event is highly prized, even though the stakes are only £1,000 with extras.

Four American Horses.

This year's American entry, All well regarded, is one of the best in years. It includes A. C. Bostwick's Mate, William Woodward's Bondsman, Victor Emanuel's Statesman and A. K. Macomber's Tabasco 4th.

With the distribution of millions of dollars hinging on the results, the historic stakes will be run over 1⅛ miles.

Overshadowing the race itself will be the awarding of upward of $10,000,000 to the lucky holders of tickets, over 500 of them Americans, in the Irish Free State Sweepstakes.

Bondsman is not highly favored, being held at 22 to 1 in the betting. Statesman and Mate are quoted at 35 to 1 and Tabasco fourth at 66 to 1.

Odds on Favorite, 9 to 1.

A last-minute switch in the betting odds installed O. V. Whitney's Wychwood Abbot the favorite at 9 to 1. The French-bred mare, M. Leon Valterra's Mary Tudor II, the erstwhile choice, which will be ridden by Steve Donoghue, was held at 100 to 8, followed by Caymanas at 100 to 7.

If one of the American horses should win it would be a "double" for the United States in the two big fall stakes. Marshall Field's Enfield won the Cesarewitch two weeks ago. Enfield's trainer, Boyd Rochfort, also handles Bondsman.

Denbigh is high weight of the field with 133 pounds. Mate is highest handicapped of the American horses, being assigned 129. Mary Tudor II is being asked to carry only 115.

Drawings Closed.

Dublin, Irish Free State, Oct. 30 (AP).—The draw for the Irish Free State Hospitals Sweepstake was completed today when the last of the £100 (about $500) cash consolation prizes was taken from the drum.

Two thousand of these prizes were distributed. Of these, ticket holders in the United States received 587, in Great Britain 1,013, in the Irish Free State 112 and in the rest of the world, 258.

Composite Triple Threat of Vanderbilt's Back Field

Richmond U. Sees Victory Over G. U.

It was a member of the University of Richmond football team speaking and his tone plainly denoted the attitude prevalent on the campus here regarding next Saturday's clash with the Hoyas.

Richmond has lost but one game. It has won four, all shut-out victories over some rather impressive foes, Cornell being its most outstanding victim. V. M. I., Roanoke and Hampden-Sydney have all become enmeshed in the Spiders' web and none of them has crossed the Richmond goal. Emory and Henry has been its lone conqueror, but its 13-to-0 victory is regarded as a fluke by Spider supporters.

Coach Given Credit.

Thistlethwaite's chief technical change in the transformation of the team has been from an unbalanced to a balanced line with introduction of a modified Warner system, but his instilling of a new spirit into the play of the Spiders has been more prominent to close observers.

And now comes Thistlethwaite's first major test in his new post. He knows that Georgetown is undefeated and unscored upon and he realizes that its 0-0 draw with N. Y. U. last Saturday will make it none the easier to be defeated next weekend. In fact, he is more sober-minded about the outlook and, expressing the opinion that Georgetown has a powerful team, philosophically pictures his team doing well if it can hold the Hoyas to three touchdowns.

Shenandoah Takes On Baltimore Team

Squad's Goal Uncrossed in Season's First Half.

Dayton, Va., Oct. 29 (Spl.).—Shenandoah College, with a record of having been unbeaten and unscored upon so far this season, will attempt to add the University of Baltimore to its string of victims when they invade Baltimore for their game this Saturday.

Under the direction of Curg Hill, former Davis-Elkins and Quantico Marine star, Shenandoah has developed this year into one of the strongest teams in the smaller realm of Eastern fooball.

Equipoise Passes Up $25,000 Race for Minor Sprint Today

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Oct. 30 (AP). The greatest star on the American turf will be relegated to the side show tomorrow when Equipoise, C. V. Whitney's great handicap champion, makes his first start since early spring in a $5,000 added 6-furlong sprint at Narragansett Park.

Carrying 130 pounds, the 6-year-old, who has been to the barrier 47 times and earned $333,950, will test his injured foot against seven sprinters who do not appear to be worthy of being stabled on the same lot with him. Trainer Tom Healy believes the Whitney star, out of competition since early spring, is ready for distances up to 6 furlongs. If so, "Ekky" should be able to fall twice and still beat his field.

Contention, if any, will probably come from the Brookmeade Stable's Okapi and the improved Teralice, who will also carry 130 pounds.

This sprint will follow the runing of the $25,000 added Narragansett Special, a mile and three-sixteenths event for 3-year-olds and up. When this huge stake was arranged, the track management banked on the entries of not only Equipoise, but also those of Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Cavalcade and Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Discovery, who are now out of training.

Boxing Game Test Slated for Friday

Madison Square Garden Weighs Future Shows.

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—Madison Square Garden will do it's NRA best to relieve unemployment among the lightweights Friday night with the first indoor show of the season.

If this show doesn't attract the customers in large satisfying droves, the Garden's oft-repated threat to forego boxing in the future for more lucrative promotional ventures might materialize.

Harry Dublinsky, recent conqueror of Tony Canzoneri, and Frankie Klick, who put the slug on Kid Chocolate, meet in what is billed as the main event.

Expects Big Crowd For Wasps Game

Emory and Henry Ready for Wake Forest.

Emory, Va., Oct. 30 (Spl.).—The biggest football crowd in Emory and Henry College history is expected to be on hand here Saturday when Coach "Pedie" Jackson sends his Wasps against the powerful Wake Forest eleven.

Wake Forest is boasting the finest team in history. Several weeks ago they handed North Carolina State the short end of a 13-to-12 score. Their schedule includes games with Duke, North Carolina, Davidson and other leading Southern teams.

Minor League Club Drafts Two Players

Selection by Johnstown First Move Since 1927.

Durham, N. C., Oct. 30 (AP).—The Johnstown Club of the Middle Atlantic League drafted Infielder Stanley Sperry from Eau Claire Club and Outfielder Morris Arnovich from Superior, both in the Northern League, minor league baseball headquarters announced here today.

The selection marked the first time since 1927 that a class C club has employed the draft, and also officially closed the regular drafting periods of baseball for the 1934 season.

By John R. Vosburgh.

TWO little boys in blue, Bounding Billy Richardson and Chug-Chug Johnnie Jones, led Central High's rejuvenated football forces to a 28-to-6 victory over Roosevelt yesterday at Central Stadium.

With the diminutive Richardson and the happy-go-lucky Jones providing a new and much-needed scoring punch, Central proved a team far removed from that which fell listlessly before Tech last week, 45 to 0.

While the Roosevelt opposition was hardly of a caliber to be compared with Tech, Central was scarcely expected to roll up 28 points against the big Rough Rider aggregation. But the reinforcements which the new advisory made eligible for yesterday's game apparently have given Coach Coggins' crew new life.

Line Opens Hole.

Richardson and Jones found they had a line in front of them they could depend upon to open holes. The towering, 200-pound George Mandes at tackle and the able Ross Chaimson at guard, both new insertions in the line-up, were conspicuous in the Central attack.

It was Bill Vermillion, another newly eligible man, who took Richardson's neat pass, thrown at full gallop, from the 30-yard line in the first period for the first touchdown. Vermillion and Jones collaborated to put the ball in scoring territory not long afterward and Capt. Don Dunlap fell back and shot a pass to Charlie Kline for the second touchdown.

Advance Ball 65 Yards.

Jones and Richardson, aided by effective interference, accounted for the third one in the second quarter, alternating in advancing the ball from their own 35-yard line. Jones went over from the 2-yard line for the score.

The same little fellow added some variety to the performance by drop-kicking a field goal shortly after the start of the second half to give Central a 22-to-0 lead. An 18-yard run by Richardson and a 23-yard jog by the short-statured, short-stepping Jones had put the ball on the 12-yard line preparatory to the kick.

Pass Nets Touchdown.

Roosevelt, which had displayed flashes of brilliance in the way of a passing attack, finally connected for a touchdown in the closing moments of the third quarter. The Rough Riders took the ball on downs on Central's 33 after the Mount Pleasanters evidently forgot to kick on fourth down and passed incompletely instead. On the first play, Frank Baroni flipped to Spiro Kolius, his left end, who literally took the ball out of the hands of Norman Sabatini, Central's big half back, and ran 15 yards for his team's sole score.

Richardson got loose for a 53-

Generals Cause Middies to Drill

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 30 (Spl.). That the Navy football coaches view the Washington and Lee outfit with no little alarm, was indicated today by an intensive preparation launched for the battle to be waged in Thompson Stadium Saturday.

The mentors point to the fact that the Generals will present a ponderous and aggressive forward wall, much heavier than anything the Tars have encountered thus far, a combination that outplayed the strong Princeton team two weeks ago until the last two minutes of play, and then, bowing in defeat by only a 2-point margin.

They figure that the Virginians

Wright Rides Last Three Winners to Take Laurel Jockey Crown From Meade

3d Straight Annexed by Red Wagon

Trainer Bedwell Shares Closing Day Honors With 3 Winners.

By Walter Haight.

THE youthful jockey, Wayne Wright, and the veteran trainer, H. G. Bedwell, dominated the program as horse racing waved good-by to nearby Laurel yesterday after a stay of 25 days. Wright rode three winners during the day to finish the meeting with the riding laurels in his grasp. Going into the last program tied with Jockey Don Meade at 26 winners, Wright saw the Bradley jockey take the lead, and then came back to run his string to 29. He clinched the honors by winning the final race.

Wright's three winners, which came in the sixth, seventh and eighth races, were sent to the post by Trainer Bedwell. And the two were a picture of happiness as they walked back toward the paddock as the sun was setting. Bedwell had his hand on Wright's shoulder and he might have ben saying, "Little man, you've had a busy day."

Reached Fever Pitch.

It was a busy day for young Wright. Although a prize had not been offered for the meeting's leading rider, the contest between Wright and Meade had reached fever pitch in the jockeys' room, in the paddock, in the club house, in the grand stand and around the stables.

And it was only fitting that the battle should be decided on the race track. There the two boys met, not only at the barrier, but in the heat of two thundering and thrilling finishes. In the fourth race it was Meade who had the upper hand. With both boys pounding their mounts like tiny Trojans, Meade barely nipped Wright at the wire as Bethlehem Star defeated Stegal.

Red Wagon Victor.

In the seventh race, Wright was the winner. He kept Red Wagon going long enough to nullify the closing rush of Meade on Bold Lover. This was the winner that put Wright ahead, for he had scored in the previous race with Frumper.

Meade had a chance to even the battle in the eighth, but Wright, away from the barrier like a shot on Manager Bill, made every post a winning one. The expected fight down the stretch with Battle of Killiecrankie and Meade failed to materialize.

Trainer Bedwell had a right to smile when Frumper and Manager Bill won, but he probably laughed aloud when he saw Red Wagon roll down the stretch to victory. The race marked the third time Bedwell has sent Red Wagon to the post and the third time that the horse has won.

Claimed Recently.

What made victory even sweeter was the fact that Bedwell claimed Red Wagon two weeks ago for $1,500. In each race he has moved the gelding into a higher grade of competition. Yesterday, Red Wagon was believed to be overmatched again. He ran in the stake division against horses valued at $5,000 and, what's more, he was never headed during the 6-furlong dash.

Red Wagon is an unsound horse, being of the type known as a "bleeder." These horses bleed from the nose in some races, and the condition is said to be incurable. However, Red Wagon has never faltered since coming into the hands of Trainer Bedwell.

Diablesse Is Victor.

Although the Wright-Meade jockey battle occupied the spotlight, the program did have a feature race. It was "The Gunpowder," a mile test for 2-year-olds. The winner turned up in H. C. Phipps' Diablesse, a member of a three-horse entry. Although the last "triple-threat" combination to be sent postward—the Labrot Entry—was disqualified, the customers made Diablesse, Diverting and Palma the odds-on favorite.

Then entry barely missed running one, two, when Palma was collared in the closing strides by Stavka for second money.

Veteran Used In 1934 for Utility

Feats at Plate, on Grid Will Live Always in Alabamans' Minds.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30 (AP).—Riggs Stephenson, outfielder with the Chicago Cubs for nine years was given his unconditional release today.

Instead of coldly writing Stephenson that he was no longer a member of the Cubs, President Philip W. Wrigley summoned the veteran outfielder from his home down in Alabama and presented him a watch as a remembrance from the Cubs for his years of faithful service. Last season he was used only as a pinch-hitter and substitute outfielder.

Will Never Be Through To Hero Worshippers

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Oct. 30 (AP). Today the Chicago Cubs gave him a watch and told him he was through.

But to thousands of hero worshippers in this section, Jackson Riggs Stephenson, the old war horse, will never be through.

His exploits as a slashing full back in the days when Alabama's football team was aptly termed the "Thin Red Line" and his prowess at the plate on the baseball field, will add spice to many a winter's tale long after the watch has run down and the books which contain his batting record have grown musty with time.

Average of .334.

For "War Horse" is still a name to conjure with on the university campus here, even after the latter day heroes have carried the school's name to far greater National prominence.

At Akron, down in Hale County, Stephenson has a plantation, and as he hunts up and down the reaches of Five Mile Creek, he can think about his lifetime batting average—it was .339 for his 12 years as a regular.

Stephenson was born in Akron January 5, 1899, and played baseball there before he rode up to Tuscaloosa to play baseball and football. His teammates on the 1920 Alabama baseball team included such future greats as Luke and Joe Sewell, Ike Boone and Lena Styles.

Hit .444 in Series.

He went to the majors from college and any Cub fan can tell you he batted .444 in the World's Series of 1932, and could hit when hits meant the ball game.

But to those who saw him on the gridiron, the name of "War Horse" Stephenson will not bring pictures of a slugging outfielder—but of a crashing, plunging, driving full back, out there batting away against bigger and more powerful foes, because "he had what it takes."

Maryland A. C. Plays Marion On Sunday

Heated Clash Is Expected; Both Are Now Tied for League Lead.

HIGH explosives will be released along the sandlot football front Sunday when the Marion A. C. champions, and Maryland A. C. attempt to break their first-place tie in the unlimited division of the National City Football League.

The game, scheduled for Duffy Stadium in Seat Pleasant at 3 p. m., will find both teams throwing into action their strongest line-ups. Marions, held to a 6-6 draw last Sunday by Palace, and Maryland, 28-6 victors over Brentwood Hawks, have four points each to their credit in the league standings.

In the other unlimited game Brentwood Hawks will meet Seaman Gunners at the Navy Yard gridiron. Palace draws a bye. The Palace team is in third place with three points, and Seaman Gunners have one. The Hawks have none having been defeated in both its games.

Other Good Games.

Hot contests also loom in the 150-pound division of the league. Northeast Boys Club meets Centennials, at Gonzaga at 3 p. m.; St. Stephens opposes Apaches at Duffy Stadium, and Southwest A. C. takes on Cleveland Chargers at Gonzaga at 1 p. m. The Saints and Apaches meet in a preliminary to the Maryland-Marions game.

St. Stephens and Northeast Boys Club are tied for top with four points each, with Centennials and Southwest in second with three each.

In the 135-pound loop, Brookland Boys Club, league leaders, clashes with Southwest Gordon's Market; Virginia Avenue meets the Centennials, and Georgetown Boys Club faces Brookland Coal Co.

Gonzaga, Alexandria In Poct-Season Game

A post-season football game has been arranged between Coach Orrel Mitchell's Gonzaga eleven and Alexandria High. The game will be played at Baggetts' Field, Alexandria, on Thanksgiving Day.

The possibility of a play-off for the prep school championship between St. John's and Gonzaga, which played to a 0-0 tie early in the season, was eliminated with Gonzaga's 13-to-6 defeat by Georgetown Prep last week.

A Dinner For Jo-Jo.

College Park, Ga., Oct. 30 (AP).—An old-fashioned Georgia testimonial dinner is all set for Joiner ("Jo-Jo") White, the Detroit centerfielder.

Col. Huston May Buy Dodgers And Appoint Ruth as Manager

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (AP).—Col. Tillinghast L. Huston, former part owner of the Yankees, came forward today as a possible purchaser of the Brooklyn Dodgers and employer of Babe Ruth as manager.

Huston, who as partner of Col. Jacob Ruppert, engineered the deal that brought the Babe to the Yanks from Boston, has not been connected with baseball in recent years. His interest was revived, he said, when he heard that Ruth was looking for a managerial berth and not finding it.

The turn toward Brooklyn came from reports that the club was on the market. Huston and the late Wilbert Robinson, manager of the Dodgers for many years, were close friends.

Pie Gets a Raise.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 30 (AP).—The signing of Manager Harold J. (Pie) Traynor, to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates in the baseball wars of 1935, was announced tonight by William Benswanger, club president.

Traynor was named playing-manager last June, replacing George Gibson. He received a salary boost at the time. Although terms of the new contract were not disclosed, it was reported that Traynor had been given another raise.

Despite the club's poor showing last season, Pie remained a popular figure with the fans. It had been taken for granted that he would be given another chance at the helm of the Buccaneers.

Report Is Denied.

New York, Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Judge Stephen W. McKeever, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, tonight denied published reports that the club might be sold to Col. Tillinghast L'Hommedieu Houston, of Brunswick, Ga., former part-owner of the New York Yankees.

"We are not considering selling the club," Judge McKeever said, "and Col. Houston has not approached us on the subject.

D. C. Engineers Will Vie for Golf Title

Allen and Sultan Among Prominent Entrants; 50 in Field.

AROUND 50 golfers will compete today and tomorrow at Washington Golf and Country club in the annual District Engineer Department tournament. Among those expected to participate are Commissioners George E. Allen and Dan I. Sultan. Capt. Howard Clark, Maj. Paul Hodgson and Eddie Broke, former Middle Atlantic titleholder, will be other prominent District government men who will attempt to win a few prizes.

The tournament will be 18 holes, with low gross and low net prizes as chief awards.

Miss Grace Amory, well-known New York and Florida golfer, shot a 42—45—87 yesterday at Chevy Chase while playing with Dick Lunn, former District champion, and Mrs. Jack Scott, of Congressional. Miss Amory, tall and sturdy, is long off the tee and plays a deadly approach game. Two days ago she scored an 83 at Chevy Chase, an 8 on the seventeenth hole costing her a possible 79. Miss Amory gave Helen Hicks, "businesswoman" golfer, a real battle in a play-off for the medal of a big women's tournament down Florida last winter. She is visiting here for a few days.

Playing with his father, Albert Mackenzie, and Golf Chairman George P. James, Congressional's Roland Mackenzie shot an 83 one-handed yesterday at Columbia, his old hawking grounds. Roland proved that his brilliant shooting with his right hand was not confined to Congressional, as he played the back nine of Columbia in 40 strokes.

C. L. Hall and H. Burroughs, a couple of golfers who can't live without their daily rounds, will meet at 2 p. m. today in the finals of the West Potomac men's championship. Hall entered the final round yesterday by defeating James Estes, 7 and 6. Dr. J. L. Lewis won the second flight by defeating Bill Crown, 2 and 1.

Haywood Newbold, seven handicap player, eliminated R. P. Whiteley, 12 handicap, by 2 up yesterday to enter the finals of the Siamese Cup Tournament at Chevy Chase. He engages the winner of the Page Hufty-Wilson Young match.

Al Houghton, of Kenwood, and Al Treder, of Manor, enriched themselves by some $40 yesterday by winning a challenge match from Walter Cunningham, of Burning Tree, and Leo Walper, driving range pro, 1 up, at Burning Tree. Houghton set the pace with a 36-35—71, 1 under par, for one of the toughest layouts in the Middle Atlantic sector. Cunningham had 76, Treder, 77, and Walper, 78.

Houghton and Treder were 1 up at the turn. They were 2 up and 2 to go, but lost the seventeenth to Cunningham's 4. Just as darkness settled, Houghton plunked in a 35-footer for a half in 4 on the home green to preserve his team's margin.

The Rotary Club will stage another golf tournament tomorrow at Washington Golf and Country Club, with V. Calvert Dickey, the host club player, strongly favored to win the medal prize.

Helen Dettweiler won the spring and fall ringer tournaments at Congressional with scores of 71 and 69. She posted 6 5 3 4 4 4 4 4 3—37, 4 4 3 4 4 4 4 4 3—34—71; 5 4 3 4 4 4 4 4 2—34, 4 4 3 5 4 4 4 4 3—35—69.

Best Team Is Loser.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 30 (Spl.). Showing its best form of the season, the LaSalle Institute football team battled Immaculate Conception High of Connellsville, Pa., on better than even terms for 40 minutes of a 48-minute game at Community Park, but lost by a 7-to-0 score to suffer its fourth straight defeat.

Silver Spring Wants Game.

Episcopal Due Grid Test on Saturday

St. Christopher Eleven, Unbeaten, to Invade Alexandria.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Oct. 30 (Spl.).—Episcopal High School gridders were hard at work today making plans to conquer St. Christophers', of Richmond, whom they encounter at Hoxton Field Saturday afternoon.

Justly pround of his running attack, Coach Cardwell has no worries on that score, but whether the Cherry and Black can stop the famed aerial attack of the Saints is another matter.

The Richmond school is a slight favorite. It is defending prep school title holders of Richmond, and has yet to taste defeat this season. In addition, the line-up is composed of veterans.

Episcopal's hopes will center on the two great backs: Capt. Hoxton and Al Wilson. It is somewhat doubtful whether the flashy Wilson can participate in the entire game due to an old ankle injury.

Players who have played most of the games for the Saints this season are Harris and Bosher, ends; Drury and Ratcliffe, tackles; Carrington and Richardson, guards; Snyder, center, and Knowles, Dinwiddie, Spencer, Beattie and Grinnan, backs.

All teams in the Commercial bowling loop will roll tomorrow night at the Health Center in the fourth week of play.

Manager Gundy Davis of the Fraters announced today that the Richmond Apaches will be met next Sunday afternoon at Baggett's Stadium. The Richmonders have a good team and are expected to push the Arrows for the championship of the Virginia capital.

Shields Signs 7-Year Film Contract

M-G-M Official Declares His Amateur Standing Will Remain.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (AP).—Frank Shields, first ranking American tennis player, today signed a seven-year-movie contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Bill Grady, assistant to the vice president of M.-G.-M., signed the tennis star late this afternoon, culminating negotiations begun at Forest Hills, Long Island, during the 1933 National singles championship.

"In the case of Shields we are buying a personality," Grady said, "and moulding it to suit our convenience.

"In my opinion, Shields is the best prospect that has come along in years and we certainly hope to make a star of him. He will report to our Hollywood studios on November 15.

"His contract does not call for his playing tennis in the pictures so his amateur standing will not be impaired. As a matter of fact, we will not stand in his way if he desires to play in the National championship or other major tournaments."

To Open Soccer Season.

Easton, Md., Oct. 30 (AP).—A battle between Easton and Greensboro is scheduled to open the soccer season here Sunday. The Easton squad, boasting a strong team, recently issued a challenge to all comers.

Terps Grease Wheels for Virginia

Coaches Gloomy Over Team's Cocksure Win Attitude.

MARYLAND'S pessimistic coaches and optimistic football players were back at hard labor yesterday, oiling up the Terrapin touchdown machine for its eleventh annual engagement Saturday with Virginia at College Park.

The coaches' pessimism was inspired, paradoxically, by the cheerful attitude of their charges, who, after decisively whipping Florida last week, regard the Virginia game as merely a warm-up for V. M. I., and V. M. I. as another warm-up for the Indiana contest two weeks hence.

Coach Jack Faber wants confidence, but not too much of it. It is almost traditional in the Maryland-Virginia series that the underdog always wins. This was borne out last season, when the Cavaliers upset their opponents, 6-0.

Faber's most difficult problem at this time, however, appears to be selecting a starting line-up. For the first time in Terrapin football history he started a second team against Florida last week and with gratifying results. Looking to next year, he may use this method of giving some of his sophomores necessary experience.

On paper Maryland is a heavy favorite over its Old Dominion rival. In their last three games the Terps have gained 846 yards from scrimmage, compiling 40 first downs to 18 for the enemy. The kicking, too, has been exceptionally good, an average of 38 yards from the line of scrimmage in three games.

Virginia Concedes Nothing.

Figures look good on the old papyrus but they do not win football games, and Virginia, naturally, concedes nothing to Maryland. The Cavaliers came from behind to win over V. M. I. last week but this week they expect to get out in front and stay there.

Oddly enough it may be a native Marylander, Don Smith, of Stevenson, who leads Virginia into action Saturday. Smith was sent into the V. M. I. game in the final period—his first taste of varsity competition, and performed well enough to warrant consideration for the starting position this week. Punting from behind his own goal line against strong headwinds, the boy got off a boot that soared out to midfield before rolling out of bounds.

Capt. Tommy Johnson saw the V. M. I. game from the sidelines because of injuries, but probably will be ready for duty this game. Johnson, a 200-pound full back, has been a tower of strength in the Virginia back field all season and was its only threat against Navy.

Cavaliers Work Out.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 30 (AP).—Capt. Tommy Johnson was back with the University of Virginia Cavaliers for the first time since the Dartmouth game today when he worked with the squad in preparation for the Maryland game. Coach Gus Tebell held him out of the scrimmage, along with Randy Garnett, Horace Hallett, Leonard Trell and Ken Morton.

Frank Hughes Favorite at Benefit

Turner has announced he would donate a substantial percentage of the gate receipts to the widow of Allen B. Wilson, local newspaper route man victimized by gangsters' gunfire.

Because Johnny Perrini, Buffalo bantamweight, is forced to pull out of his bout with LeRoy Dougan, due to prior booking, Washingtonians will witness a main eventer filling a five-round role when Wesley Martin, stablemate of Frankie Wolfram, steps in as a substitute.

Losing only two bouts in 68 starts and boasting an impressive array of victims, Frattini impressed mightily his last time out, fighting high-ranking Andy Callahan to a rousing draw in an epochal bout.

Miss Claytor, Mrs. DeFarges Share Honors In Ace Tourney; Only 8 of 40 Reach Green

Post Staff Photos.

Top, left—Miss Louise Claytor, of Chevy Chase, whose shot was closest on the thirteenth hole at Chevy Chase. Top, right—Mrs. J. R. DeFarges, of Columbia, winner on the tenth hole. Below—Mrs. Leo Walper, of Kenwood, who scored an 81 in the tournament.

MISS LOUISE CLAYTOR of Chevy Chase and Mrs. J. R. DeFarges of Columbia shared honors in the hole-in-one tournament staged yesterday by the champion Chevy Chase women's first team in compliment to nine other District teams.

Neither came close to holing out. Miss Claytor led the 1-to-10 handicap players on the 161-yard thirteenth hole by knocking her ball 27 feet 6 inches from the cup. Over on the 136-yard tenth Mrs. DeFarges, who has been playing golf something like 27 years, anchored her tee shot 12 feet 9 inches from the pin to win in the class for players with handicaps over 11.

Both employed spoons in an effort to combat the cross wind that carried shot after shot of some 40 players into traps, rough and other hazards.

Only eight players reached the green, and each was awarded a prize.

How They Shot.

Hole 13—Mrs. Harrison Brand, jr., of Chevy Chase, 35 feet 6 inches from the pin; Miss Helen Dettweiler, Congressional, 36 feet 6 inches, and Miss Susan Hacker, Chevy Chase, 43 feet 10 inches.

Hole 10—Mrs. Howard Simons, Manor, 19 feet 5¼ inches; Mrs. R. Carl Mitchell, Beaver Dam, 20 feet 1 inch, and Mrs. Harrison A. Knauss, Chevy Chase, 42 feet 5 inches.

Only one shot was alloted each golfer, and most of them used wood clubs. Mrs. Roland Mackenzie and Mrs. Jack Scott, of Congressional, who ordinarily are good one-shotters, failed to reach the carpet of the thirteenth.

Although her shot on the thirteenth went awry, too, Mrs. Leo Walper, of Kenwood, went out later in the day and shot a brilliant 81 to win first prize in the tournament that followed the hole-in-one event. This score, only a few strokes over women's par, is one of the finest competitive rounds scored by a woman at Chevy Chase this season, being second only to Helen Hicks' great 77 made during a practice round of the international matches.

Mrs. Cameron Holds Record.

Mrs. L. O. Cameron, of Chevy Chase, holds the official women's match play record with a 78 scored in the Siamese Cup tournament a few years ago.

Mrs. Walper had ten pars. She had seven on the second and eighth holes, and 3's on the fourth, ninth and tenth.

Helen Dettweiler shot an 89. Mrs. Landra B. Platt, of Chevy Chase, with 93—11—82, and Mrs. B. C. Hartig, of Manor, with 93—10—83, were the low net winners.

Mrs. Walper's card:

Out—par.....	4	4	4	3	4	4	4	5	3	—35
Mrs. Walper...	4	7	4	3	4	5	5	7	3	—42
In—par.....	3	4	4	3	4	4	4	4	4	—34—69
Mrs. Walper...	3	5	4	5	4	4	5	5	4	—39—81

Results.

Mrs. Leo Walper (Kenwood), 81—4—77; Miss Helen Dettweiler (Congressional), 89—4—85; Mrs. Landra B. Platt (Chevy Chase), 93—11—82; Mrs. B. C. Hartig (Manor), 93—10—83; Mrs. Hume Wrong (Chevy Chase), 94—8—86; Mrs. Roland Mackenzie (Congressional), 93—7—86; Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely (Washington), 105—14—91; Mrs. R. C. Mitchell (Beaver Dam), 95—14—81; Mrs. W. N. Bush (Congressional), 99—14—85; Mrs. H. H. Moffett (Congressional), 106—14—92; Mrs. B. D. Gamble (Manor), 102—16—86; Mrs. Bishop Hill (Chevy Chase), 100—13—87; Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts (Congressional), 100—16—84; Mrs. Howard Simons (Manor), 103—12—91; Mrs. A. E. Dedicke (Army-Navy), 96—7—89; Mrs. Jack Scott (Congressional), 94—4—90.

Michigan Will Invade East Next Year

Plays Columbia and Penn; Chicago Is Off Card for Two Years.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 30 (AP). The University of Michigan, long one of the leading football schools of the Middle West, will engage two Eastern schools in intersectional gridiron games next year, but according to Athletic Director Fielding H. Yost, the 1935 schedule does not indicate that the Maize and Blue is going in for cross-country football competition on a large scale.

"It just happened that way," he explained today after formal announcements were made that Michigan would start football relations with Columbia in New York City, and renew relations with Pennsylvania, the contracts in each case to open a home-and-home series in 1935.

Michigan's football contract with Columbia was made last January after the Lions had beaten Stanford in the Tournament of Roses. The Penn game was a develoment of the spring. The Michigan 1935 card in the Big Ten will include Wisconsin, Illinois, Minnesota, Ohio State and Indiana, while 1936 will bring Minnesota, Illinois, Ohio State, Indiana and Northwestern. Chicago is off the card for at least two years. Michigan State is a fixed season opener.

Carnera and Uzcudun Will Fight on Dec. 16

Gophers Roll Vast Yardage In Games

Minnesota Piles Up 6,25 Yards Each Try From Scrimmage.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 30 (AP).—Minnesota's "thundering herd," slashing along toward Big Ten and National honors with its famous powerhouse attack, has rolled up vast yardage in games to date, with the first seven ball toters averaging 6.25 yards each try from scrimmage.

Scores 137 Points.

The Gophers scored a total of 137 points, against 31 for the opposition, taking North Dakota State, 56 to 12; Nebraska, 20 to 0; Pittsburgh, 13 to 7, and Iowa, 48 to 12.

Minnesota's powerful offensive, behind blocking, which even the doleful Coach Bernie Bierman admits is "pretty good," has smashed through for a total of 1,561 yards from scrimmage, to the combined opponents' 566.

Of the total, the Gophers amassed 1,464 yards by rushing and 98 by passes, while the opponents gained 328 yards by rushing and 238 by passing. The Bierman horde tossed in 72 first downs, to 25 for the opposition.

"By a Scant Margin."

Bierman is characteristically holding back any optimistic statements about the Minnesota-Michigan game here Saturday, although he did whisper, "Minnesota should win by a scant margin."

Bierman, in talking over the Gophers' 48-to-12 victory over Iowa, told the players, "You know Iowa came back in the third quarter and clearly outplayed Minnesota for that period."

As far as discussing Minnesota's chances for the "National title," Bernie merely comments, "Well, we will talk that over the night of November 24."

Alexandria Preps For Friday Fray

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 30 (Spl.).—Alexandria High School ran through a light drill today with snap and zest of a championship team. They hope to be just that after Friday, when they encounter the strong Washington-Lee High School. Coach Givens has divided his team and a scrimmage is scheduled for tomorrow. Thursday the Twins will taper off with a light signal drill.

Both schools have been pointing to Friday's titular tilt ever since the season began. They are rivals of long standing. Officials of the Arlington County school have made plans for the handling of a capacity crowd in their new athletic stadium.

Redbirds Try New Plays In Secret

Varsity Then Opposes Frosh in Lengthy Scrimmage.

SECRET practice was ordered yesterday for Catholic U.'s gridmen as the team got down to hard work for Saturday's important game with Western Maryland at Brookland. Everybody, including newspapermen, was barred from the stadium as Coach Dutch Bergman sent the Redbirds through their paces.

Bergman handed out new plays which will be used on the Green Terrors, and the earlier part of practice was devoted to trying them out. Later the varsity was sent against the freshmen, who used W. M. plays, in a lengthy scrimmage.

The C. U. board of strategy is working over-time, burning an unusually large number of ergs to outwit the Terrors, but Dick Harlow, the cagy Westminster coach, is letting no grass grow under his feet. Harlow regards Saturday's game as the most important on his schedule and is leaving no stone unturned to record it on the right side of the ledger.

Fine Egg Collection.

Harlow, incidentally, not only ranks well upon the coaching honor role, but is an ornithologist of first water. His collection of birds' eggs is the third most valuable in the country. His collection of football players is not rated as well, but they seem to be doing well enough by themselves—undefeated and unscored on. A scoreless tie with Villanova is the only blemish on their record.

Harlow took up coaching as a career immediately after graduating from Penn State, where he was All-American tackle on State's undefeated 1911 combination. He established a record at State which has not since been equalled, blocking 17 punts in as many games. The opposition included Cornell, Penn, Navy, Colgate and Pittsburgh. He coached at his alma mater four years before transferring to Colgate where he developed Eddie Tryon, one of the game's greatest half backs.

Beat Roper's Best.

With Tryon flashing brilliantly across the football horizon, Colgate humbled Bill Roper's best team, 20-to-0, in 1916. Colgate was one of the ruling powers in Eastern football throughout Harlow's regime.

In nine years at Western Maryland Harlow's record is 56 victories, seven ties and 13 defeats. His teams amassed 1,657 points against 356 for the opposition, including four games this year. From the middle of 1928 until the final game of 1930, Western Maryland was undefeated—rated one of the East's greatest elevens.

In Shepherd Harlow believes he has a back who equals Tryon in everything but kicking. The Terror ace is not much of a hand at punting, but he atones for this by doing all other things as well as any coach could ask.

Harlow's problem at the moment is to get a few regulars back in shape for Saturday. Jack McNally, quarterback; Andy Gorski, end; Bernie Kaplan, guard, and Bomber Schwieker, full back, are nursing injuries.

Hackett Was First Plebe on Army Team in '00

WHEN Army's football team tandemed into one of its powerful wedge plays 34 years ago there was an "outsider" handling one of the half back positions, according to the Associated Press.

HACKETT

He was a lowly plebe, Horatio B. Hackett, the first to make the West Point varsity in the days when athletes could play four seasons.

"I was a stranger on that club. When I addressed the captain I put a 'mister' in front of his name and a respectful 'sir' after it," Hackett recalls. "The upper classmen had nothing to do with us lowly plebes. I never spoke to a fellow player unless spoken to."

Today, from his office in the Interior Building here, Col. Hackett supervises the expenditure of $150,000,000 as director of the housing division of PWA. He is a factor in the business world but no less a leader in the sports field.

For 31 years he has spent the fall Saturday afternoons officiating football games. He has "worked" games in every part of America and perhaps is the oldest referee in the country in point of service.

Every week-end he "closes shop" and hurries away to officiate at some big gridiron spectacle. He refereed the recent game in which Michigan State whipped Michigan for the first time in years and also the battle that saw the fall of Southern California's Trojans before the Panthers of Pitt. And, although only 54 years old, he officiated in games years ago when Coach Charles Bachman, of Michigan State and Howard Jones, of Troy, were players.

Next Saturday this member of the National Football Rules Committee serves as field judge in the Notre Dame-Pittsburgh game. Persons uninitiated into Hackett's habits might be alarmed at seeing him rushing pell-mell over the Interior Building—it's his method of exercise.

"I run up and down the four flights of stairs and all through the corridors," Hacket explains. "I'm so tied down, I don't have time for midweek exercise any more and I find racing upstairs is a good way to keep in trim for my football duties."

As an Army cadet Hackett played in the back field along with the great Charles Daly, All-American for three successive years, and against Pudge Heffinger, Yale's famous guard, and as an official he saw Charles Brickley's great kicking for Harvard and Walter Eckersall's all-around brilliance for Chicago.

He doesn't think the game has changed much since his playing days, except for the use of the forward pass.

"We used the lateral pass back in my time," he said. "Another major difference today is the greater knowledge the coaches have of the game. They have studied it more thoroughly, and have devised ways of obtaining more men in the interference.

"Individual instruction for players and lighter and faster athletes also have pepped the game up some."

Stocks Emerge From Dullness With Advances

Stocks moved at a snail's pace, but, under the leadership of scattered merchandising issues and other specialties managed to emerge with modest advances in the majority.

A sharp rally of more than 2 cents in the British pound attracted attention to the foreign exchange marts. At the same time, the dollar was moderately firmer against leading European gold currencies. The recovery of sterling was attributed partly to the movement of continental funds to London. This apparently represented fresh doubts regarding the ability of some of the gold standard countries to hang on to the metallic standard.

Equity Trading Is Dull.

The dullness of equity trading was pronounced throughout the featureless session. The ticket tape was silent for minutes at a time.

Stock transfers for the day totaled 433,360 shares. This was a trifle larger than yesterday's aggregate, which was the smallest in a month. The Standard Statistics average for 90 selected issues advanced two-tenths of a point, to 69.8.

Many operators hugged the sidelines pending the third quarter report of the United States Steel Corporation which appeared after the close of the market. While the directors of "big steel" fulfilled general expectations by declaring a 50-cent dividend on the $7 cumulative preferred stock, the quarterly statement disclosed a loss, after operating expenses, of $9,826,767 and a deficit of $11,628,172 after payment of the preferred dividend. This was the largest deficit since the first quarter of last year.

Exchange Seats Drop.

Four Stock Exchange memberships changed hands during the day, the prices beginning at $81,000 and ending at $70,000. The latter was $17,000 under the last previous sale yesterday and was the lowest since 1932. Whether the sharp decline in the price of membership was due to the publication yesterday of the Stock Exchange's balance sheet, showing a loss in operations, or to discouragement over the dwindling volume of trading in shares was a matter of argument.

While most stocks held to a slim groove during the colorless session, several got up to new highs for the year. Among these were Universal Leaf Tobacco, up 2¾ points; the McCrory Stores issues, up fractionally to 2, and American Agricultural Chemical and Monsanto Chemical, up about 1 each.

Pennick & Ford jumped nearly 6 points, Bayuk Cigar advanced 2 and gainers of around a point included California Packing, U. S. Steel preferred, Cerro de Pasco, Standard Oil of California and McIntyre Porcupine. At the same time, Homestake Mining dropped 5, Hazel-Atlas Glass was off 2, and Bethlehem Steel preferred eased ⅛ to a new 1933 low. Standard Brands lost nearly a point when its quarterly earnings statement showed a decline. Caterpillar Tractor advanced more than a point following announcement of increased earnings in the third quarter.

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—The sugar melt of 13 United States refiners from January 1 to October 20 totaled 2,995,000 long tons, against 3,190,000 in the like 1933 period. Deliveries for the same period were 2,860,000 tons, against 2,995,000 a year ago.

The plan also involved the liquidation of Continental Tobacco Co. and the sale of the manufacturing facilities to Philip Morris & Co., Ltd.

High Hopes Expressed That Export Prospects Will Be Clarified at Convention of National Foreign Trade Council.

New York, Oct. 30.—Business men interested in foreign trade express high hopes that our export prospects will be clarified at the convention of the National Foreign Trade Council, which opens here tomorrow.

Perhaps never before in all the spectacular history of our foreign commerce, including the Colonial period, has the expansion of American foreign trade with a large part of the world faced so many hampering obstacles as at present. High tariffs, rigid import quota limitations, foreign exchange restrictions and special foreign exchange agreements prevent foreign customers from buying our goods freely in most countries of the world.

Delegates at the annual meeting of the National Foreign Trade Council are likely to discuss the lifting or modification of foreign exchange restrictions by foreign countries more than any other topic.

The ostensible purpose of the foreign exchange restrictions, as imposed by so many governments in recent years, is the protection of their currencies from severe depreciation in the foreign exchange markets. In actual effect, however, these restrictions are used for other purposes. Control over allocation of available foreign exchange permits government authorities to decide not only the total quantity of goods imported from abroad, but also the countries of origin. In this manner, many foreign governments are now in position to direct the foreign trade of their nationals in accordance with their economic and even political policies. As a rule, they seek to allocate foreign exchange for imports as far as possible from those countries which are substantial buyers in their own markets.

Principle Is Embodied In Several Agreements.

This principle was embodied in a number of foreign exchange agreements, such as the Roca-Runciman pact between Great Britain and the Argentine. In this agreement, the Argentine government agreed to utilize the proceeds derived from exports of Argentine products to Great Britain for the purchase of goods in the latter country. The only major exception was sums allocated for the payment of charges on the external public debt of the Argentine, which could be disbursed regardless of the countries where such payments were due.

American exporters have suffered particularly severely from such foreign exchange restrictions and special agreements, since our trade balance is favorable with most countries of the world. Dollar exchange has been made difficult to obtain thereby, as foreign countries with restrictions in force seek to divert their purchasing to countries which are larger buyers in their own markets.

The crux of the American foreign trade problem at this time is thus the lack of dollar exchange abroad. The National Foreign Trade Council is seeking to remedy this situation.

An increase in our imports undoubtedly would do this. It is obvious, however, that under prevailing conditions a material increase in imports would be fought vigorously by both manufacturers and organized labor. Furthermore, a depression period is anything but an opportune time in which to make basic changes in foreign trade policy which increase competition in a domestic market already shrunken by economic maladjustments. Current hearings before the President's committee on reciprocity information, in connection with proposed reciprocal trade pacts, have emphasized the difficulties which hamper immediate basic changes in our foreign trade policies.

In the years prior to 1931, any shortage of dollar exchange in other countries was met by the large outflow of capital from the United States caused by our heavy lending abroad. During the past few years, however, the United States has not only ceased to export capital, but there has actually been a substantial influx of foreign funds into this country. Imports of $920,000,000 in gold during the first half of 1934 reflected such an inflow of foreign capital, as well as the repatriation of American funds previously sent abroad. The Department of Commerce estimates that sales of American securities to foreign countries during this six months' period exceeded purchases of foreign issues by investors in this country to the extent of $225,000,000, thereby further diminishing the amount of dollar exchange at the disposal of foreign nations.

Purchasers Must Be Afforded Time to Pay.

If American exports are to be increased, or even maintained at their present modest level, importers abroad must be afforded reasonable opportunity to pay for their purchases. Thus far, efforts of our Government to solve this problem through the establishment of export-import banks to make longer term credits available to foreign buyers of our goods have been without material result, although such attempts continue.

Similarly, purchases of silver abroad to offset our favorable merchandise trade balance, represent but a puerile and temporary solution.

Only when our balance of international payments has been properly adjusted will a lasting revival in our export trade become possible. Under present conditions, and until imports by this country can be materially expanded, the one feasible method of attaining this objective is a resumption of the export of capital. This need not take the form of public flotation of foreign bonds, which would be impractical now on any large scale. It is more likely to occur through direct investment in plants and facilities by American corporations operating abroad and through purchase by Americans of securities already outstanding in other countries.

Bonds Yield One-Tenth in Larger Sales

Federals Turn Easier as Trading Volume Rises to $9,808,000.

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—The bond market pursued an irregular course today with more losses than gains in corporate loans and an easy tone in United States Governments.

Transfers aggregated $9,808,000, par value, compared with $7,745,000 on Monday. The Government turnover was $3,190,000 against $1,850,000 the day before.

Heavy Demand Develops.

An unusually heavy demand developed for Home Owners Loan 4s, the bonds that have just lost the privilege of being converted into the fully guaranteed 3s, and the issue closed eight-thirty-seconds of a point higher at 98.20.

All of the Treasuries, Liberties and Federal Farm Mortgage bonds, however, were down throughout the day and closed two thirty-seconds to eight thirty-seconds lower.

Trading was so light in corporate loans that prices followed no definite trend. American Smelting 5s yielded ¼ to 105, General Petroleum 5s were ½ lower at 105 and Union Pacific 4s declined ¼ to 97¼. Other issues showing modest declines included obligations of American Telephone, Bethlehem Steel, Central Pacific, Consolidated Gas, Kelly-Springfield, National Dairy, Pacific Telephone, Southern Pacific, Studebaker and Western Union.

On Advancing List.

Baltimore & Ohio refunding 5s advanced 1 point to 71½, St. Paul 4s were ¾ higher at 51 and Rio Grande Western first 4s were 2 points up at 82.

Among other issues selling slightly higher were obligations of Union Oil of California, Pere Marquette, Purity Bakeries, Montana Power, New York Railways, Great Northern, Delaware & Hudson, Cincinnati Union Terminal, Baldwin Locomotive and Santa Fe.

The foreign section was quiet. There was a rise of 4¼ points in El Salvador 8s (certificates) to 55, and German, French and Italian issues were generally steady. The City of Milan 6½s closed 1⅛ higher at 83⅞.

Dried Fruits Steady.

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—Dried fruits steady, unchanged

Curb Records Slight Gains; Trading Dull

Some Specialties Improve; Sales Volume Rises to 97,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—Some improvement in tone was displayed by the Curb Market today, but dullness continued and price changes, among active issues, were negligible. A few thinly traded specialties advanced sharply.

After a steady opening the list worked slightly uward. Quiet backing and filling movements prevailed during the rest of the session. A few scattered soft spots developed.

Issues of Great Atlantic & Pacific recovered around 2 points from their sharp drop yesterday. Singer Manufacturing spurted 6 points in a small transfer. Ruberoid was up 3. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore dipped 3¼ points, but utilities generally were steady, including American Gas & Electric and Electric Bond & Share.

Gossip of New York Markets

By G. A. Phillips.

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—Wall street is considerably cheered by indications that when all crops are finally harvested the farmer will "dig in" for the winter with a much fatter pocketbook than last year.

In sharp contrast to conditions prevailing in industry, where earnings statements and labor disorders reflect the stress and strain of troubled times, farm income in the first nine months was reported by the Bureau of Agriculture Economics to have totaled $4,313,000,000, compared with $3,479,000,000 in that period last year, an increase of more than $750,000,000.

In September alone, cash income from all sources was reported by the bureau to have totaled $862,000,000, an increase of $81,000,000 over August and $108,000,000 over September, 1933, although in order to make this showing there were exceptionally heavy sales of cattle from the drought areas, in addition to cattle sold to the Government and large sales of corn.

This improvement, trade observers find, has been reflected in a substantial increase in retail and wholesale business, better collections and stronger credit conditions in the major agricultural areas.

One of the most reliable business indexes — bank clearings — have shown consistent increases in farm centers for several months, and in the past week clearings in such cities as Omaha, Kansas City, Atlanta, New Orleans and Minneapolis, were 8 to 44 per cent higher than they were a year ago.

Standard Statistics Co estimates total farm income in 1934 will aggregate $8,019,000,000, an increase of $1,763,000,000, or 28.3 per cent over the total in 1933, when it was estimated at $6,256,000,000.

While the farmer's financial condition has improved greatly this year, his living costs have also expanded. For example, the Standard Statistics index of prices paid for commodities bought for farm consumption averaged 109 in 1933, compared with 122 thus far this year, a gain of 12 per cent. Farm wages and prices of commodities bought for production of crops have advanced around 10 per cent from last year.

Such increases, however, have been at least partially offset by a reduction in the farmer's fixed debt, reflecting lower interest payments, reduced taxes and the farm mortgage relief program sponsored by the Federal Government.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Although business on the stock exchange was quiet today, British funds continued to break into new high record grounds owing to influential support. Kaffirs and German bonds hardened on repurchases and industrials were also cheerful. Other sections were subdued and inclined to ease. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Continuation of month-end liquidation together with the political uncertainty caused prices on the bourse to sag today. Rubber and metal issues declined, while gold mines were the only shares that showed strength. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—Owing to the extremely small trade, prices on the boerse were unsettled today. Some business, however, developed later and prices closed slightly improved.

Wheat Values Rise Slightly In Mixed Sales

Cotton Is Irregular as Market Closes With Minor Gains.

Chicago, Oct. 30 (AP).—Erratic fluctuations in wheat prices today characterized the grain market, disclosing a general hesitancy, attributed largely to uncertainty as to the world situation. British enthusiasm was dampened by weakness in foreign markets, a private report that rust damage in Argentina so far has been negligible and by speculation as to proposed Government control of Canadian trading.

Short covering was partly responsible for a net gain of about a cent in wheat, while an advance in premiums for cash corn and an assertion that domestic yields in that grain may be even lower than indicated strengthened the corn market.

At the close wheat was ⅜ cent lower to 1⅛ cent higher compared with yesterday's finish, May, 95@95¼. July contracts were the only deliveries to show a net loss for the day. Corn gained ¾ to 1⅜, May closing at 76¾@76⅞. Provisions also were slightly higher.

Cotton Market

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—Cotton prices moved irregularly during today's trading, early advances being followed by reactions under some Southern selling and liquidation. March contracts, after advancing to 12.31, broke to 12.24 in late trading and closed at 12.26. The general market closed steady, et unchanged to 2 points higher on all months except October, which was relatively weak and showed a net loss of 13 points.

The opening was barely steady at an advance of 1 to 4 points, being restricted by overnight selling and scattering liquidation. The offerings were quite readily taken by the trade, and prices steadied, making net gains of about 2 to 6 points on active positions. The demand then tapered off and the market sagged during the afternoon.

Exports today 47,615, making 1,305,471 so far this season. Port receipts, 47,486. U. S. port stocks, 3,158,834.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was steady today, but prices moved within narrow limits with the close 1 to 3 points net higher. Sales were 55 contracts. Firmness of crude oil brought about a little buying of March and May by refining interests, while the steadiness of other commodities was also a sustaining influence. Bleachable spot, nominal; December closed 8.43, January 8.44, March 8.58, May 8.73.

World's Use Of U. S. Cotton Is Decreased

Reduction in September Is Due to Strike in Textile Industry.

New York, Oct. 30.—World consumption of American cotton declined during September, according to a report issued by the New York Cotton Exchange Service, but the decline was largely due to the strike in the domestic textile industry. Consumption was lower both in the United States and abroad, contrary to the usual seasonal tendency for consumption to increase from August to September. The world stock of American cotton on September 30 was considerably smaller than on the corresponding date in recent years.

"World mills used 848,000 bales of the American staple in September, as compared with 980,000 in August, 1,195,000 in September last year, and 1,168,000 two years ago.

"World consumption declined 13.5 per cent from August to September, whereas on an average in the past nine years, it increased 5.1 per cent, but it is probable that September consumption would have registered an increase this year if the strike had not occurred. During August and September, the first two months of the current cotton season, consumption aggregated 1,828,000 bales as compared with 2,457,000 in the corresponding months last season, and 2,235,000 two seasons ago.

"Consumption of American cotton in the United States declined from 410,000 bales in August to 290,000 bales in September, a decrease of 29.3 per cent, comparing with an average increase from August to September in the past nine years of 2.9 per cent. Abroad, spinners used 558.000 bales of the American staple in September as compared wiht 570,000 bales in August, or 2.1 per cent less, whereas, on an average in the past nine years, they have used 6.8 per cent more in September than in August. Accordingly, consumption of American cotton registered a decrease during September, both in the United States and in foreign countries, contrary to the usual seasonal tendency to increase.

Exchange Wooing Its Lost Prestige

Whitney Launches Drive to 'Sell' the Market.

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange has entered upon a comprehensive campaign to "sell" the exchange to the American public.

This was revealed today with the release for publication of a letter by Richard Whitney, president of the organization, to all members, partners, branch office managers and correspondents, asking their cooperation in a movement to win back for the exchange some of the prestige lost in the aftermath of the 1929 stock market collapse.

Charging that the last two or three years had witnessed the circulation and acceptance of much misinformation and misrepresentation regarding the history, practices and economic functions of the exchange, Whitney asserted there was "only one cure for such a condition and that is the Nation-wide dissemination of facts and information—facts and information obviously accurate."

Walt Mason Himself

The Fan.

All honor to the noble man who thought out the electric fan, and placed that triumph on the mart, to soothe the aching human heart. Where he is planted I don't know, but to his grave I'd like to go and leave a bunch of lilies there, or else a wreath of roses fair. I'd like to place a monument above that great and gifted gent, for he has done as much, I vow, as any mortal living now to soothe distress and banish care and take the edge off black despair. How pleasant, on a red-hot day, to see the little fan in play; it kicks up quite a rustling breeze, a zephyr that is bound to please, that blows your whiskers to one side, and cools your red and sweating hide, and gives you sweet relief and rest, and dreams of Araby the blest. Outdoors the stagnant air is hot, and people wish they might be shot, and birdlets wilt that once were spry, and little dogs curl up and die, and horses swoon upon the street, poor victims of the brutal heat. But you, in that machine-made breeze, are basking gently at your ease. In olden times the palm leaf fan was thought a boon to baking man; he had to swing it to and fro, as fast as he could make it go, and this afforded some relief, but when he rested there was grief. He'd pause to wipe away the sweat, and felt some ten times hotter yet. The women then had lovely fans, constructed on artistic plans, but it was labor, I must say, to swing them on a summer day. The modern fan, that briskly whirls, makes life a snap for boys and girls.

APPLE MARY — By Martha Orr

GRAN'MA, PLEASE TELL ME A STORY — ONE ABOUT WHEN WE WERE RICH —
I'VE TOLD IT ALL SO MANY TIMES, DENNIE, I'D THINK YOU'D GET TIRED OF HEARING IT. BUT I'LL TELL IT AGAIN
WHILE THE DREARINESS OF THE SHABBY ROOM FADES AWAY INTO THE SHADOWS, APPLE MARY RECALLS THE GLAMOR OF A HAPPIER PAST —
I'VE TOLD YOU ABOUT THE LOVELY BIG HOUSE, DENNIE, AND THE GARDENS, AND TREES! MY, YOU'VE NEVER SEEN SUCH TREES! WE HAD SERVANTS, TOO —
YOU WERE JUST A TINY BABY — AND WE WERE ALL SO HAPPY TOGETHER — UNTIL TH' ACCIDENT — THEN EVERYTHING WAS GONE!
AT LEAST, THAT'S WHAT TH' LAWYER SAID, BUT IT SEEMS MIGHTY QUEER, SUCH A BIG ESTATE — DISAPPEARING THAT WAY, AND NOW WE HAVE NOTHING!
YOU'VE GOT ME, GRAN'MA, AN' WHEN I GET BIG I'LL TAKE CARE OF YOU.

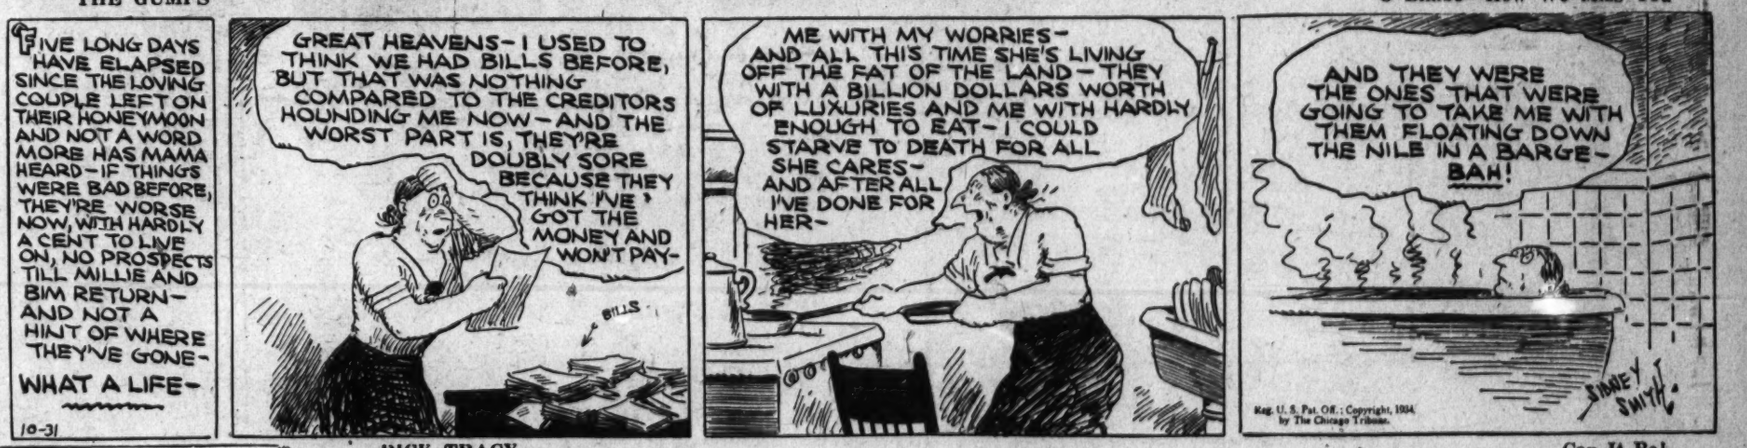
THE GUMPS — O Bimbo—How We Miss You

DICK TRACY — Can It Be!



FIVE LONG DAYS HAVE ELAPSED SINCE THE LOVING COUPLE LEFT ON THEIR HONEYMOON AND NOT A WORD MORE HAS MAMA HEARD — IF THINGS WERE BAD BEFORE, THEY'RE WORSE NOW, WITH HARDLY A CENT TO LIVE ON, NO PROSPECTS TILL MILLIE AND BIM RETURN — AND NOT A HINT OF WHERE THEY'VE GONE — WHAT A LIFE —
GREAT HEAVENS — I USED TO THINK WE HAD BILLS BEFORE, BUT THAT WAS NOTHING COMPARED TO THE CREDITORS HOUNDING ME NOW — AND THE WORST PART IS, THEY'RE DOUBLY SORE BECAUSE THEY THINK I'VE GOT THE MONEY AND WON'T PAY — BILLS
ME WITH MY WORRIES — AND ALL THIS TIME SHE'S LIVING OFF THE FAT OF THE LAND — THEY WITH A BILLION DOLLARS WORTH OF LUXURIES AND ME WITH HARDLY ENOUGH TO EAT — I COULD STARVE TO DEATH FOR ALL SHE CARES — AND AFTER ALL I'VE DONE FOR HER —
AND THEY WERE THE ONES THAT WERE GOING TO TAKE ME WITH THEM FLOATING DOWN THE NILE IN A BARGE — BAH!

WHAT'S THE TIE-UP WITH "DOC"?
DID YOU EVER THINK "DOC" HUMP MIGHT HAVE SOME WEIRD REVENGE SCHEME IN MIND? SOMETHING INVOLVING EXPERIMENTATION ON DOGS — OR HUMANS — OR BOTH?
